OFFICERS TRAVELLING IN FOREIGN STATES.—The following General Order by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India is published in the Calcutta Official Gazette:—Headquarters, Simla, Aug. 26, 1878. Under instructions from Government (Mily. Dept. letter No. 436 S, dated Aug. 13, 1878) the Commander-in-Chief draws the attention of officers travelling in foreign States to the following decision in a case where officers, while in foreign territory, responded to a call from the officials of such State in aid of the local police, as if they were still under British legislation and therefore required to act under Sec. 91 of the Criminal Procedure Code:—Extracts, paras 3 and 4 of Foreign Department letter No. 1595 G. of June 15, 1878:—"H.E. the Governor-General in Council observes, that ——— acted upon the belief that they were bound when called upon to assist the police of the State in taking these men, who were robbers and murderers, and in using any means necessary to overcome their armed resistance. This belief would be fully justified by the law of British India, and is, indeed, a reasonable principle of action anywhere. In ——— the administration of the State is under a British officer, so that there was the less need for hesitation about complying with the summons of the police, who might have been supposed to work under more regular orders than in other native States. H.E. the Viceroy therefore considers, upon a full review of the facts narrated, that the two officers could hardly have refused the assistance they gave, and that they deserve credit for their efforts to spare the lives of the dacoits. H.E. the Governor-General in Council desires me, nevertheless, to point out that Englishmen who are travelling in native States, and who may have little or no experience of the country, or of its condition, must exercise great caution and discretion before they take part in any kind of fray or collision among the people, involving the use of arms and the risk of life. Such affairs are, unfortunately, still not uncommon in the wilder parts of foreign territory; while it is not always so easy, as it was in the present case, to make sure that appeals for lawful aid are authentic and justifiable. It is obvious that serious responsibility might be incurred, especially by officers in the service of the Government, through any error of judgment or mistake of facts."

O'Neill, of the same battery, the said Acting Bombardier P. O'Neill being his superior officer, and being in the execution of his office. FINDING.—The court is of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of the charges. SENTENCE.—The court sentences the prisoner to penal servitude for the term of five years. Sitapur, Sept. 6, 1878. W. J. Gray, Col., President. APPROVED AND CONFIRMED.—But I commute the penal servitude awarded to imprisonment with hard labour for a period of two years. Simla, Sept. 20, 1878. Fred. P. Haines, Gen. ## CEYLON.

NATIVE CULTIVATION.—A native gentleman, who has recently travelled through much of the flooded districts in the low country of the Western Provinces, states that the amount of distress amongst the villagers is very great, and as time goes on cannot fail to become more severe. Not only have the Yala and Maha sowings been entirely lost, but all garden crops have been destroyed by the long prevalence of wet. It is estimated that in the Korales, about the immediate vicinity of Colombo, there have been lost 48,000 bushels of paddy sown on the ground, and that the entire loss in the flooded districts of seed sown, not crops, cannot be less than 120,000 bushels, a serious amount indeed. How much more suffering will be endured before flood works can be executed it is fearful to contemplate.—Ceylon Times.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—In pursuance of Her Majesty's command, His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to direct that Letters Patent be issued under the Colonial Seal of the Island, appointing the Honourable John Douglas, C.M.G., to be Colonial Secretary of the Island of Ceylon. His Excellency the Governor has also been pleased to appoint the Hon. John Douglas, C.M.G., to be President of the Board of Civil Service Examiners.—Gazette.

His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint Commander G. H. R. Willis, R.N., to be a justice of the peace for the district of Avisawella. Leave of absence for one month.

THE QUEEN'S ADVOCATE'S DEPARTMENT.—We understand that Mr. Cayley contemplates a visit to Europe in January of next year; his duties will be taken up temporarily by Mr. Ferdinands, Mr. Owen Morgan acting as Deputy Queen's Advocate.

INCREASE OF INSANITY.—The report on Civil Hospitals for the past year shows a great increase in the number of inmates of the Lunatic Asylum, which contained on 31st December 273 patients, the admissions during the year being 128, against 96 in 1876, 72 in 1875, and 56 in 1874. The Inspector-General attributes this increase to the increased expense of living during the past year, which compelled the poorer classes to place their insane relations in the asylum, "often in such a state of debility and at a period of the disease when cure was impossible."

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—At the meeting held on the 25th ult., when Mr. Leechman, the newly-elected member for the Colombo Chamber of Commerce, took his seat, three new bills were introduced—one to reconcile certain shipping laws in India with those of Ceylon; another for the safe storage of petroleum and other dangerous oils; and a third to amend the law relating to timber grown on Crown lands. The address in reply to the Governor's speech states that, "With reference to the traffic on the new railways, the Council concur with your Excellency in thinking that leaf-disease will have no permanently bad effect on the coffee enterprise."

PEARL FISHERY.—The annual report of the Inspector of Pearl Banks concludes by briefly recapitulating the prospects of future fisheries, which are very good. First, a probable fishery in March, 1879, of three-and-a-half million oysters from the new bank to west of Cheval, which might be called the "Koddapako-Paar," and of one and-a-half million oysters from the Jokenpitty-Paar off Chilow; in all four and-a-half million oysters. A sample to be lifted from these beds in November next. Secondly, a fishery in March, 1881, from a bed on the west and north-west Cheval at present estimated to contain twenty-one millions of oysters. Thirdly, a fishery in March, 1882, from the bed of young oysters now estimated at nine months old, on the south Cheval.

THE SEASON'S SHIPMENTS.—We are now so close upon the close of our commercial year (September 30th), that a tolerably correct estimate may be made of the season's shipments. Of coffee there has been exported cwts. 609,000, to which, if we add that on board the Pleiades, say cwts. 1,800, cwts. 2,000 to go by P. & O. steamer to Trieste via Bombay, and cwts. 6,000 to go in the Eldorado in all this month we have a total of cwts. 618,800 as our exports for the season.—Ceylon Times.

NATIVE FORGERS.—It is announced that fifteen members of the native gang of forgers who placed a number of Oriental Bank notes in circulation have been arrested by the Galle police and the plates seized. Among the accused are two Buddhist priests.—Times.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS.—The Times reports at date Sept. 28th, the weather continues fair, and a change for the better has taken place up country. From Uva the accounts are conflicting; the long-continued damp cold weather has sent incipient blossoms into wood, but on all low-lying estates there is a very fair show of blossom. In Rakwana crops are coming in fast, but leaf disease is troubling some properties. Scarcely any parchment coffee has yet come into Colombo, and we must regard the coming crop as late.

FORTIFICATIONS.—A Ceylon correspondent writes to us:—Lieutenant-General Street, C.B., commanding the troops in Ceylon, accompanied by his A.D.C., Captain Mathews, and also by Colonel Warren, R.E., Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, R.A., and Lieutenant-Colonel Clarke, 57th Foot, made the tour round the island in August last, for the purpose of inspecting the military posts of Trincomalee and Galle; at both these stations, as also at Colombo, very extensive new fortifications are in course of erection under the supervision of Colonel Warren, R.E. A sum exceeding £20,000 has been authorised to be expended under the votes for works, in order to place the colony in a proper state of defence. It is acknowledged by all that this authority has not arrived a day too soon, but, having been received, the greatest activity is being displayed in carrying out the works. Those at Colombo are under Colonel Warren's immediate care at present, those at Trincomalee under the charge of Lieutenant Mason, R.E., and those at Galle under the charge of Lieutenant Roberts, R.A., who has been appointed acting engineer officer, in the absence of any officer of the Royal Engineers. This young officer, who only left the Royal Military Academy in July last year, is thereby placed in a post of heavy responsibility, for which, however, he is proving himself fully qualified. The inspection by Lieutenant-General Street was in every respect satisfactory; it is probably the last which he will make, as it is understood that he will proceed to England at the end of the year on the completion of his term of staff service.—Broad Arrow.

HOME NEWS.

DISASTROUS VOYAGE OF AN INDIAMAN.—The large iron ship Eblana, of Liverpool, 1,351 tons register, commanded by Captain Liver, left Liverpool for Madras on Thursday, October 3rd, and experienced bad weather until reaching the Smalls Lights, the wind being from south and south-west, and it got worse from that time. On Sunday there was a heavy gale from the southward, which, however, moderated towards Monday, when the weather became a little finer. On Tuesday it commenced to blow again from the south-south-west, increasing to a heavy gale of hurricane violence, and became still worse on Wednesday, with mountainous seas. At 8 p.m. on that day the wind went to west-north-west, and on Thursday, at 2 a.m., when in latitude 48.52 N., longitude 10.33 W., a tremendous sea struck the vessel, throwing her over on her side, shifting her cargo, washing away the lifeboat, and smashing the bulwarks. Towards morning the main and mizen masts were cut away, and the vessel was quite over on her side and settling down fast. At about six o'clock in the morning the barque Decapolis, of London, Capt. Almond, from Adelaide for London, hove in sight, and signals of distress were made to her. She bore down and stood by them for about fourteen hours until all the crew were rescued. When she first approached the Eblana the latter's boats were launched, but stove in by the sea, one of the crew being badly injured. A boat with six men was then sent from the Decapolis, and she succeeded in rescuing six of the Eblana's men. There was a great gale on and tremendous seas, and it was impossible to get the boat close to the ship, and a communication was made between them by life buoys and life lines. All the crew were saved by this means, by being hauled through the water to the boat. On returning to the Decapolis with these men the boat was stove in and became useless, and the mate of the barque, who was in charge, was hurt in the arm and shoulder. A second boat was then sent, and in five trips rescued twenty-two men. This service was attended with considerable difficulty and danger, and the Eblana's crew speak well of the gallantry of the others, especially of that of the carpenter of the barque, named David Stephen, of Stepney, who, with three hands, had charge of the boat on four successive trips, and George Bourne, an apprentice, who went every time, first in the boat that was stove, and afterwards in the second boat. At about two o'clock, when being taken off, a French fishing brig, the Blanche, of Nantes, hove in sight, and sailed several times round the distressed vessel, promising to render assistance. A line was floated with a life buoy to her, and it was made fast, but it soon parted, and the brig then left. There were two boats visible, a large one on the deck and a small one on the stern, and she had a complement of about 150 fishermen on board. The unfortunate men lost all their clothes and effects, and several are hurt. The captain, officers, and crew of the Decapolis behaved very kindly towards them during the two days they were aboard her, and gave them various articles of clothing. When that vessel, however, arrived off the Lizard on Saturday night they were transferred to a Falmouth pilot cutter, which landed them at Falmouth at two o'clock on Sunday morning, and they were immediately taken to the Royal Cornwall Sailors' Home.

CHARTERED MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The half-yearly meeting of shareholders was held on the 15th inst. at the banking-house, No. 65, Old Broad-street; Mr. George G. Nicol in the chair. The report stated that, after making provision for bad and doubtful debts, the accounts to June 29 last showed a net profit of £22,714. The directors, therefore, declared an interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, and carried forward the balance of £214 to next account. The chairman informed the meeting that the charter had been renewed on the old terms, and said that doubtless shareholders would be disappointed by the decrease of dividend. All their securities were easily realisable, and showed how restricted their business had been for the past six months. The policy of the directory had been one of extreme caution, and they could not have declared a larger dividend unless they had trenched upon the reserve fund, which doubtless would not have met with the approval of the shareholders. The falling off had been caused principally by the losses on sugar in Java last year, which had turned out rather larger than was expected, amounting in all to £15,360. The Indian trade generally had been very unsatisfactory; exchanges had been drooping and drooping, and the directors believed that the more resources they kept in hand—although at a loss of profit—the better it would be for the safety of the bank. With reference to the large failures which had recently taken place, no doubt the shareholders would be glad to hear that the losses to the bank would be absolutely nothing. The total amount of credits of the City of Glasgow Bank held by the Chartered Bank was £45,000, of which £19,500 in Ceylon would be readily realised, and there were £10,000 worth of bills in Rangoon and £15,000 in Bombay. There was very little doubt that the City of Glasgow Bank would pay 20s. in the pound, and the only inconvenience their creditors would suffer would be the delay in payment; but as regarded these amounts the Chartered Bank would not lose a single shilling. They held also £18,000 worth of bills, drawn by Heugh, Balfour, and Co., but they were all endorsed by a first-class bank, and no loss could possibly accrue upon them. The position of the bank was perfectly safe at the present time; no losses had occurred during the past half-year, and the prospects of the coming half-year were very fair. With regard to silver, which had exercised a disturbing influence upon exchange, the statement that appeared some time ago as to there being a large amount in America was a mistake. The only disturbing element in silver now was the stock in Germany, which was estimated at about fifteen millions, but all intelligent Germans thought that the silver coinage was quite insufficient for the requirements of Germany, and would, therefore, have to be increased. A disturbing element in India was the enormous amount of Council bills, which had now reached between seventeen and eighteen millions, and, in his opinion, was very discreditable to the Indian Government. The railways constructed by private enterprise paid 6 per cent., but the Government railways only 1 per cent., and borrowing money at 4½ per cent. to realise only 1 was styled reproductive expenditure. He objected to India being called a poor country. It was a backward country, no doubt, but that was the fault of its government. He thought the time had now arrived when England should take over the debt of India. The report was adopted, and the meeting terminated with the usual vote of thanks.—Globe, 15th.

COL. HERBERT GEORGE DEEDS served with the 1st Battalion 60th Rifles in the campaign of 1857-58 against the mutineers in India, including the actions on the Hindun, battle of Budlee-kerai, and taking the heights before Delhi, the subsequent siege operations (wounded on June 12), assault and capture of the city, with the final attack on and occupation of the palace. He also served as aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General Sir John Jones during the campaign in Rohilkund, including the actions of Bugawalla and Nugena, relief of Moradabad, action on the Dojura, assault and capture of Bareilly, attack and bombardment of Shahjehanpore, defeat of the rebels and relief of the garrison, capture of the fort of Bunnai, pursuit of the enemy to the left bank of the Goomtee, and destruction of the fort of Mahomdee. As extra aide-de-camp to Sir Archdale Wilson, he was engaged at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and as orderly officer to Brigadier Sir George R. Barker in the operations in Oudh from Dec. 3, 1858, to Feb. 1, 1859. For his Indian services he received the medal with two clasps, and was awarded the brevet rank of major. On Jan. 23, 1872, he was nominated assistant adjutant-general of the Rawul Pindee Division in Bengal, and in Feb., 1874, became private secretary to the Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy, M.P. (now Viscount Cranbrook), Secretary of State for War.—Broad Arrow.

COLONEL SIR CHARLES HENRY BROWNLOW, K.C.B., late in command of the Rawul Pindee Brigade of the Bengal Army, is about to leave England for India, to take command of a brigade of the expeditionary forces destined to advance into Afghanistan. Sir Charles Brownlow, one of the best known officers on the North West Frontier of India, has had a long experience of campaigning against the hill tribes. The record of his services in "Hart" states that he was present with the Army of Reserve during the Punjab war 1848-49, and that he served with the 1st Sikh Infantry in the Black Mountain campaign in the Hazara country in 1852-53; against the Momund tribes in August, 1854, when he was shot through the lungs; and in the Bozdar expedition of 1867. Colonel Brownlow commanded the 20th Punjab Infantry in the operations on the Eusofzye Frontier in 1858; throughout the China War of 1860, including the action of Sinho, taking of the Taku Forts, and occupation of Peking (brevet of major); in the Umbeylah campaign of 1863; when he was promoted lieutenant-colonel and received the Companionship of the Bath, and in the Hazara campaign of 1868. Sir Charles Brownlow also commanded our expeditionary force into the Looshai country in 1871-72, and for his successful conduct of the operations received the thanks of the Government of India, with an appointment as aide-de-camp to the Queen, and promotion to Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath. He has received the Punjab medal, China medal with clasps for the Taku Forts and Peking, and the Indian war medal with clasps for the North West Frontier, Umbeylah, and Looshai. Colonel Brownlow will not arrive in India before mid-November, before which time no very important operations are likely to commence.—Broad Arrow.

CENTRAL ASIATIC RACES.—At the recent Anthropological Congress in Paris, M. de Ujfalvy gave a short account of the anthropological results of his travels in Central Asia. He met in those regions with only two races, properly speaking—a white race, the Indo-European, especially in its Iranian branch, and a yellow race, the Mongolo-Altaic. M. Ujfalvy insisted on the necessity of banishing from scientific terminology the word Turanian, which means nothing, and which has been greatly abused in support of ethnological theories more than doubtful. The word Scythian is not less improper, and ought also to be banished from scientific language. The white race of Central Asia is there represented by the Iranians, i.e., by the Tajiks of the mountains or Galtchas, and by the Tajiks of the plains and towns. These latter, who count among them descendants of the aborigines with colonists from Persia, ancient freed slaves, are, nevertheless, of a blood much mixed with that of the Tatar invaders. They are of good stature. M. Ujfalvy measured fifty-eight, who had a mean height of 1.67 metre. They are good-looking according to the European notion of beauty; the nose is aquiline, the mouth small, the eyes large and straight, and varying in colour from black to blue, while the hair is of all shades from black to blonde. The feet and hands are very large, while the body is hairy. But what is most characteristic is their great brachycephaly, the mean cephalic index of individuals observed by the traveller being 86.21. M. Ujfalvy thinks that the purer in race a Galtcha is, the shorter is his head. Among the yellow race, the purest met with by M. Ujfalvy are the Mongol-Kalmuks, who inhabit the northern slope of the Thian-Shan. These people have a large and round head, the front bulging, the ears prominent, the nose large and short, the eyes small and oblique. While the body, [and especially the face, has little hair, the hair of the head is black and coarse. The tribes of Turkish race, as the Usbecks, Turcomans, Karakalpaks, Khirgis-Kaisaks, present an evident ethnical mixture of two types. However, the Khirgis of the mountains of Ferghana, or Kara-Khirgis, appear to be of very pure Altaic race. As to the Sarts, they are members of no nationality whatever; the term Sart is applied to any individual who abandons the pastoral and nomad life to devote himself to agriculture; it signifies "sedentary." It follows, then, that the Sarts are of various races, but the blood is always Iranian; the Tajik element predominates considerably among them, since the Tajiks were the ancient possessors and workers of the land. M. Topman, in remarking on M. Ujfalvy's paper, drew attention to the remarkable similarity between the broad-headed Galtchas and the Celtic Savoyard. He regards this as one proof of the Central Asiatic origin of the Indo-European, and seems to regard the Galtchas as a home-staying remnant of the great Aryan swarms that spread over Europe. The Oxus and Jaxartes have always been the mutual limit to the expansion of the two great races, white and yellow. These two frontier lines have historically been disputed by the Iranians and Turanians, who, M. Topman maintains, as a nation, it not as an ethnical group, have had an incontestable historical and geographical existence. At the most, he holds, the Iranian power cannot be carried back further than 3,500 years.—Times.

ARMY ITEMS.—A large number of vacancies having been reported to exist among the duty officers of batteries of Royal Artillery in India, the War Office is filling the same up by volunteers from batteries at home. Already more than a sufficient number of names have been sent into the Horse Guards. Col. H. Peel Yates, R.A., is about to leave England for India on inspection duty. The 8th Hussars and 2nd Battalion 5th and 30th Regiments are held in readiness to embark for India.

INDIAN BILLS.—There was no allotment of the India bills usually tendered for on Wednesday, the Government in Calcutta having bought six-months' bills on London to the extent of £1,500,000 in preference to drawing the money from that side in the usual way.

FAILURE OF AN EAST INDIA HOUSE.—At the Bankruptcy Court on Thursday another of the firms connected with the City of Glasgow Bank presented a petition for liquidation. The debtors, Thomas Matthew and John Fairlie, are described as merchants of Glasgow, having branch establishments at Rangoon and Moulmein, and traded under the firm of Matthew, Buchanan, and Co. The debts are stated at £1,350,000, but it is anticipated that a very considerable portion of this will not rank against the estate. Mr. Druce (Druce, Son, and Jackson) applied for the appointment of Mr. Harding (Harding, Whinney, and Co.) as receiver and manager of the estate, and stated that the trading was similar to that of Messrs. James Morton and Co., in which case Mr. Harding had been appointed to the same office. The present application was rendered necessary to prevent a forced realisation of the securities held by various mercantile houses. In reply to the learned Registrar, Mr. Druce stated that the application was supported by creditors. Mr. Registrar Brougham made the desired appointment.

DEPARTURE OF OFFICERS FOR INDIA.—The P. and O. Company's steam-ship Surat sailed from Southampton on the 24th inst. for Bombay. The following officers and others proceed out in the Surat—Capts. Millet and Hunt for Gibraltar; Commissary Kennedy, Lieuts. Darling, and G. Bennett for Malta; Lieut. Col. Minching, Second Lieut. Farquhar, Capts. King and Wyllie and Col. H. W. Gulliver, for Bombay; Lord Clarence Paget and Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., proceed to Alexandria by the corresponding Brindisi steamer, and also the following from Bombay: Capt. Maitland, Lieut. Wilson, Colonel Plowden, Surg. Major Graham, Major M'Mullen, Dr. Whishaw, Lieut. Col. Fraser, Col. Watson, Capt. Saunders, Rev. W. F. Satteandham, Viscount Guillemore, and Lieut. General Douglas.

BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders was held on the 16th inst. at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. W. Paterson presided, and, in opening the proceedings, said they were met for the special object of declaring an interim dividend, and he was glad to say the board were fully warranted in asking the shareholders to sanction the payment of a dividend at the same rate as last year—at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, tax free. On that occasion it might perhaps do no harm to add that it would be paid out of profits earned. Their business had been going on so quietly that he would have had little to say to them but for the recent sad catastrophe in Scotland. It was unnecessary in such a meeting to characterise that failure, but it was very fortunate they had that early opportunity of letting the shareholders know the situation of the bank with regard to it. They held of the City of Glasgow Bank's acceptances £70,000 drawn by different firms, and they were led to believe that these would be paid ultimately in full. Having had many transactions with the firms whose failures had ensued on that of the City of Glasgow Bank, it would be satisfactory to them to know that the bank's pecuniary interest in them, irrespective of these bills, was very trifling, and that they were amply covered by securities which would work themselves out in the ordinary course. He did not think the shareholders would blame them for taking bills to the extent mentioned on the City of Glasgow Bank, seeing that its reports had always been favourable, and that on the 30th of June last they showed a clear capital of £1,000,000, besides £450,000 of reserve fund, after paying their shareholders 12 per cent. These bills were lock up, but they considered them a good asset. He might take that opportunity of saying that the board had gone very carefully into their other assets and liabilities, and he could safely tell them that they were in complete and perfect order, provision having been made for any probable loss thereupon. The past year had been a very fair one, and if the profits during the present were equally good they would be very well contented, but he must say that the times were against them. While the India Council's drawings on the Governments in India were £1,500,000 sterling per month, it was scarcely likely that they could see much reaction in the exchange or in the value of silver. There had been famine and dearth extending over large districts of India and China during the last two or three years, but it was satisfactory to hear that the crops this year were very good, and they might therefore look for some alleviation of the depression which had prevailed in those countries. Of course, the Afghan "affair" was a drawback, and it was to be hoped that it would be dispelled without the drawings on the Indian Treasury being excessive. It afforded him much pleasure to intimate that Mr. B. Smith, late of the well-known firm of Jardine, Skinner, and Co., of Calcutta, had agreed to join the board. The motion having been seconded, a brief discussion ensued, and, in reply to questions, the chairman said he believed the acceptances of the City of Glasgow Bank were all six months' bills—marginal credits. They were not interested in Heugh, Balfour, and Co.'s failure, and with regard to Smith, Fleming, and Co., they held a trifling amount, which was amply covered. No accounts were presented at that meeting, but a statement had been drawn up for the directors' information, and what he had stated might be taken as a fact. The motion was adopted, and votes of thanks to the chairman and directors and to the managers closed the proceedings.—Times.

NAVAL ITEMS.—Telegrams from Malta (Oct. 24) state that H.M.s Undaried, recently the flag-ship of Rear Admiral John Corbett, on the East India station, arrived on 24th, homeward bound. H.M.s troopship Serapis, from Portsmouth yesterday with troops, arrived on 25th to proceed to Bombay to-day. H.M.s troopship Fumma arrived at Bombay yesterday. The Malabar will leave Portsmouth, in accordance with the previously arranged programme, for the season, on Nov. 1, but it is not finally settled what troops she will take. If the programme were strictly adhered to she would embark drafts, but it is expected that she will take the D and E Batteries Royal Horse Artillery and the L Battery 6th Brigade Royal Artillery, which were to go by the Euphrates on Dec. 13. The earlier despatch of artillery is with the view of allowing artillery detachments in India to be moved towards the Afghan frontier. It is understood that the regiments in India under orders for England will not leave for the present, and that the homeward passages of the troopships will be devoted to the conveyance of time-expired men and invalids.

LEAVE RECALLED.—All officers of the regiments in India warned for Afghanistan, who are at home on private affairs, are to proceed out to rejoin headquarters by the end of the year.

Buchanan and Co., of Rangoon and Moulmein, in British Burma, have suspended payment, and the Court of Bankruptcy has appointed Mr. Harding, receiver and manager of the estate. The liabilities are estimated at £1,250,000. Mr. T. Matthew, the senior partner in the firm, and brother-in-law to Mr. J. Morton, who early last week stopped payment, holds £1,000 in City of Glasgow Bank stock and £23,745 in trust.

It is unfortunate that just at this time fever should be very bad at Mooltan, nearly seventy men of the 70th Regiment being in hospital from it. The symptoms are said to be varying and perplexing, strongly resembling cholera in some respects, but have fortunately not proved dangerous to life hitherto.

The troops which were sent out into camp near Lucknow on the late outbreak of cholera have, since they returned to barracks, suffered badly from ague, fevers, and dysentery, supposed to have been brought on by the wet weather which they experienced when under canvas.

A SANITARY PRIZE PRIMER.—The following notice is published in the Gazette last received:—A prize of Rs. 500 will be awarded by the Government of India for the best English sanitary primer which may meet with their approval. The treatise should not consist of more than twenty-four pages of print, and the prize work will become the property of Government, who will be at liberty to translate it into different vernacular languages.

ATTENDANCE OF STUDENTS AT COLLEGES.—The Secretary of State has approved of the proposal of the Government of India to exempt non-commissioned officers on the unattached list departmentally employed, and eligible for promotion to the warrant grade, from the operation of Clause 4, Paragraph 1,305, of the Bengal Regulations, which provides that furlough to Europe on medical certificate shall not, as a rule, be granted to non-commissioned officers when within two years of their pension.

when I administered to him five

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted.—It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor.

THE DEAF, AND THE SO-CALLED "DEAF AND DUMB."

PRESIDENT.

HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The "German" System teaches spoken and written language to the "Deaf and Dumb." It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablets.

The Training College and School of the Society is situated at The Elms, Castlebar-hill, Ealing, Middlesex. Applications for the admission of Students and Pupils should be addressed to the Secretary, No. 1, Nottingham-place, York-gate, Regent's-park.

Donations and Subscriptions are solicited for the purpose of extending the System throughout the United Kingdom, by promoting Schools for the Poor; and for the gratuitous or assisted training of Students, not in a position to pay the ordinary College fees.

The want of well qualified Teachers is one of the most serious drawbacks to the proper instruction of the Deaf, and to supply this want in the best manner is a main object of this Society.

Subscriptions may be paid to the Treasurer, Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., at Messrs. Roberts, Lubbock, and Co., 15, Lombard-street, E.C.; or to the Vice-Chairman, E. Syme-a Thompson, Esq., M.D., at Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., and Co., 1, Cavendish-square, W.; or to the other Bankers of the Society, Messrs. Fried and Co., 189, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Messrs. Hopkinson and Sons, 8, Regent-street, St. James's, S.W.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay to October 14; Allahabad and Madras, October 12; Calcutta, October 11.

THE following is the official report of the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending October 1:—In Madras general prospects continue good; unseasonable rain has again fallen in South Kanara and Malabar, and in Kurnool the weather has been unfavourable to standing dry crops in places; rain is needed in parts of Tinnevely and Coimbatore. The number on relief works, as well as the number gratuitously relieved, exhibits a considerable decrease; the figures are 83,964 and 53,284 respectively, against 98,738 and 58,574 in the previous week, the decrease being 14,774 and 5,328 severally. In Mysore the crops are in excellent condition, and prices are falling. The numbers on relief works and in receipt of gratuitous relief are again less, though the diminution this week is small. In the Bombay Presidency prospects on the whole remain good; the river in Sind continues to fall, but it is still very much higher than it was at this time last year. Prospects in the Central Provinces have generally improved; ploughing for the rabi is progressing; high prices, however, continue; cholera is decreasing. In Berar the crops damaged by excessive rain are recovering, and prospects are now good. Throughout Central India prospects are favourable. In Rajputana some damage is being caused by locusts, but otherwise prospects on the whole continue satisfactory. General prospects in Bengal are still very promising; rain has fallen in all the districts, but more is needed in a few places; injury to rice on low lands in parts of Bengal proper from excessive rain continues. In Assam there is no change. In Burma rain has fallen during the week, and prospects are, on the whole, good. In North Western Provinces and Oudh, as well as in the Punjab, prospects continue very satisfactory.

THIS week has brought no solution of the Afghan difficulty. By the express desire of the Imperial Government, "forced," says the correspondent of the Daily News, "upon the Indian Government," and "only adopted after urgent and repeated remonstrances, another chance has been given to the Ameer. His reply was discourteous and unsatisfactory, but a second letter has been sent by the Viceroy, warning him of the consequences that must follow his refusal to receive a British mission. Decisive action is thus postponed. Some will recall the guess at truth which says half the failures in life are caused by pulling in one's horse when leaping. On the other hand, remonstrances supported by the active preparations which being pressed forward, may cause, if not the Ameer himself, at least his chieftains, to hesitate before making their country the scene of war. The terms of the ultimatum include a full apology and reception of the mission. It cannot be doubted that its reception by the Ameer depends upon the Russian advisers of Shere Ali. The spirit of the St. Petersburg Press can be judged from the words of the Vedomosti:—"The great struggle between England and Russia, which has been coming on for centuries, will occur in Afghanistan. Radical change in the history and position of one of these Powers must be the result." The Ministry may well pause before attacking Afghanistan if they have reason to believe that Russia will feel herself bound to interfere, even by rendering covert aid, and postpone the coercion of the Ameer until the real issue between the encroaching Power of Asia, as well as Europe, and Great Britain be amicably decided or referred to the arbitrament of war. The cautious counsels of our statesmen must be unpalatable in India, but doubtless the gain of delay is not all on the side of our possible adversary.

THE Times publishes a telegram, date Darjeeling, Oct. 31, which says:—"It is officially announced that the text of the Ameer's reply is discourteous and hostile; yet, despite this confirmation of the national indignity already incurred, a further ultimatum has been granted by the Government. Unless the public determination of England to resent the gross and contemptuous indignity offered so conspicuously, with every nation and India as spectators, be expressed in a tone of emphatic decision, it is felt here that the Indian Government will be rendered contemptible and British prestige in India will be degraded. The occasion is a most critical one, imperatively demanding energy, promptitude, and decided will. A wavering policy and vacillating statesmanship would be pregnant with most disastrous consequences. Public opinion here is becoming more convinced that the emergency of the situation is entirely unappreciated, and the motives for dilatory action are unintelligible, unless they are to be traced to the Home Government. There are daily demonstrations of enthusiastic loyalty from the feudatory chiefs. The Khan of Khelat has offered generous assistance in provisions, transport, and troops. The frontier tribes continue to declare in favour of the English Government. The Ameer's troops are suffering greatly from sickness, and the mortality is very great. There is here an absolute concurrence of opinion that a vigorous policy and determined action are urgently needed.

MANIFESTATIONS of loyalty are continually reported by telegram. We learn that the Khan of Khelat has sold 20,000 maunds of wheat at the market price to the Quetta force, and offered to take up all the camels in Nachi for the transport service. The Rajah of Nahan has offered a regiment of Sirmoor troops, and it is reported from Hyderabad that Sir Salar Jung has placed forces and treasure at the disposal of the Government. The enthusiasm of our native troops is unbounded. A ridiculous story was spread as to the reluctance of some Sikhs to go to the front, which was speedily contradicted.

ALL troops proceeding to Peshawur have been ordered to remain at Hasan Abdul, where a reserve camp is being formed. The Indian papers are filled with rumours and with accounts of the movements of troops. The Englishman summarises the Kurram Force at nominal strength, 6,586; field strength, 5,237; of which 1,257 nominal field strength 1,092 are European troops. It has only six horse and field guns and a mountain battery. Quetta force has 7,032, field strength 5,880; of which European troops are 3,019, field strength, 2,625, with one light field battery and two batteries of mountain guns. The Multan Division has 7,875, or field strength 6,705, of which there are European troops 3,019; field strength 2,625, with three light and five heavy batteries. The personnel of the three divisions will be found in the columns of the Gazette. The strength of the English Army in India may be put down at 59,968. If we deduct the men sent to the front, we have 54,680 European soldiers still left, a force which will enable the Government to send fully 12,000 more Europeans to the front, if necessary, and still retain as strong a garrison force as there was in 1856. It seems clear that the Multan Division is in reality the nucleus of an army, the advanced brigade of which under General Biddulph, is being already pushed forward to Quetta, where its cavalry strength ought to enable it to keep up communication with the rear, as well as efficiently protect the front. It would be wise, however, to keep open communications by means of levies, reserving the cavalry for strong reconnaissances and demonstrations. A cavalry force of the strength of that under General Biddulph must lose half its value unless supported by horsed guns. The southern column has already a strength of 14,889, giving 12,585 effectives, a force which we do not hesitate to say is too small for the part it is intended to play. But, before coming to any final conclusion on the plan of campaign, we must of necessity await the details of the army corps which events are calling into the field at Peshawur.

Afghanistan. They are a fine muscular race, characterised by an untamed ferocity of disposition, the result of ages of habitual rapine and of constant petty warfare. Ever jealous of their wild independence, and for a short time once supreme in Afghanistan, they have never failed to prove the most obstinate opponents to invaders, whether from the East or the West. The chiefs had never submitted to the authority of the Cabul and Kandahar rulers, for although Dost Mahomed had made tributary a portion of the Suliman Khel Ghilzies, holding districts to the east of Gouzni, and though the Andari Ghilzies were his subjects, yet these formed but an inconsiderable part of the tribes, who, in a mass, disowned all submission or obedience to the Ameer or his brothers, and, despising the retainers and followers of other Afghan tribes, continued with perfect impunity the long-established system of Ghilzie transit fees and plunder.

Two or three home journals, following the lead of the Times, disparage the Indian Foreign Office for its assumed ignorance of the approach of the Russian embassy until it made its appearance in Cabul, and deduce therefrom the moral of its unfitness to deal with the present crisis—the Times, writing upon August 28, taking credit to itself for having first broached the subject “three weeks ago.” The subject was touched upon in the columns of the Pioneer twice or thrice during the latter half of June, on the strength of the reiterated assurances of the correspondent at Peshawur; whilst, so far as the Indian authorities are concerned, we believe that they were well informed of what was happening at quite the beginning of June, and that as early as July 1 the Viceroy and the Home Government were in active communication about the affair—the progress of General Abramoff’s party and every incident of it, including the ineffectual attempt of the Ameer’s officials to stop it at the Oxus, being regularly reported at Simla by the Punjab Government.

THE Government of India leaves Simla for Calcutta on Nov. 10, the offices reopening in Calcutta on Nov. 25. The Council will sit in Calcutta under a president in Council. The Viceroy leaves for Lahore about the 20th, and will remain there till Dec. 20, and return to Calcutta by Christmas. His Excellency’s movements after that date must depend on the progress of events on the north west frontier.

CAPTAIN PEMBERTON, Deputy Commissioner of Nimar, has been shot by a Mahometan moonshee, who had been dismissed from his court some time previously. The deceased officer was returning from a consecration service which was held at the new cemetery by the Bishop of Calcutta. A railway muccadam, who attempted to secure the murderer, was shot dead by him.

In the midst of overwhelming work and anxieties, the Viceroy had time, on October 5, to inspect the Simla Volunteers at Annandale, who now number 185 members, of which 95 per cent. have passed the qualifying drill. Lord Lytton said that he rejoiced to see the Simla Volunteers not behind hand in the great volunteer movement, which he rejoices to see so increasingly active throughout India, especially at this moment.

THE Bombay Presidency seems to be threatened with a plague of locusts. On October 11 they passed in clouds some miles long over Tanna, but eventually cleared the Konkan altogether, and alighted at Dhond, near which place we hear they have done great damage. At Baroda a “tremendous flight of locusts” was seen passing for three hours continuously the following day. They have, however, gone on towards the north. For the last month locusts have been tolerably common in Bombay, and it looks as if these were only the pioneers of a future army.

THE experience of the past two years has led Mr. Eliot to the conclusion that heavy local rainfall always accompanies the formation and progress of cyclonic disturbances in the Bay of Bengal, and the indraught due to the rainfall appears to be the only necessary condition for their continuance as long as they advance over a sea or plain area. During the south west monsoon the rainfall usually occurs in the neighbourhood of the coasts when the current is weak. In the Bay of Bengal this gives rise, from its peculiar shape, to two classes of cyclonic disturbances, one formed off the coast of Aracan, and the other off the coast of Orissa. The former generally advance in some direction between north and north west into Bengal, and are usually broken up in Central or Northern Bengal. The latter usually drift up the Gangetic valley, and, as in one or two examples this year, are occasionally not broken up until they reach the borders of the Punjab. In other cases, the interference of the Arabian Sea monsoon current may give rise to a more westerly motion across the peninsula. The line or path of advance appears in the great majority of cases to be determined by the general drift or set of the lower atmospheric current over the area at the time visited by the disturbance. The intense cyclones of the Bay of Bengal which occur only during the transition periods preceding and following the prevalence of the south west monsoon are formed under totally different circumstances. They are slowly generated by rainfall in the centre of the Bay after the continuance for a considerable period of light and variable winds and of calm and sultry weather. Their formation is immediately determined by the commencement of excessive local rainfall in the Bay. This gives rise to a strong indraught, which manifests itself at the coast stations of the south and west of Ceylon by strong winds and heavy rainfall. An examination of recent cyclones also appears to show that their line of advance is along the line of least atmospheric motion immediately previous to the formation of the cyclone. Hence the barometer and wind movement at the coast stations of the Bay, and the changes of the weather at Colombo and Galle, will give almost certain information of the formation of a cyclone in the Bay and of its general line of advance.

THE Maharaja Holkar, on receiving, with the insignia of the Order of the Indian Empire, with which his Highness was invested by Sir Henry Daly on the Dussara festival, a letter bearing her Majesty’s sign manual, has expressed to his Excellency the Viceroy his high appreciation of the honour. The Maharaja says, “the high sentiments which her Majesty’s letter embodies are an assurance that our honour and interests will be promoted and defended under the protection of the British Government for ever.”

AN Upper Sind correspondent says that Colonel Wallace, as Resident, is investigating certain charges against the Khyrpore Ameer, H.H. Mir Ali Murad, the chief vizier, having accused him of a secret correspondence with the Ameer of Cabul. The proofs of this are in the form of letters the vizier had conveyed away in an iron treasure chest which he sent to Sukkur. The Mir, however, missing the letters, sent a party of sowars, who forcibly seized the chest at Sukkur.

THE troubles in Seistan still continue, and it is possible they may grow to serious complications, as neither Afghans nor Persians have been contented with the award made in 1872, although a just one, as the Cabul ruler has no claim by descent from Ahmad Abdullah, the founder of the Durani kingdom, who seized upon Seistan upon Nadir Shah’s death. Sir Frederick Goldsmid marked out Persian Seistan as a triangular plot, with its base resting upon the Hazareh mountains, and its apex touching the Helmand river. Persia claimed at least six times as much, and the Afghans wished to make the Hazareh range the actual frontier. The Helmand delta is said to be one of the most fertile spots in the world, though by no means healthy. Seistan, on the east, touches the plain of Kandahar, and an approach to it from the south is cut off by Northern Beluchistan. To the north east are two small lakes, which collect the waters pouring down from the direction of Lask, from which water is led off to the lower lands by rude irrigation channels. The inhabitants are Duranis in the north, while to the south and west are Beluchis, Tajiks, and two Persian tribes, descendants of involuntary emigrants, introduced by Nadir Shah. After the passing away of the Durani dynasty the country alternately belonged to Herat and Kandahar, but in 1851 Ali Khan revolted from the latter Government, and his nephew refused the protection of the Shah, but in '62 was obliged to throw himself on it, when Dost Mahomed marched on Herat. An appeal to the British Government was made in vain in '64, and the Shah annexed the country in '67, out of which arose the appeal at the Umballa Durbar, and the arbitration. The Pioneer says that the history of the arbitration cannot be looked back upon with much satisfaction. The Persian authorities in Seistan were obstructive; the inhabitants were strictly ordered to give no information, and wherever the commissioners tried to examine boundaries, or to question minor officials, they were met by rebuffs which were quite disheartening. Finally, they marched off to Teheran, and there the award was given by which Persia retained all the country except a tract on the north bank of the Helmand. Both Afghans and Persians were thoroughly discontented with the result, the latter being very anxious to secure the district given to the Ameer, as it was said to be hallowed by tradition. The Afghans were even more exasperated, as they looked to the British to expel the Persians from the soil.

THE present crisis makes us sensible of the advantages which would be derived from the existence of a real Intelligence Department. The formation of such a bureau has long been desired by Sir Charles Staveley. No doubt the Quartermaster General's office has a large amount of available data collected and arranged, not only as regards colonial defence here, but also with reference to the armies of native States and Asiatic countries adjacent to India. But still it cannot do all that is required unless more officers are attached to this department, whose special duties should be the collection of statistics and general information regarding those countries which sooner or later we may have to occupy. We believe the Chief would have a special Intelligence Department for India similar to that which now exists in England, and, as a commission is at present sitting at Simla having this subject under its notice, we hope his Excellency's views, which are more than guessed at, may be submitted to it as an instalment of that large amount of evidence that could be adduced in favour of attaching several smart officers to the Quartermaster General's establishment for special duty in its Intelligence Department.

THE Government of Cabul is described by Dr. Bellew as carried on by the following functionaries:—The Wazir or Prime Minister, the Mir Munshi or Secretary of State, the Kazi or Chief Judge, who superintends the departments of law and religion, aided by a naib or deputy; and subordinates, styled Ulama, or learned men, of whom the Mufti for law, and the Sheikh of Imam for religion, are chief. The high State officials attached to the Court are the Mir Khizanchi, or Lord of the Treasury; the Mir Akhor, or Master of the Horse; the Mir Shikar, or Lord Falconer; the Shahgassi, or Lord Chamberlain; and the Arzybeghi, or Chief Petitioner. There has been a decline in recent years in the state and dignity of the Cabul Court as compared to the time of the Durani Sovereign.

A NEWSPAPER correspondent, from Bombay, it was said, made a daring attempt to accompany Sir Neville Chamberlain's mission in the disguise of a moollah. But being compelled to eke out his insufficient stock of the vernacular by resort to his mother tongue, the police penetrated his disguise, and the moollah got no further on his way to Cabul than the Peshawur serai.

The Maharajah of Johore was expected to visit Colombo as a guest of the Governor of Ceylon. According to a local paper, cases containing 400 Lebanon coffee plants have been prepared at the Maharajah's request, for experimental planting in his dominions. Two Ceylon planters, who have been prospecting in Perak, have already applied for a grant of lands for coffee cultivation, for which they have found a locality fulfilling all the requirements for successful planting.

Good progress has been made with railways in India during the current year, upwards of one thousand miles having been completed and opened since January 1. This makes upwards of 8,000 miles now open in the country.

A DESPATCH from the Secretary of State for India observes, on the report of the Bombay Survey operations for 1876-77, that the devotion with which the officers of the survey applied themselves to the performance of new and harassing duties merited and received the high approbation of Government. Special credit has been given to Captain Ward, of the Southern Maratha survey, "for his willing and strenuous exertions." Lord Cranbrook fully concurs in the commendation bestowed on Colonel Anderson for the able manner in which he has performed the onerous duties of Survey Commissioner in the northern and southern divisions and in Sind.

THE late Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army left Bombay for England on Oct. 7, accompanied by Lady Staveley and Major Furze, A.D.C., and escorted to the water-side by troops of friends, who seem to have included all the notables, civil and military. The Apollo Bunder is described as not having presented so animated and picturesque an appearance since the embarkation of the 9th Bombay N.I. for Malta. The last farewell was from the Governor in a letter handed to Sir C. Staveley as he embarked. A gazette extraordinary announced that:—"H.E. the Governor in Council directs that the honour due to the Commander-in-Chief shall be continued to be paid to his Excellency until his departure from Aden." His successor, Lieutenant-General Warre, C.B., arrived on the following Wednesday, accompanied by Mrs. Warre and Captains Spencer and Burrows, and subsequently proceeded to Puna.

WE are glad to see that the cause of the factory operatives in India is being advocated by the Indian Press. In Bombay alone the factory operatives number 26,000, of whom about 17,000 are adult males, 4,000 women, and 5,000 children under the age of thirteen years, many of them under eight years of age, all of whom work the same hours as the adults. To this may be probably added in other parts of India 14,000 more, making a total of 40,000 souls who stand in need of legislative protection. The National Indian Association is making a move in the direction of supplying education to the factory children, by a proposal that each millowner should enter into a sort of contract by which the association will undertake to organise a system of education for boys between the age of eight and fourteen—a reasonable sum being paid by the millowner. A first and pressing need is that the little bodies should not be stunted, and the infant minds brutalised, by intolerable weariness and hours of toil in an atmosphere super-heated and poisoned by the presence of over-crowded human beings and floating cotton dust. Our own factory legislation first protects the body from over-work and undue risks, and then provides that the "hand" shall not be considered as a mere worker, but be taught as a rational being.

UNDER the heading "Manufactures and Mines" the Resolution on the annual report of the Burdwan division, there are given interesting particulars of the manufactures maintained by European capital in the districts of Hooghly and Howrah. The most important of these are the iron manufactures of Howrah, the jute and cotton mills of Bowreah and Fort Gloster, the paper mills of Bally, the jute mills of Champdani, and the mills at Serampore and Gyretty. In Howrah alone there are seven dockyards, besides numerous yards for building country-boats, three jute mills, each with a capital of 10 to 15 lakhs, and working altogether about 800 looms, eleven large workshops, besides the railway works. Altogether, some 10,000 people are believed to find work daily in the factories and workshops of the town. In Raneegunge the business done at the pottery works belonging to Messrs. Burn and Co. is said to be rapidly extending. They employ now about 500 hands, and have large contracts for drainage pipes, fire bricks, flooring tiles, and stoneware of all sorts. The workmanship is said to be excellent. An interesting sketch is given by the sub-divisional officer of Raneegunge of the coal mines of his sub-division, from which it appears that the year 1877-78 was one of renewed prosperity to this industry. Of the success of the Bengal ironworks, so far as the production of iron goes, the Lieutenant Governor has satisfied himself by personal inspection. The Susunia stone quarries in Bankoora are said to be now turning out an admirable quality of hard stone.

THE Indian Mirror announces that, for the first time in the Brahmo Somaj, an attempt has been made to illustrate the deep spiritual truths of Theism by means of pictures for the benefit of the masses of the people. A tract has just been published in Bengalee, which, it is written, "we believe is the first of a series, with a woodcut at the heading, showing how a band of devotees are safely gliding across the river of life in a boat, with the Lord at the helm, singing His name, with the accompaniment of the mirdung and the kartal. A number of penitent sinners are crying on one side of the river, while the city of joy is visible on the other side. The illustration is not, however, so good as one would wish. Five thousand copies of the above tract were distributed gratuitously immediately before the Doorg holidays commenced. Several copies were distributed among railway passengers."

THE annual report of the Royal Botanical Garden, Calcutta, for the year 1877-78 shows how useful such places are for experimental purposes. Positive results in the cultivation of certain trees and plants have been attained, and the superintendent is in a position to affirm with confidence that such and such a tree is, or is not, suited to the climate of Bengal. Decided failures being eliminated, the area and the supervision available is free for other experiments, or the further prosecution of inquiry in directions not yet exhausted, or in which incomplete results only have been obtained. In this way the cultivation of vanilla and ipecacuanha is found to be a failure and will be abandoned; the low temperature of the nights in the cold season is fatal to the profitable cultivation of the latter plant. Rheea does not thrive in Calcutta so well as in the drier climate of Saharanpore; only a small area, therefore, is sown with it to meet applications for fibre for experiments in anticipation of the competition to be held in August, 1879, at Saharanpore. The eucalyptus (but the superintendent does not mention which species) is not suited to the climate of Lower Bengal. Dr. King even doubts its much-vaunted power of ameliorating a malarious climate, though considerable success is said to have been obtained in Algeria in this direction. The carob (Ceratonia Siliqua) does not affect a soil and climate like those of the Gangetic delta, and is not likely to be added to the list of fodder plants of Bengal. The Pithecolobium Saman (the "rain tree"), of which we recently gave some account, has been much more successful; it is a rapid grower, and perfectly contented in its new home. Four-year-old trees afford excellent shade in avenues, whilst older trees have seeded; the wood, however, is useless except for fuel. It may be accepted, therefore, as fairly established that the Carob for these provinces and the Pithecolobium Saman (would it had a shorter name) for Bengal, are each in their respective locality useful fodder-supplying plants. The experiments in the production of a good paper fibre from indigenous plants have included the Sacharum Spontaneum, or Kans, which, Dr. King justly remarks, is only too abundant in waste places over a large portion of India. But to obtain a footing in the home market any material must be superior in quality to esparto (Spanish grass), as no matter how cheap the raw material in India, cost of conversion into stock and transport to Europe will bring its price as high as that of esparto. Dr. King has successfully proved that the cultivation of the bamboo for paper-making is never likely to be profitable, and the same results are obtained in the case of the baobab. The scientific results obtained by the several superintendents, curators, and interested correspondents are collected in a herbarium which is the most perfect of its kind in India. The wretched accommodation with which it has hitherto been obliged to put up is now to be improved and extended.

TELEGRAMS from Cyprus announce the arrival at Larnaka, on 30th ult., of the First Lord of the Admiralty and the Secretary for War. The following day, after visiting the public and military establishments and receiving an address of welcome from the chief of the municipality and the Greek and Catholic bishops, they proceeded to Nicosia, accompanied by Sir Garnet Wolseley.

THE concluding remarks of the Government resolution abolishing quarantine in Indian ports should, if all accounts be even partially true, give some exercise of mind to the municipal authorities of our Indian ports as to the best methods of practically carrying out the comprehensive suggestions conveyed in the following words:—"H.E. the Governor General in Council would desire to impress on all local Governments that no protection of the character described—i.e., medical inspection and compulsory treatment of debarked passengers—can be of use where sanitary precautions on shore are ignored or neglected, and that in the case of seaports especially it is essential that the preservation of the towns in a good sanitary condition, in respect to drainage, conservancy, and water supply, as well as the protection of the port waters from contamination, should receive the earnest and vigilant attention of the local authorities."

THE British Indian Steam Navigation Company have complained to the Board of Trade of the expense to which they were put by the regulation that not less than three chronometers shall be carried by every native passenger ship engaged in the coasting trade in India. We learn, however, that before the news of this action on the company's part had reached India, the Indian Government had decided, on a representation made by the Calcutta representatives of the company, not only to reduce the number of chronometers required by vessels making short voyages, from three to one, but also to reduce materially the scale of medicines required to be provided for such voyages. The rules prescribing these and similar portions of the equipments of passenger vessels have the force of law, and have, therefore, to be put through a number of formal steps, and cannot issue the very moment the points to which they refer have been decided; but the revised rules referring to these matters were finally approved at a meeting of Council and have appeared in the Gazette.

FROM GHOJAN TO GHUZNEE.

CONTRIBUTED BY LIEUT.-GENERAL KAYE.

FROM Ghोजان* (frontier town of the old kingdom of Cabul) to Mookoor, 11½ miles; road tolerably good, but heavy. Approached the northern hills obliquely and for some distance passed along their base; they are of very inconsiderable height; rocky to the very foot, at a distance of about seven miles from old ground. Another chain came into sight, connected nearly at right angles with that we had just passed, and forming a semi-circle, our road being the chord of the arc. Encamped under N.E. point of this range. As we rounded the extremity of the chain just mentioned, an extensive plain on our right was presented to our view, studded with numerous forts and villages, as far as the eye could reach; many orchards and willow trees surrounding them. The southern range which we had carried with us on our right since approaching the river Turnuck, here terminates, the extremity bearing south from our camp; after a small interval, another low rocky range commences, but it appears to run more directly N. and S., than the chains we had passed in previous marches, which generally ran N.E. and S.W. To the N.E. the plain continues unbounded as far as the eye can reach. Immediately before entering camp we crossed the Turnuck at its source, it rose at the base of the rock on our left, gushing across the road, over a firm shingly bed; hence it flows S. for a considerable distance, supplying the villages of the plain with water; and after nearing the southern hills takes a S.W. direction, passing a few miles S. of Candahar and falls into the Urghundab, about thirty miles from that place. It is but an inconsiderable stream at best, scarcely more than a foot or two deep; this is to be accounted for by the great quantity of water carried off for irrigation; indeed at Koosh-ab, near which the Candahar road crosses the bed, it is entirely expended at certain seasons; the channel was dry at the end of April, when our army marched to Candahar. The banks of the river are tolerably cultivated, but less than those of the Urghundab. Mookoor lies in the province of Khorasan, which extends hence to Meshid in Persia. Encamped with our left resting on the hill, a grassy banked nullah between it and * Ghोजان is about 14 marches N.E. of Candahar, en route to Cabul.

Kahrez-i-Oba, 14 miles.—The road led obliquely across an extensive plain highly cultivated, with many forts and villages on either hand, leaving the hills on our left, and approaching the centre of the plain. About six miles from Mookoor we passed to the left a large fort and town situated under the hills, with many orchards and trees around it, our encampment formed about N.E. of Mookoor, our right resting on a stream with some willow trees. Though the plain is highly cultivated, it yet bears a rather barren appearance from the greater part of the crops having been cut. The country around this place and Mookoor is far more open and better cultivated, with a more respectable sprinkling of trees than any other part of the country hitherto traversed by us, with the exception of the immediate vicinity of Candahar and the valley of the Urghundab. The hills on the left are connected with the point, under which we encamped yesterday, and run nearly parallel to those on our right; direction being about N. N.E. and S.S.W. Beyond the rocky range on our right a more lofty and distant range is visible. The breadth of the plain about sixteen miles. The road itself was generally pretty good, occasionally heavy where it ran along the dry sandy bed of a stream. Grass scanty, but lucerne and chopped straw procurable.

Jumrut 12½ miles.—Continued our march N.E. over an extensive and well-cultivated plain. The road much the same as that of previous march; a few ravines to cross. Encamped in the district of Jumrut, which is highly cultivated and thickly studded with forts and villages. The plain is bounded right and left by tolerably lofty hills, the former are far distant, the low rocky ridge seen from Oba and Mookoor having terminated. The ranges now appear to take a more easterly direction, as the hills on our left sweep round in the distance and head our front, which lies N.E. Several streams of water in the vicinity of camp. Grass good and plentiful; lucerne also in great abundance.

Mooshakee, 8 miles.—Road much the same as in two previous marches, intersected by many irrigation channels. Led to the N.E. through a highly-cultivated country with many villages. Passed Karabagh on the left, about four miles from either camp. The plain to the right open, but on the left shoots from the distant range, and some few isolated hillocks approach the road side. These are probably the hills which appeared to embrace our front from the last ground; grass and lucerne plentiful.

Ahmed Khail, 9½ miles.—The road for the first five miles stony and heavy, latterly tolerably good. A succession of low hills close on the left, with a few hill fortresses and some villages among the hollows. Cultivated land and some small villages on the right, scattered about the open plain; none of the higher ranges visible. Grass good but rather scarce; lucerne in abundance. Ahmed Khail is a small fort, situated on a hill west of camp: Nagae one-half mile beyond.

Nanee, 9 miles.—Road occasionally stony but otherwise good, led over undulating ground, in direction varying between N.N.E. and N.E. Several ranges on the left, the lower one approaching the road side. To the right an extensive plain, mostly bare; many villages and forts in the vicinity of the camp, both on the plain and among the low hills. Very little cultivation, grass and lucerne in plenty.

Ghuznee, 9½ miles.—Our camp eleven miles. Road half way tolerably good, led about N.E. across a sandy plain, very little cultivation, a few forts visible. As we advanced the western hills receded from the road. At about five miles from old ground, crossed a dry bed of a stream, sandy and nearly a mile in width. After reaching the northern bank the country improved, the road leading N.N.E. and N. over a cultivated tract through villages to the southern face of the town. In this latter part of the road we forded a river close to a wooden bridge, and crossed many deep water channels. After reaching the city, the road led along the Eastern face, on the counter scarp of the ditch, and when abreast of the Cabul gate turned north east, crossing a deep water course with a steep bank. Encamped a mile N.E. of the Cabul gate, on the road to the city whence it took its name, our left flank resting on a low ridge at the base of which are the minars or pillars which point towards Mahmoud Shah's tomb, our right resting on a hill on which stood formerly the Nowbut Khaneh, our encampment being on a part of the site of the ancient city. Some ruins in our front and left front. Ghuznee is situated on an inclined plane facing the S. It is an irregular quadrangle surrounded by a somewhat high but thin wall, built partly of mud and partly of brick (mostly sun dried). The wall is flanked by round tower bastions, and has a wet ditch, with a considerable depth of water in some places. There is a berm with a low wall on the inner edge of the ditch, from which a steep mud slope rises to the foot of the wall. There are three gates, situated in deep re-entering spaces, formed by two tower bastions, the approach to the gate being further defended by a low wall acting as a traverse. There are no bridges across the ditch, but the gate is approached by a road over a causeway. The citadel, or Bala Hissar, is built on a commanding rock in the northern quarter of the city, and is surrounded by a brick wall flanked by towers. It contains the arg or palace. There are four bazaars in the town, the streets confined and dirty, the houses built of mud or sun-dried brick. Ghuznee cannot be called a place of any strength. The city is completely commanded by a low hill near its N.E. angle, and, although the Bala Hissar is not overlooked by it, yet loses by its proximity all the advantages of its commanding position. The height of the walls is so much increased by the steep slope of mud (on which no standing footing could be secure) rising from the escarp, as to render escalade nearly impracticable; and the walls, though thin, cannot be breached by light guns. The gateways appear to be much neglected, but they are capable of great strength. The country around Ghuznee is fertile, with many forts and villages, and numerous orchards. To the southwards stretches an extensive plain; to the west, but at some distance, are several ranges of hills, the more remote being lofty; these are the Hazareh mountains. Immediately to the N. and N.E. are low ranges of hills, but except in the Northern face, where the low ridge runs close down to the ditch, the city is surrounded by cultivated land. Camp situated in a gorge having low ranges to the right and left, while our view ahead is bounded by hills.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

INDIA AND HER NEIGHBOURS.*

"WHAT do you think of the state of things in Afghanistan?" is a question that is heard on all sides and the puzzled looks of the respondent reflect the anxious but furtive expression of ignorance of the querist, the real object of both being to hide their ignorance and obtain some small supply of knowledge as to India and her neighbours. On this subject, John Bull, as a rule, knows very little; especially as to the sullen and intractable Ameir, whom the British public half fear, half despise—combining the dim story of the destruction of British troops in the Cabul Pass, with an equally indistinct notion that somehow Russia is also a neighbouring Power, and inciting the Ameir to his obstinate refusal of our intended mission; thus he is only a tool and a cat's-paw, and regarded with partial contempt. The memories of the past history, and the knowledge of the present relations, of this borderland of the Afghans with our Indian Empire are very confused in the minds of thousands, who still would like to know something more exact, while they have not time, as lazy people euphemistically put it, to study systematic histories. Mr. W. P. Andrew has compiled what may be styled a collection of historiettes and summaries which will furnish a superficial talker easily with a sufficient amount of facts and phrases, while a real desire for knowledge on the subject will find that "India and Her Neighbours" will also afford varied information on a list of subjects which comprise "The British Rule in India, the Feudatory Native States and our Neighbours, Beloochistan, Afghanistan, Persia, Turkestan," and so round the great wall of mountains which is India's northern rampart, to the Chinese Thibet. Besides these political subjects, climate and seasons, commerce and communications, finance, and fauna and flora, all have some pages given to a necessarily brief, but still instructive description. In honour of the Kaisar-i-Hind the remarkable women of India occupy a distinguished place in Mr. Andrew's work, and, in truth, like the actual lives of the heroines, the five chapters devoted to them are a cause of confusion to the reader, not that the author fails to justify their prominence in his pages. For, as he says in a characteristic passage, "Accustomed as we have been to regard all Eastern women as both mentally and morally inferior, and accepting broadly the fact of their imperfect education, subordinate position, and secluded lives, it is with a feeling of surprise akin to admiration that we recognise the startling influence exercised by women on the fate of the Eastern world—an influence not to be attributed to mere personal charms alone, nor to the infatuation of a besotted passion which any given sovereign may have felt for this or that favourite of the harem, but conspicuously due (in combination with beauty) to ability, energy, craft, perseverance, and ambition on the part of those who have come prominently to the front in the history of India." The selection of Indian heroines who lived too early to wear decorations conferred by a British Queen begins with the beautiful Sultana Rezia, of Delhi, who ascended the Imperial musnud in 1236, and of whom it was said, "with a look could revive her dying friends, or render helpless her most powerful foe." The heroism and constancy of Durgheeta, Queen of Gurrab, and of Chand, Sultana of Ahmednagar, and the ability and wise government of Ahalya Bhye, the good Queen of Indore, may be well adduced to prove the truth of Mr. Andrew's words, and we recommend our lady readers to peruse for themselves the stories of the remarkable women of India. The section of the work really devoted to our neighbours is somewhat short, although the term is made to include New Guinea, a somewhat remote vicinity, but we commend to all who "want to know something" about the questions of the hour to peruse carefully, aided by the map prefixed to the work, Chapter XXXVII., in which the borderlands are described, wherein to "have a rival in prestige and power would be dangerous—to have a superior would be impossible." The progress of Russia in the Khanates, her "insidious movements towards the East," pressing upon Persia, are briefly but sufficiently shown. The author's views on this subject are best given in his own words:—"In thus pursuing her career of annexation, Russia but follows the natural policy of a great military empire, being forced, moreover, as Sir John Malcolm said, by an impelling power, which civilisation would resist when in contact with barbarism. She may, indeed, stop short of absolute and entire annexation, but there can be no doubt that by bringing Khiva under the same yoke as Bokhara she has established her influence on the Oxus as she has already established it on the Jaxartes. The Oxus, or Amu-Darya, is a noble river, not easy of navigation, but, it is believed, capable of being made so. It will furnish a ready means of carrying the tide of Russian annexation eastward until it finds a barrier in the Hindoo Koosh. When Russia shall have established herself along the Oxus her position will be at once menacing to Persia and India. From Chardjuy on the Oxus there is a road to Merv, distant about one hundred and fifty miles, and from Merv a direct road runs along the valley of the Marghab to Herat, "the key of India, should Russia succeed in occupying Merv, as there is too much reason to fear she ultimately will, and in converting the neighbouring tribes into friends or allies, her position would be one which we could not regard without the gravest apprehension." We must omit details as to the future routes to India, on which the author is so well-known an authority, but which are not in any way obtruded, although they are naturally suggested as a means to obviate dangers arising from the possibilities above outlined. The author says that he has sought to interest the general reader by giving a series of word pictures of characters, occurrences, and places. The general reader will find also that, whether steadily persevering from frontispiece to finis, or by aid of the very complete index, only dipping into this work for a key to the article in the morning journal, or a preparative to conversation, he will have learned much from its miscellaneous and useful pages.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE NEUTRAL ZONE.

WE cannot but think that the Pall Mall Gazette has done good service in drawing attention to the correspondence relating to a neutral zone between the possessions of Russia and England in Asia. This subject, which has been but little understood, has now been stripped of all ambiguity. The immediate advantage derived by England from the correspondence is another clear and unmistakable revelation of Russian aims. It must always be borne in mind, in dealing with the frontier questions which arise between the two Powers, that up to the present moment the Government of the Czar has never laid down the southern boundaries of the Government of Turkestan. So long as M. Stremoukoff omits to perform this plain duty he cannot claim to be heard when he urges English statesmen to believe that the limits of Russian aggression in Central Asia have been reached. If Russia will not define General Kauffmann's southern boundaries, it can only be because he has not yet reached the only boundary the Russian Government has determined to accept. This being so, every argument brought forward by Russia, tending in any way to affect the territories south of the Oxus, must of necessity receive a bias tending more or less directly towards unshrouding Russian aims. During the four years' discussion the Cabinet of St. Petersburg took up three distinct positions. First, it put forward certain claims of the Ameer of Bokhara to territory south of the Oxus; second, it objected to Sheer Ali's holding Badakhshan or Waghlan on account of the proximity of these territories to Khokand; and, third, it insisted that these two chiefships were independent of the Ameer. The second of these arguments, though the weakest in point of fact, is probably that on which Russia would ultimately most rely. The last is a confession that in Badakhshan and Waghlan the Russian chiefs have determined to find a field for their intrigues, if not their energies. Now, it is precisely these two countries which India has the most interest in shutting against Russian influence. Balkh is a splendid base of operations for an army operating against Cabul, or in either direction in the valley of the Oxus. But its occupation would not at once threaten India, because it does not command a direct route to the Indian frontier. The case is very different with Faizabad, the capital of Badakhshan. At this place the roads from Khokand, Peshawur, Cabul, and the Pamir unite. From Faizabad southwards there are two main roads. The first runs through Jarm to Timour Shah, where it divides, one branch going west through the mountains to Charikar and Cabul, and a second south-west to Cabul direct; whilst a third follows the Alishaug valley to Jellalabad. The second road passes from Faizabad to Zebak, where it meets the Waghlan road from Panja, and then divides into two branches which unite near Chitral, where the Waghlan road from Pirkhar through Mastoch joins the Badakhshan road. From Chitral two roads run south, one to Jellalabad and one to Hote Mardan and Naohshehra, in rear of Peshawur. This last route is passable nearly all the way for wheeled conveyances. When Russia, therefore, shows a determination to exclude Badakhshan and Waghlan from a proposed neutral zone, she shows a determination to claim at a fitting opportunity the right to interfere in territories through which run the shortest and best routes between Central Asia and India. Were she ever allowed to possess herself of Faizabad and Sarhad, she would become the immediate neighbour of our feudatory of Kashmir, a position which we should speedily find intolerable. It is in this view that the outcome of the discussion respecting the neutral zone has been an intimation that England is prepared to allow Russia to advance to the Oxus, but not to allow her to cross that river. The Badakhshis are warlike and, it must be confessed, no very loyal subjects of the Ameer Shere Ali. It was a Badakhshi contingent which enabled Yakub Beg, the Ataligh Ghazi, to build up his power at Kashgar. Leave was not asked from Cabul for the services of this force. Its employment may be used as another argument to prove the slender character of the dependence of Faizabad on Cabul. It is better, therefore, in every way, instead of supporting Afghan claims on the small States of the Upper Oxus—claims about which agreement must necessarily be impossible so long as they are not administered by responsible Afghan officers—that England should enunciate a clear policy of her own by which she will abide and by which she is prepared to stand. Such a policy can only be found in notifying to Russia a limit such as the Oxus, an infringement of which will be at once accepted as a declaration of hostilities. This is the more necessary as there is not one of the arguments put forward by the St. Petersburg Foreign Office which does not apply with equal force to Maimanah.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

Mr. R. D. Nuthall, superintendent of elephant kheddass at Dacca, has died at that station of dysentery, from which he had been suffering for some time. Capt. D. C. Hennessy, station staff officer, is officiating as superintendent in his place.—Pioneer.

THE PRINCES OF BENGAL.—From Moorshedabad we learn that Saiad Iskandar Ali Mirza Sahib Bahadur, better known as "Sultan Sahib," one of the numerous sons of the titular Nawab Nazim of Bengal, has preferred a request to be attached to the staff of the general officer commanding the Afghanistan expeditionary force. Many native princes will watch the Sultan Sahib's career with interest should he really be granted the opportunity he has so pluckily sought of taking the field with a British column.—Times of India.

DEATH OF A JOCKEY.—A fatal accident occurred on the night of Sept. 28 at the Khaga station of the East Indian Railway. Mr. Williamson, a jockey, travelling in charge of some of Mr. Wheal's racehorses from Puna to Meerut, fell out of the train on the platform and was killed on the spot.—Pioneer.

SIMLA.—Captain Judge, governor of the Military Prison at Lucknow, has been placed under arrest by General Crawford Chamberlain, but the specific charges brought against him are unknown.

THE MURDER OF CAPTAIN PEMBERTON.—KHUNDA, OCT. 9.—The monotony of this station was disturbed yesterday by the murder of a European official of rank by a fanatical Mahometan Captain Pemberton, the Deputy Commissioner of the Nimar district, had in the morning been with the Bishop of Calcutta consecrating the Kundwa graveyard. He left there about 8 a.m., accompanied by the native assistant commissioner, Mr. Baskchand, and Mr. Ker, an engineer in the Holkar State Railway. Fifteen minutes' walk brought them to a reservoir, which is being built by the municipality. Whilst inspecting this a bullet whistled past the ear of Mr. Baskchand, followed by a second, which, fortunately, also missed its aim. Captain Pemberton, turning round, saw a Mahometan behind a tree, and made towards him to disarm him. The man fired, hitting the deputy commissioner behind the ear and causing him to fall. Whilst Captain Pemberton was struggling on the ground the murderer fired a second shot which caused almost instant death. He then most leisurely walked away with a revolver in each hand, shouting out he would shoot the first man that approached him. Mr. Ker followed him a little to get men to identify him, and then went to get police to arrest him. The station muccadam, Badel Bictoor, made towards the man, who threatened to shoot him, and asked to be allowed to proceed quietly to his house. The muccadam bravely closed with him, and the murderer shot him in the mouth and right lung. The natives then secured the murderer. assistant commissioner, it is said, told the petitioner that any objection about the removal of the stones could be heard from the owner of them only; but as he (Ahmed) had no concern in the matter, his petition could not be entertained. On this he determined to be revenged. He had by him two six-chamber revolvers, which he states he purchased some months ago. On the morning of the murder he loaded these and carried cartridges to fill the chambers as they became empty. He first went to the station platform, and asked of a policeman whether he had seen Baskchand. Receiving a reply in the negative, he made for the spot where the murder was committed and got behind a tree. He had to remain there for about an hour before his intended victims appeared. He shot first at Mr. Baskchand and then at Captain Pemberton in the manner already described. On searching his house the police found two Enfield rifles loaded with two bullets each, and a hundred rounds of pistol and rifle ammunition. The murderer stated that he intended getting into the house, barricading himself, and then shooting every one that approached him. His anxiety to get into the house was thereby made clear. He was not in the least penitent for the crime, and expressed sorrow that he had not murdered more persons. In the evening the remains of Captain Pemberton were interred with military honours, the G.I.P. Railway Volunteers supplying a firing party. The Lord Bishop of Calcutta conducted the burial service, assisted by his secretary and the Rev. A. O'Neil. At the close Dr. Johnson made a most impressive speech. To the natives who could understand what he was saying, he said he would impress on them that Englishmen gloried in having one of their countrymen thus sacrificing himself to duty. At sunrise the deceased had walked round that piece of ground into which they were burying him at sunset. He was but one of the many thousands of Englishmen who had been sacrificed for this great land for which he yet foresaw a happy future.—Pioneer.

COURSE OF MUSKETRY.—The returns of the past annual course of musketry for the British and native troops in the Bengal Presidency have just been published in general orders, from which we see that in the cavalry the 13th Hussars comes first with a figure of merit of 31.99; Private J. Millar, of the 4th Hussars, being the best individual shot with 74, a score which was, however, tied by Private J. Warren, of the 15th Hussars. In the infantry, the 85th Foot head the list with a figure of merit of 120.87, the 2-60th coming next with 119.87, and the 1-25th running the latter very close with 119.11. The best individual shot was Sergeant A. Salmond, of the 72nd Highlanders, who scored 200, and the best shot amongst the officers was Captain P. F. Robertson, of the 92nd Highlanders, with a score of 129.26. In the cavalry, 1,529 trained soldiers and 35 recruits were exercised, and in the infantry 21,707 trained soldiers and 1,591 recruits. In the native cavalry, the 11th Bengal Lancers comes first with a figure of merit of 49.45; Private Ibrahim Beg, of the 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, being the best shot with 116 points. The 12th Native Infantry heads the list with a figure of merit of 104.47, Havildar Gungadeen Rai, of the 42nd Assam Light Infantry, being the best individual shot with a score of 186 with the Snider rifle. He is also the best shot in the native army of the three presidencies, and has obtained the Government reward of Rs. 100 and a silver medal.—Bombay Gazette.

INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—A Sukkur correspondent writes:—"The southern section of this line was opened on the 1st inst. to Radhan, 73 miles south of Sukkur. A further extension could not be made owing to some breaks lower down. On the northern section the breaks have all been made good, and traffic is running through to Mooltan. A singular accident took place at Rohie a few days ago. In passing some locomotives to the Sukkur side, the assistant engineer had a line laid from the bank to two flats, which were fastened together, and rails laid across them for the engine to move on. The short piece of line from the bank to the flats was on a fair incline, but, in order to overcome the dead weight of the engine, the rails were greased. The heavy bogie engine was pushed up to the river bank by coolies, but, the moment the wheels took the incline to the flats, it started swiftly down the greased plane. No provision had been made to keep the engine in hand; there was not even a single rope fastened to its shore end to check its downward movement, and nothing whatever to ease it gently on to the flats. The consequence was that down went the engine upon the flats, and off over the other side, head first into the River Indus, in about thirty feet of water. So much for 40,000 rupees worth of first-class machinery."—Pioneer.

UPENDRO NATH BOSE.—The Bengalee (a Calcutta native paper) understands that, on the eve of his departure from India, Mr. Justice Markby received a pathetic appeal from the mother of Upendro Nath Bose, who is now undergoing imprisonment for adultery. The honourable gentleman has recommended the release of Upendro Nath, and condemned the section of the Penal Code which makes adultery a penal offence in India.—Pioneer.

DISTRESS IN DACCA.—At a meeting held in the Bengal Theatre, Dacca, on Sept. 28, the Officiating Commissioner of the Division said he did not think the present scarcity sufficiently serious to justify Government relief. A letter also was read from a Mahomedan gentleman, who, with great liberality, has come forward to the help of the poor. The meeting appointed a committee of gentlemen to devise relief means were they actually needed. There is no doubt a good deal of suffering amongst the poor, which has probably been exaggerated, however; but we agree with the Dacca Commissioner that if private benevolence can meet the wants of the Dacca poor, that will be preferable to Government relief. It would seem as if private liberality would be quite equal to the emergency.—Indian Daily News.

RELIEF RETURNS.—The relief returns for the week ending Sept. 28 show the following totals:—Relief works: N.W. Provinces, 27,692; Oudh, 3,181. Poorhouses: N.W. Provinces, 12,657; Oudh, 2,981.—Pioneer.

BRITON AND BURMAN.—If we are to believe the Moulmein Advertiser, the Deputy Commissioner of that district insists on natives kneeling when they come before him. The Advertiser naively observes that in the case of peons, &c., this is not objectionable, but in the case of old gazetted officials, like the Akoonwoon, such a mark of respect need scarcely be demanded.—Indian Daily News.

THE PRESS IN DACCA.—One newspaper is published in Myensingh and six at Dacca. The sub-divisional officers, who are chiefly native gentlemen, are unanimous in declaring that the Vernacular Press has no influence whatever in the interior. The tone of the Dacca native papers is similar to that of the Vernacular Press generally. Their columns abound in free criticism of the acts of Government, expressed frequently in most offensive language, but more, the Commissioner thinks, from ignorance of how to write strongly without being abusive than from disloyal intention. The sub-divisional officer at Bamunkand says that he does not believe that fifty persons in this sub-division, with a population of 400,000, ever see a paper. Kishoregunge sub-divisional officer says that when papers are taken in it is more for show than for actual reading.—Friend of India.

PORT OF CALCUTTA.—A plan for doubling the Port Commissioners' tramway from Chitpore road to Gossipore, and making additional sidings, at a total cost of Rs. 76,539, has been sanctioned by the Government of Bengal.—Friend of India.

CHITTAGONG COLLEGE.—Shaik Rohinulla, a wealthy zemindar in the district of Chittagong, has made a donation of Rs. 1,500 for the maintenance of the Chittagong College, of rupees one hundred for prizes to be given to the successful students at the next annual examination, and of rupees fifty for a gold medal to be given to that boy of the college who will stand first in the ensuing first Arts Examination.—Friend of India.

THE CORPS OF GUIDES.—A Peshawur correspondent describes a visit to the camp of the Queen's Own Guides, near Nowshera. The commanding officer, Col. Jenkins, "is a man of noble presence, whose personal qualifications amply bear out the reputation he has made for himself as the commanding officer of a double corps of cavalry and infantry, one of the finest in the world. When on the march it is his habit every evening to visit every part of the camp, and to inspect personally the condition of the horses and men. I was permitted to accompany him on his inspection; the chargers, all in tip-top condition, were picketed in lines along the west side of the camp—not one of them had a gall or a rub. If the smallest sore appears on one of them after a day's march the rider is not allowed to mount him again until the sore is healed. A similar rule applies to the mules. The Queen's Own Corps of Guides consists of about 1,100 men, though owing to the absence of 80 many on furlough the present strength is only 800, including 500 foot and 300 horse. The men consist of Afridis, Pathans, Ghoorkhas, some Cabulees, and I believe a few Hindustanees—many of them magnificent fellows, well-knit, tall, and well set up. The mule-drivers are mostly from Central Asia; men whose features certainly show a Mongolian origin, who have been attached to the corps for years, and are considered faithful."—Times of India.

There is some doubt as to whether the Alexandra Bridge, over the Chenab will bear the strain of the heavier carriages employed in the broad gauge. Col. Bonus, chief engineer, was to leave Rawal Pindi on October 2 to subject the bridge to a severe test.—Times of India.

The Port Canning and Land Improvement Company, at the recent general meeting held in October, declared a dividend of Rs. 15 per share.—Pioneer.

THE CABUL MISSION.—All the horses, &c., that were to have been taken up by the Cabul Mission were sold by auction on the 1st October at Peshawur. A Rawal Pindi correspondent says that some very good cattle were offered for sale and fetched high prices.—Times of India.

A DETECTIVE MICROPHONE.—A gentleman living near Calcutta has discovered a new practical use for the microphone, which promises to render it more useful in the detection of crime than our police are ever likely to be. Having for some time missed oil from his godown, he fixed up a microphone near the oil can, carrying the wire upstairs to his bedroom, and, after the house had been closed for the night, sat up to await the result. He was not long waiting before he heard the clinking of bottles followed by the gurgling sound of liquid being poured from one receptacle to another. Hastening down, he caught his bearer in flagrante delicto filling small bottles with oil for easy conveyance from the premises.—Times of India.

ARAKAN HILL TRACTS.—News travels slowly in the Arakan Hill Tracts. On the 13th of July last the Arakan News published a report of a raid having been made on the 29th of June by some Khyen tribes upon a village in our territory. Full particulars of the raid have only just been received, from which it appears that "on the 20th of June last the villages of Bweliah and Hepsor, tributary to Upper Burma, raided the village of Manten, tributary to the British Government. The raided village is situated on a tributary of the Tayiedie Chyoung, four days' journey from Akyab. Eleven captives were carried off, one of whom was drowned on the way to the raided village. On the 12th July the superintendent of police, Mr. Porter, left for the scene of the raid, and after negotiations which extended over a period of nearly two months, recovered the whole of the captives early in September. Both the superintendent of police, the deputy commissioner, who joined him a month later, and the police force accompanying them, underwent a great deal of exposure and hardship, being encamped the whole of the two months in bamboo huts in the dense and malarious jungles of the Hill Tracts. The police force suffered so severely from sickness that fully half their number had to return to Akyab. Six of the raiders have been arrested, and will, it is hoped, be proceeded against.—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

STATION TALK.—WHAT MADRAS WANTS.

THE general tendencies of young Englishmen, both in and out of the services, seems to grow day by day more effeminate, and thus it is that hunting, shooting, cricket, and boating are either abandoned altogether, or taken up by quite the minority of the young fellows you meet. In the army this falling off in the old form of "boy" is painfully apparent. The senior officers tell you that they never get a youngster now-a-days who can do anything. The lads that join the service under the existing pernicious regulations have nearly all been the victims of the cram system, and have in that way lost the zeal they may have acquired for sport during their school days. Having devoted their spare time during the two most important years of their pre-adult existence to tobacco, billiards, looting, and trashy novels, they are, when they join, absolutely incapable of taking a part in athletic pastime of any kind. Madras was formerly a great place, considering the climate, for cricket. The names of Sir Frederick Haines and Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, with many a long score attached to them, are to be seen to this day in the club records, amongst those of a host of other cricketers of Indian and English renown. But the game has languished sadly during the last eight years or so. What Madras really wants is a gymkhana. We have only to follow the example of Bombay. Beauty in the Western capital condescends to encourage muscular Christianity. She watches cricket or football with an exquisite assumption of interest, and when the light fades, and the game is over, submits her little foot to her favourite athlete, who fondly binds the latches of her skates, and rinks the evening away with her on the boarded floor of the gymkhana pavilion. The now melancholy chalet which marks the spot where the Madras cricket club once flourished has still sufficient ground in front of it for two or three excellent lawn-tennis courts; there is plenty of room to the south of it for a new cricket ground, round which a running path for athletic sports might be carried, and the Spartan band of golf players might there find an ampler and more diversified field for their game than the island round which they now practise. If taken in hand at once the coming N.E. monsoon ought to be favourable to the undertaking, and by January next Madras would possess a charming rendezvous for at least two or three days in the week.—Madras Correspondent of the Pioneer.

RAINFALL.—Cuddapah has been during the recent monsoon a centre of excessive rainfall. It has received 38.97 inches since the 1st of July, the normal amount for the three months of July, August, and September being 13.6 inches. It is one of several examples of the tendency to the recurrence of similar meteorological conditions and actions for lengthened periods in India. This principle of repetition or recurrence, due to the persistence of abnormal variations of pressure and of air motion will, says Mr. Eliot, probably be found of peculiar value in forecasting the weather of India.—Pioneer.

EMPERESS OF INDIA.—The Madras Government having observed from judicial proceedings from time to time coming under their observation that portions of the record are frequently headed "Empress," or "Empress of India," or "Imperatrix," versus the accused persons on trials and inquiries before sessions judges and magistrates and investigations before the police, his Grace the Governor in Council has resolved to call the attention of all officials concerned to the Royal Proclamation published on page 3 of the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated January 1, 1877, from which it will be seen that no authority has been granted for the omission of the title of "Queen," or "Regina," and that the words "Empress of India," or "Indiæ Imperatrix," according as the English or Latin tongue may be used, are made an addition to the style and titles of the Crown.—Pioneer.

THE LATE SERGEANT SELBY.—The death of Sergeant Selby, 14th Hussars, is announced to have taken place off Malta. The deceased, who had lately become qualified for a commission, was on his way to England to receive his appointment, but succumbed to abscess of the liver when within a few days' steam of home. Sergeant Selby was a son of Major-General Selby, who commanded the Mysore division from 1865 to 1870, and formerly held an appointment in the Bengal Presidency as assistant superintendent of police.—Madras Mail.

PONDICHERY.—M. Trillard, the Governor of Pondicherry, more euphoniously the Governor General of the French settlements in India, has been recalled, and will leave for France by the steamer of the 27th Nov. The ordonnateur, M. Nesty, will act as governor ad interim.—Madras Athenæum.

FAMINE ORPHANS.—Collectors are directed by the Madras Government to impress on their tahsildar and other native officers the great importance of ascertaining the friends and relations of the orphans now on the Government in their respective districts. The particular attention of the collector of Bellary, North Arcot, has been drawn to this subject.—Times of India.

A MALDIVE TRADER.—The B.I.S.N. s.s. Mecca, on her return voyage to Calcutta, and in latitude 18.1, long. 91.27, came across a Maldiv trader with thirty-two men on board. The crew had been out for some days and were without provisions when rescued by the Mecca.—Times of India.

VACANCY IN MADRAS COUNCIL.—Sir William Robinson will retire from the service early in December. It is said that no provisional member of the Council has yet been nominated by the Secretary of State, but the appointment, according to the Madras Mail, lies between Mr. G. A. Ballard, First Member of the Board of Revenue, Mr. R. A. Dalzell, now a member of the Council to the Secretary of State, and Mr. D. F. Carmichael, Chief Secretary to the Madras Government, who is the junior of the three.—Times of India.

MARKS IN MYSORE.—Some curious customs as to signature exist in Mysore. A native who cannot write affixes the sign of the occupation. A cultivator makes a mark like a plough, with two dots for bullocks, a cartdriver signs with a wheel, a barber with a razor. Women make a round mark supposed to represent a bangle.—Times of India.

BOMBAY.

THE PUNA HORSE SHOW, 1878.

PUNA, Sept. 26.—The Puna horse show for the year 1878 was opened last evening at Wanowrie by his Excellency Sir Richard Temple. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was also present, with a large number of European and native gentlemen. The entries of horses were not so numerous as in former years, but deficiency of numbers was, according to the best judges, more than counterbalanced by decided superiority in quality. After all the horses had been looked at by his Excellency the party assembled together, when Mr. Norman read his report. He said that, owing to the famine, the show was not held last year in Puna; that the number of horses exhibited this year was much smaller than in 1876, yet the breed and quality of the horses exhibited this year were superior and higher than in 1876. Mr. Norman, after a few other remarks, concluded his report. Afterwards his Excellency the Governor made an appropriate speech. He said that the horses in the army of Sivaji were very superior and high bred; that such horses could not have been seen a few years ago in the ranks of the British cavalry; that with the exertions of the collectors and other Europeans his Excellency thought that the horses now bred from Deccan horses and Arab stallions were as good as those in Sivaji's army or that of any other native prince; and his Excellency hoped that in future the horses would still further improve in breed and excel those of Sivaji's army. His Excellency further said that there would be no need for the Government of India to order horses from Arabia, Persia, and other countries beyond the sea if good horses could be bred in this country. That to promote the breed and give encouragement to the native dealers it is advisable and politic that European gentlemen should endeavour to purchase horses from among those bred in this country. They would then try and bring horses to the show in hopes of getting a ready sale for them. After the speech was over, his Excellency the Governor turned his steps towards the native owners who had brought horses for exhibition, and native owners were assembled together at the direction of the Governor. As his Excellency could not speak Marathi, he asked Mr. Venayek Wassodeo, oriental translator, to explain to the assembled native owners what he said to them in English. His Excellency warned them that they spoiled their horses by using them when they were only two and three years old. This, his Excellency said, was a great mistake; the horses should not be used before they were four years old. He advised them to fix the proper value on their horses and not to have a large price first and then sell at a low price. He said that the Government would be glad to take horses bred in this country for the army, instead of having those that come from Persia, Arabia, and other foreign countries.—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

ST. GEORGE GOLF MEDAL.—The annual contest for this medal, which was advertised to come off two months ago, but postponed on account of the heavy and continuous rain, was competed for by eight players on Sept. 30 and the two following days. The medal was won by Bentley with a score of 212, Moulton being second with 3 points more, thereby securing second prize, a set of clubs.—Bombay Gazette.

PARSEE VOLUNTEERS.—The reply of the Secretary to Government to Mr. Cowasie Dorabjee's application for enrolment in a volunteer corps informs that gentleman that none but Europeans or Eurasians can be enrolled in the Bombay Volunteers, but that it was understood that the G.I.P.R. Volunteers might admit natives of India.—Bombay Gazette.

COMPULSORY POISONING IN KARACHI.—An inquest was held by Major A. T. Spens, the cantonment magistrate, in the hospital of the Royal Artillery, on September 21, on view of the body of driver Stratton, D-2 R.A., who had been found dead that morning near the 83rd lines, by a soldier of that regiment. The soldier reported the matter, and the surgeon of the regiment came and examined the corpse, which was removed by his directions to the Royal Artillery Hospital, where a post-mortem examination was made, from which it clearly appeared that the unfortunate man had died from the effects of over-drinking, and the court of inquest unanimously recorded the opinion that "the deceased met his death from alcoholic poisoning." This melancholy case leads us to inquire how this poor fellow could have procured the "poison" at night? Now, there are certain places in the camp where soldiers are apt to go, and there are native liquor shops in very close proximity to these alleys, and of course there is nothing to prevent the creatures who inhabit these houses getting any quantity of liquid poison. As long as native dram shops are allowed in the Suddur limits it will be impossible to check this evil; and under the system by which native liquor (of the vilest character necessarily) is manufactured under the yearly contracts now given out by the collector, we must see that all the contractor cares for is to encourage drinking as much as possible by offering every facility for obtaining his poison. What filth the native liquor is made from—foul dates, babur bark, poisonous drugs, &c.—may be better conceived than described. We believe there was some little check upon it when the manufacture was confined to Government distilleries, but now there can be none.—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE STUDY OF AGRICULTURE.—The desire of the Governor of Bombay to induce Parsees and other natives to study the science of agriculture seems likely to lead to more definite results than were anticipated at the time when his Excellency delivered his speech on this subject at Nowserree. Some time ago it will be remembered Sir Richard Temple applied to the Government of Madras for the loan of the services of Mr. W. R. Robertson, head of the Agricultural Department in that presidency. A favourable answer was given to the request, and we now learn that Mr. Robertson will proceed next week on a visit to Sir R. Temple at Mahabeshwur with the view of lending his valuable aid to the Governor in maturing a scheme of agricultural education for Bombay. Should his Excellency's plan be carried out Bombay will not only possess an experimental farm, but a chair for agriculture in the university, and a system of agricultural tuition in some of the schools. The Madras Agricultural College and Sydapet Experimental Farm were recently visited by Mr. Sheppard, C.S., and other officials of this presidency.—Times of India.

THE NEW RETIREMENT WARRANT.—Owing to the new warrant on the retirement of the Royal Engineers and the Royal Artillery several of the officers serving in this presidency will be compelled to forfeit the appointments recently conferred upon them. Amongst these officers are Colonel Hailes and Colonel MacLachlan, adjutant-general of the Artillery; and the case of the latter is particularly hard, as he has many years before him as regards age and activity, and his brevet promotion, which was for good service, must now tell bitterly against him.—Times of India.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—Instead of selecting young natives from Government schools and colleges for the Forest Department, the Bombay Government have decided to hold a public competition, to which matriculated students alone of any recognised university are admissible, as it would be difficult for students with an insufficient knowledge of English to follow the lectures of the college professors. The limits of age are fixed at 16 and 22, and certificates of physical and constitutional fitness must be produced.—Times of India.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MAJOR G. M. LYONS.—It is our painful duty to record the death of Major George Maughan Lyons, second in command of the Marine Battalion, which occurred on the 13th ult., at the Marine Lines. The deceased officer, who before the previous day had never suffered a day's illness in this country, was apparently in excellent health at one o'clock; at four he was dead, his death being ascribed to heart disease. Those who were present at the Apollo Bunder, just a week ago, when Sir Charles Staveley embarked, will recollect seeing there Major Lyons, who was in command of the party of troops lining the street from the Sailors' Home to the Bunder. The deceased entered the service on Jan. 20, 1853, obtaining his lieutenantancy in 1856, and his captaincy ten years afterwards. He gained his present rank in January, 1873, and had his career not been so suddenly cut short, would at the beginning of next year have become lieutenant-colonel. During the Mutiny he served under Sir Hugh Rose, in the Central Indian Campaign, being present at the siege and capture of Ratghur, the Battle of Betwa, and the siege and capture of Jhansi. He was forty-three years of age, and unmarried. His death will be greatly lamented by all who knew him, but particularly by a select circle of bachelor friends in Bombay. The funeral takes place this morning at Sewree.—Bombay Gazette.

JOURNALISM.—Mr. Malcolm M'Pherson, who has been connected with the Bombay Gazette for more than seven years, has been appointed to represent the Standard as special correspondent in the expected campaign.

BOMBAY MUNICIPAL LOAN.—The Bank of Bengal has tendered for the loan of twenty-seven lakhs of rupees (£2,700,000) advertised by the Bombay Municipality, and intended to be applied to carrying out an improved system of drainage for the city, at 98½. When the loan was first advertised it was expected that the money would be forthcoming in Bombay at 5 per cent. at par, but the City of Glasgow Bank failure had so much effect on local houses that the whole of the tenders sent in from Bombay did not amount to more than one lakh and half of rupees.—Bombay Gazette.

Field Parks.

It is with deep regret that we announce the death of Mr. James P. Allen, the senior partner in the firm of Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co., of 13, Waterloo-place. This event, though somewhat sudden, cannot be said to have been unexpected, since the state of Mr. Allen's health has for upwards of two years been so precarious as to preclude his taking any active part in the business with which he had been for twelve years associated.

THE NORTH-WESTERN FRONTIER OF INDIA.

NO. III.

For the northern frontier of Afghanistan, or that important half of it to which the name "Cabul" most especially applies, the ethnology is simpler than that of the Cashmirian frontier. The importance, however, of the districts that belong to it is greater.

The line of 72 east longitude, between 34 degrees and 41 degrees north latitude, is a good landmark for this area, which it nearly bisects. It also contains the Hindukhus, the Zarafshan, and the Alai Tagh ranges, as well as the three great rivers—the Indus, the Oxus, and the Jaxartes. Of these, the second has its source within the area; and it is along the valley of the Oxus that we find the most characteristic varieties of the class under notice. We can begin at its very source. At its source, and for some distance below, the banks are not fit for any permanent residence, and merely serve for a summer pasture to the migratory Kirghiz, who are Turks. The Tibetan yak is known here, and Wood saw a Kirghiz boy riding on one. The language is Persian, but decidedly provincial. After Wokan, where the population is counted by the hundred, come Shignan and Roshan with a common dialect; but one which is less provincial than the Wakhan. Then comes Durwaz, where the language approaches that of Badakshan; which is the ordinary Persian; while the Turk admixture is at a minimum. It is in Durwaz that the royal family—such as it is—claims a descent from the Macedonians of Alexander the Great; and this is probably the most outlying district in which this special and characteristic belief presents itself. Then come, on the south west, Badakshan and Bamian, and here we have the contact of the Uzbek Turks, probably of recent origin. Here, too, we have remains of an ancient architecture, with legends to match. In these last the name of Noah is the most conspicuous one. They cannot be given in detail, but they are evidently of high antiquity. West of Bamian we get into the Turk districts, Uzbek or Turcomanian, as the case may be; and, besides these, that of the Hazarehs, who are probably Mongol in blood, though, with the exception of one Aymauk, the language is Persian. Beyond Durwaz lies Karatigin, which is Persian; and east and south east what seems to be the Kutluk of Baber, a steppe, or at least a dry and thinly-inhabited block of land, which runs up to the borders of Chinese Turkestan (Kashgaria). Such is the Persia of the Upper Oxus (Amur). In Bokhara and Samarcand the vernacular language is Persian (Sart), the late government Turk (Uzbek).

On the parallel drainage to the north, or that of the Jaxartes (Sir-Darya), the watershed is formed by the Zarafshan and Alai Tagh range, and the Turkish is the dominant language. Nevertheless, in the time of Baber, and according to his own royal statement, the two districts of Zarafshan and Marghinan were Persian in language. Upon the whole, however, the Sir-Darya is a Turkish river.

In Bamian, however, we get a notice of several characteristic superstitions, Persian, Indian, Hebrew, Egyptian, and what? There Æons and Cycles, and Dyads and Triads, and incarnations, and destructions, and reconstructions of the world, and giants, the exact duration of which, from the time of Moh, the husband, and Mabun, the wife, with whom began the race of giants, and the wilderness, to that Koorkush, or Cyrus, and Khoondroo (Iskander), or Alexander the Great, is thirty-six thousand years. And here this strange chronology ends, as in such and such like cases it always does and always will do. When statements become truly historical and rest upon records the play of imagination is checked, and we can no longer tell impossible stories about impossible beings or make what epochs we like by the simple addition of a few cyphers. However, the approximately thirty-six thousand years which we get by the addition of the first five epochs is anything but arbitrary. The present ruler of Durwaz, as has been stated, considers that he represents a Macedonian dynasty, and the Bottis, of Little Tibet, boast of the same descent. As for the Siaposh—(this is the representative tribe of Kaferistan)—there are learned men even in Europe who give them credit for Macedonian blood, and believe that, if they only knew it, the Siaposh are Franks in disguise.

This represents the half Mahometans. The members, however, of the next group are not Mahometans at all. They are more than this; they are anti-Mahometans. It is easier for a Mussulman of Peshawur or Jellalabad to visit the centre of Africa and return than it is for him to pass a single day on the wrong side of the frontier between Cabul and Kafirland. This is because a Kafir is not recognised as a man until he can give proof of his having killed a Mussulman. A Christian may enter the country; perhaps he may reside in it; perhaps be honoured and respected. Whether he could return from it is not so certain.

The most current piece of knowledge about this very peculiar people is the extent to which the name and fame of the Great Alexander of Macedon, or Iskander, the Conqueror of India, has taken root. Twenty, ten, five, or even two years ago, the political relations of the district were nearly as simple as its ethnology. With the exception of the Kafirs, the population, so far as it was other than Turk or independent, was Afghan; and, so far as the Afghans went with England, Balk, Bamian, Badakshan, and other less important districts went with the Afghans. There were, doubtless, a few difficulties in this respect between ourselves and the Russians when any question as to the frontier presented itself; but the greater part of the area was recognised by Russia as Afghan, and, consequently, as such, to be put in the same category in respect to non-interference on the part of Russia with Afghanistan itself. But now, when Afghanistan is gravitating towards Russia, the extent to which its appendages will do, or will not do the same, is a matter which requires our closest observation, and, with the resolution on our part, that in no case whatever shall it go beyond a certain point. We cannot, perhaps, in the first instance, get this, but sooner or later the two frontiers should be made to meet; for nothing is less tolerable than a system of semi-independent States that live upon the mutual jealousies of the rival States and make capital out of their quarrels.

Two interim dividends of 1¼ per cent. each, amounting to £49,937, have been distributed, leaving the sum of £24,323 to be carried forward to the next half-year. The Telegraphic Conference, referred to in the last report, was held at Melbourne in May last, when the question of duplicating the Australian cable was fully discussed, the result being that the Governments of Victoria and New South Wales were empowered to enter into an agreement with the company for a second cable between Singapore and Australia for an annual subsidy of £32,400, payable for twenty years. Negotiations have since been carried on with the representatives of the Governments, which the directors have the satisfaction of stating have resulted in an agreement on the above basis, the terms of which will be submitted for confirmation to the extraordinary general meeting to be held at the conclusion of the ordinary general meeting, together with resolutions empowering the directors to carry the same into effect. The importance of this duplication as a protection of the company's traffic will, it is believed, be apparent to the shareholders. The fresh capital required is £660,000, which the directors propose to raise by the issue of debentures redeemable within twenty years.

INTEMPERANCE IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—From a report on sanitary measures in India, just presented to Parliament, it appears that the statistics of intemperance among European soldiers were, on the whole, more favourable during the past year, as the number of cases reported in Bengal, which in 1874 was 10,988, fell in the two succeeding years to 8,926 and 7,136; but the number of total abstainers was 20 per cent. less in 1876 than in 1875. In Bombay, with an improvement, though slight, in regard to drunkenness, there was an increase of 22 per cent. in the number of total abstainers. In Madras, on the other hand, there was an increase of drunkenness, and also an increase of over 40 per cent. in the number of abstainers. The Army Sanitary Commission consider that 264 out of the total number of 886 deaths in the whole of the European army must be ascribed, directly or indirectly, to the effect of intemperate habits.

STORES FOR INDIA.—The Government of India have during the week embarked a large cargo of stores from the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, in the steamship Duke of Buccleuch, which is appointed to sail from the South West India Docks for India to-day (Saturday). The consignment includes several forge wagons and other transport vehicles, and a number of service field guns and howitzers, with ammunition, shells, and appliances of the latest and most approved manufacture. The Arsenal authorities are also forwarding, per Penguin, stores to various parts of India, including a number of large guns for mounting in position. These, however, are not proposed to be sent to the North Western Frontier, but are chiefly intended for Colombo, Trincomalee, and Point de Galle.

TEA FROM CEYLON.—Two small parcels of tea from Ceylon were sold at the public tea sales on Monday at a fairly satisfactory price. This is the first instance of tea grown in Ceylon being placed on the London market.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The result of the tenders for the 40 lakhs of rupees in Council drafts on India, on Wednesday last, was the sale of 12 lacs, drawn in equal proportions on Calcutta and Bombay, at an average rate of 18.7½d. per rupee. Tenders were sent in for a large amount below this figure, which appears to have been made a minimum by the authorities. Only enough was apparently sold to meet current demands for the purchase of stores, and the forthcoming influx of the bank paper lately bought on the other side will assist the Government. In striking out a decided course and refusing to allot under 18.7½d. the Indian Council are right, as the loss to the country is sufficiently great even at that rate. Tenders for £200,000 in Government bills on India will be received at the Bank of England on Wednesday next, of which not more than £80,000 will be drawn on the Government of Bombay. The power reserved by Clause 3 of the advertisement of the 23rd August, 1876, in regard to sums recently advertised, for which tenders have not been accepted, will not be exercised on that occasion.

IMPORTS OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Malwa is due at Southampton on Monday, and brings £46,730, of which about £24,840 is in bar gold, from Bombay and Alexandria, £46,610 in gold and silver, and £120 in sovereigns from Aden.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—It is not thought probable that the services of the 17th Lancers will be required in India, though the regiment is to be available for service if required, and would be sent out at once should cavalry reinforcements be applied for. Captain Godfrey Clerk, Rifle Brigade, having proceeded to England to assume command of his battalion on promotion, Captain St. Vincent A. Hammick, 43rd Regiment, is acting as military secretary to Sir Neville Chamberlain in the present crisis, and is to be confirmed in the appointment.—Colonel R. Preston, 44th Regiment, accompanies

Sir Frederick Paul Haines to Afghanistan as military secretary, and Captain Hugh Grant, 78th Highlanders, as senior aide-de-camp.—The health of General Sir Edwin Johnson having greatly improved, he will return to India early next year, to relieve General Sir Samuel Browne as military member of the Governor-General's Council.

DRAFTS FOR INDIA.—The Malabar, Indian troopship, sailed from Portsmouth yesterday (Friday), with orders to call at Plymouth, with the following drafts for India:—Major Gare, Capt. Burt, Lieuts. Phillips, Jackson, and Allsopp, and 87 men belonging to the 1st Battery, 8th Brigade, R.A., from Shoeburyness; Capt. Spottiswood and 71 men belonging to the 10th Hussars, stationed at Canterbury; Capt. Beck, Lieut. Douglas, and 52 men of the 15th Hussars, stationed at Canterbury; Lieut. Caradini and 6 men of the 8th Hussars, from Shorncliffe; Capt. Brind and Michel, Lieuts. Allfrey and Clarke, and 161 men of the 17th Foot, from Shorncliffe; Lieut. Addison and 16 men of the 9th Brigade, R.A., from Dover; Lieut. Fleming and 23 men of the 4th Brigade, R.A., from Leith Fort; Capt. Carter and Denshire, and 184 men of the 51st Foot, from Pontefract and the Channel Islands; Capt. Chalmer, Lieut. Lovett, and 155 men of 2-60 Foot, from Fort Nelson; Major Collins, Capt. Brander, Lieut. Freeman, and 162 men of the 70th Regt., from Fleetwood; 2 men of the 2-6th Regt., at Warwick; and 5 men belonging to the Indian Staff Corps. The following will embark at Plymouth to-day (Saturday):—Major Lluellyn, Capt. Smyth, Lieuts. Champion, Hopkins, and Arbuthnot, and 87 men of the 5th Battery, 8th Brigade, R.A.; Major Goodenough, Capt. Freeman, Lieuts. De Dewar, Brereton, and Boothby, and 87 men of the 6th Battery, 8th Brigade, R.A.; and Lieut. Kuper and a draft of 13 men, R.A. Besides the above, the following individual officers take outward passage:—From Portsmouth:—Lieut.-Col. Peel Yates, R.A.; Lieut.-Col. Blundell, 3rd Hussars; Lieut. Templer, 13th Foot; Major Baker, 12th Foot; Surg.-Majors Scott, D'Altera, and Patterson, and Surgeons Frazer, McLaughlin, and Brown, A.M.D.; Quartermaster Bayley, 14th Foot; Major Frampton, 59th Foot; Major Wood, 4th Rifle Brigade; Capt. Fife, 6th Dragoon Guards; Capt. Jervoise, 3rd Hussars; Lieut. Fleming, 4th Brigade, Royal Artillery; Lieut. Rivett-Carnac, 43rd Foot; Lieut. Grenfell, 10th Hussars; Lieut. Watson, 17th Foot; Lieuts. Agnew and Smythe, 21st Foot; Lieut. Heygate, 34th Foot; Lieuts. Milton, Thackwell, and Thurlow, 51st Foot; Lieut. Henderson, 65th Foot; Lieut. Davies, 70th Foot; Lieuts. Macdonald, Robertson, and Sunderland, 72nd Foot; Lieuts. Thomas and Young, 81st Foot; Lieuts. Dawkins and Wilbraham, 85th Foot; Lieut. Westropp, 83rd Foot; Lieut.-Col. Barnes and Lieut. Carthew-Yorstoun, 73rd Foot; Lieuts. Smith and McDonald, R.A.; Capt. McCausland, 25th Foot; Captain Marriott, 6th Dragoon Guards; and Lieut.-Col. Collins, 60th Rifles. From Plymouth:—Lieut.-Col. Brown, 13th Foot; and Lieut. Dobbie, 89th Foot. The Malabar also takes out thirty women and thirty children from Portsmouth, and thirty-one women and thirty-two children from Plymouth. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, the general in command of the district, accompanied by his staff, was on board on Thursday inspecting the accommodation for the troops, and the arrangements for their comfort during the voyage. Under the short-service system the drafts are sent out to India younger than under the old regime. Ample accommodation is provided on board the five white-hulled troopers, the Crocodile, Euphrates, Junna, Malabar, and Serapis, which are of the same size, horse-power, build, and tonnage—viz., 700 horse, 360 feet in length, 49ft. 1in. in breadth; draught of water forward, 16ft. 6in.; ditto aft., 21ft. 7in.; tonnage, 4,137. The stowage of the cumbersome baggage was completed and some live-stock was taken in, including several pigs, designated by a blue-jacket "Hampshire nightingales," which did not take at all kindly to their new quarters. The troops came to the water's edge by the line of rail, and outside the dockyard their arrival did not cause the smallest excitement.

KOPF'S CONSOLIDATED FOODS.—Various attempts to reduce food to the smallest possible compass have been made. We have been led to expect that a meal could be pocketed in the form of a lozenge, and that on the march or on the journey the soldier or the traveller could defy any possible absence of country supplies by the carriage of desiccated compressed provender. But, although preserved provisions and hermetically sealed tins containing all manner of dishes have abounded, a really portable consolidated form of nutritious and palatable food, requiring nothing but fire and water to be served up as a meal to refresh and support nature, has been hitherto a desideratum. We have recently examined and practically tested Messrs. Kopf's consolidated foods, and do not hesitate to say that they supply the want. A little cylinder, looking like a night-light or a piece of cosmetique such as Mr. Ledbury was wickedly led to try as a bon-bon, weighing 2½ oz., and labelled "Erbswurst," or peasoup, in a very short time was converted into a pint of most excellent and nourishing soup. Dr. Hassall says it is "exceedingly" rich in nitrogenous or flesh-forming constituents, as well as those of a phosphatic and bone-forming nature." A stout young Londoner gives as his verdict that he would not mind doing a day's work on a bowl of it. Two such tins per diem would render a man on march independent of the commissariat, and it is reckoned that a camel could carry four days' rations for 1,200 men. A few hard biscuits added would make the hot, rich, savoury soup at morn and even enough for men to march or fight on. We are glad to learn that the War Office authorities have pronounced most favourably on the excellence of Messrs. Kopf's foods, which include mulligatawny and other soups. We can remember days by land and water when the little tins would indeed have been precious acquisitions, and we are sure that the commissariat arrangements of the next campaign, and the supplies of peaceable expeditions, will include them. An improvement which, instead of the present cylindrical, will substitute the square pattern, thus allowing them to be packed in less space, will be soon adopted, and render them all that can desired for convenience and utility.

General David Birrell, late of the Bengal Infantry, attached for upwards of thirty-five years to the Old Bengal European Regt., now Her Majesty's 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers, died on Monday last, in his seventy-ninth year. The deceased officer obtained his commission as ensign on Aug. 30, 1818, and became lieutenant on the 20th of the following Oct. In 1825-26 he served during the Burmese war, for which he received the medal with clasp. He became captain on April 26, 1827, and served with the army of the Indus in Afghanistan in 1839-40, and was present at the assault and capture of Ghuznee and operations in the Wuzere Valley, for which he received a medal of the third class of the Dhoorane Order. He obtained the rank of brevet major Nov. 23, 1841, and major Nov. 10, 1843. In 1845-46 he served in the Sutlej campaign, having a horse killed under him at the battle of Ferozeshah. He afterwards commanded a brigade at the battle of Sobraon, and was rewarded with the medal and clasp and the brevet of lieutenant-col. April 3, 1846. He became lieutenant-col. March 1, 1850; brevet-col., June 20, 1854; major-gen., April 25, 1858; lieutenant-gen., 1870, and gen. 1875.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.—The report of the Board of Oriental Studies, recommending that in the case of Indian candidates for the previous examination they should have the option of being examined in Sanskrit instead of Greek, was confirmed. The votes were—Placets, 55; Non-placets, 14. On the recommendation of the Board of Oriental Studies the Rev. John Sharp, M.A. (Oxon), headmaster of the Noble High School, Masulipatam, was appointed a lecturer in the Telugu language for the present academic year, at a stipend of £100, together with a fee of £3 from each student.—Times.

MARITIME INQUIRY.—A court of inquiry has been held at Penang into the cause of the stranding of the steamship Circe, at Quallah Impah, on July 21. From the evidence it appeared that the ship was not in the position stated by the captain in passing Ujong Rajah Point, and that the ship must have been much nearer to the shore than he imagined. The Court considered that he should have taken precautions to prove where he was in such a night as he described by using the lead as well as the patent log. They therefore thought it necessary to suspend his certificate for six months, with a recommendation that he might be allowed to act during that time as chief mate. The greatest blame, however, in their opinion, was due to the chief mate, to whose immediate fault the loss of the ship was due; he disobeyed the direct orders of the captain by altering the ship's course to halt a point further south, and also showed great carelessness. His certificate was therefore suspended for one year without any recommendation.

The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Nepaul, Capt. J. S. Murray, sailed from Southampton yesterday with the heavy India and China mails, a general cargo, and 206 boxes of specie, jewellery, &c., value £40,028, consigned as follows:—For Malta—bronze coin, £100. For Madras—jewellery, £143. For Calcutta—precious stones, £100. For Penang—dollars, £12,000. For Singapore—dollars, £12,187 10s.; jewellery, £435. For Shanghai—dollars, £2,730. For Yokohama—jewellery, £145. For Hong Kong—dollars, £12,187 10s. The Nepaul takes out 140 passengers, and 82 proceeded by the corresponding steamer from Venice and Brindisi, making a total of 222. The following officers go out in the Nepaul:—Major Calleand, Lieut. A. S. Chapman, Assistant-Commissary F. Jeans, Lieut. W. H. O'Neil, and Surg.-Major J. Colshaw, for Gibraltar; Capt. H. W. Patten, Lieut. E. J. Grant, Lieut. G. Allen, Sub-Lieuts. F. W. Soane, H. L. Bethune, M. E. J. Thompson, J. Curling, and F. M. Martin, for Malta; Lieut. R. J. Simmonds, for Aden; Brigadier-General F. E. Kempster and Col. Beville, for Bombay; Assistant-Commissary F. Heath, for Galle; Col. J. F. Fisher, for Madras; Capt. Cairns and Sub-Lieut. J. F. Stuart, for Hong Kong. The Bishop of Bombay proceeds by the corresponding Brindisi steamer on his way to Bombay; Mr. E. J. Reed, C.B., M.P., and his son, for Yokohama; and also the following military officers:—Major Goodfellow, for Aden; Col. Pritchard, Col. Kettlewell, Major F. J. Smith, Col. Bartholomew, Gen. W. W. Barry, Capt. W. J. Heavyside, Lieut. Col. A. de C. Scott, and Lieut. W. H. C. Wylie, for Bombay. The Nepaul goes through the Suez Canal to Calcutta, passengers for Bombay changing steamers at Suez.

The flag of Admiral Farquhar, the new Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, was hoisted yesterday on board the Cambridge with the usual exchange of salutes.

Her Majesty's Indian troopship Serapis arrived at Port Said on Wednesday.

Battery E of the C Brigade, R.H.A., has been under orders at Woolwich for some time past to proceed to India, but the orders have now been countermanded.

A complete siege train, composed of 6-in. howitzers, 40-pounders, and the several guns, carriages, wagons, and stores which go to make up what is known as a light unit, has been issued from the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, for the use of the army in North West India.

Major W. R. Barlow, R.A., at present in command of No. 10 Battery, 8th Brigade, at Rangoon, is about to return to England to assume the post of assistant superintendent of the Royal Gun Factories, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, in succession to Major J. F. Owen, R.A., whose period of staff service in that office will shortly expire. Major Barlow held the appointment of captain instructor in the Royal Laboratory Department, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, from 1871 to 1875.

Col. C. G. Arbuthnot, C.B., R.A., officiating inspector-general of Ordnance and Magazines in Bengal, has been appointed inspector general of Artillery for India, with the rank of brigadier general, in succession to Brigadier Gen. D. Gaye, R.A., whose period of service has expired. Col. N. G. Campbell, R.A., deputy inspector general of Ordnance and Magazines, Madras Presidency, has been appointed to succeed Col. Arbuthnot as officiating inspector general, Bengal Presidency.

Major W. H. Noble, Royal Artillery, at present occupying the post of secretary to the Special Committee on Ordnance at Simla, has been selected to fill the office of assistant adjutant general of the siege train on the Afghan frontier. Major Noble was formerly secretary of the Ordnance Select Committee at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, and before leaving for India served as British Commissioner at the Philadelphia Exhibition.

The annual issues of gunpowder to the different stations in India are now in course of shipment in the Thames, it being always necessary to supplement the productions of the native powder factories at Ishapore by supplies from home, especially of gunpowder of superior description. A considerable number of gun carriages, limbers, and wagons will shortly be prepared for transport from the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, to the Indian carriage factory, whither they will be sent, as usual, in an unfinished state, as is frequently the case, in order to furnish employment to the native workmen. The climate of India precludes heavy forgings at the arsenals in the different presidencies; consequently most of the iron work is sent out in proper shape from Woolwich. For artillery India is entirely dependent upon the Royal Gun Factory at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich; but in the supply of small arm ammunition the laboratories at Dum Dum, Bengal, and Kirkee, Bombay, are nearly adequate to the supply of the entire Indian Empire.

GENERAL SIR F. P. HAINES, G.C.B.—General Sir Frederick Paul Haines, G.C.B., commander-in-chief of the Indian Army, was aide-de-camp to Lord Gough, commander-in-chief in India, from 1844 to 1845, and on the formation of the army of the Sutlej in the latter year he was appointed to officiate as military secretary to his Excellency, being in that capacity present at the battles of Moodkee and Ferozeshah, for which he received the Sutlej medal and clasp; in the latter engagement he was severely wounded by grapeshot at the attack on the enemy's works, his horse being killed under him at the same moment. At the recommendation of Lord Gough he was promoted to a company in the 10th Foot, without purchase, and in 1846 was confirmed in the office of military secretary to his lordship, under whom he next served in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49. During this campaign he was present at the affair of outposts at Ramnuggur on Nov. 22, 1848, and subsequent operations, resulting in the passage of the Chenab, and the battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat, receiving a medal and two clasps for his services. In 1849 he ceased to be military secretary to Lord Gough on his lordship's resignation of the Indian command. He next served with the 21st Fusiliers (as major) in the Crimean campaign of 1854-55, and took part in the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkerman, and siege of Sebastopol; receiving the Crimean medal with four clasps, the Fifth Class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. From 1856 to 1860 he was military secretary to General Sir Patrick Grant while commander-in-chief of the Madras Presidency, and he was deputy adjutant-general in Ireland from July 1, 1862 till 1864, when he was appointed brigadier general commanding the Dublin district. After holding this position about a year, he was selected to command a division of the Madras Army, and assumed command of the Mysore Division on Jan. 17, 1865, retaining it till 1870. On his return to England in that year he was nominated quartermaster general at the Horse Guards, but in 1871, on the command of the Madras Army becoming vacant by the return to England of General W. A. M'Cleverty, he was selected to fill that position, and took charge of the office May 22, 1871. On the retirement of General Lord Napier of Magdala from the chief command of the Indian Army, Sir Paul Haines was selected to succeed him, and was installed in the office at Calcutta on April 10, 1876.

SPECIAL BOUNTY.—A special circular has been issued to the various regiments under orders to proceed to India offering a gratuity of £2 to all men under the six years' system who will enlist for nine years.

EMIGRATION TO PORT NATAL.—We learn that the British barque Inveravon, commanded by Captain C. Cornwell, which lately arrived in the roads from Port Natal, landed at that port 358 emigrants. The coolies, who went under the medical charge of Apothecary Watson, were all in good health and fit to be sent out at once to the plantations. The Inveravon is likely to be engaged shortly to convey another batch of emigrants to Port Natal.

THE LATE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE BOMBAY ARMY.

THE following general order by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has been issued from the Adjutant General's Office, Headquarters, Puna:—

"On relinquishing the command of the Bombay Army, I desire to express my sense of the assistance and support I have at all times received from general officers commanding divisions and brigades, and commanding officers of corps. My acknowledgements are also due to—Brigadier-General Atchison, C.B., late adjutant-general; Brigadier-General Brooke, adjutant-general; Brigadier-General Burrows, quartermaster-general; Colonel Maude, judge advocate-general; to the whole of the headquarters staff, and to the heads of the commissariat and medical departments. I desire further to express my sense of the uniform good conduct and discipline of the troops, and of their gradual improvement in tactics and musketry. The new system of infantry attack has been introduced since I assumed command, and is now being practised intelligently. A commendable commencement has been made in the instruction of the native officers and non-commissioned officers of cavalry regiments in field sketching. This important part of a cavalry officer's duty will, I hope, be carried out to its fullest extent, and thus greatly add to the usefulness of the native officer when on active service. The instruction of the native army in the use of the rifle is a matter now of first importance, and I have, therefore, noticed with satisfaction the improvement that is taking place in this respect. This improvement can only be sustained and increased by the British officers qualifying themselves to instruct their native officers and men, and therefore, in the absence of a school of musketry in this presidency, I advise them to avail themselves always when on leave in England of the opportunity of going through the course of instruction at Hythe. I have greatly regretted that for financial reasons the troops have not had the advantage of an annual camp of exercise. To make up in some degree for this want, I cannot too strongly urge the manœuvring of one portion of the force at each military station against the other, however small the number of troops may be. The course of garrison instruction which all the younger officers of the army have now passed will render these exercises all the more interesting. I make these recommendations from a heartfelt desire for the welfare of the army in which I have served in command of a regiment, a brigade, a division in the field, and in the chief command, and with which therefore I naturally feel myself as much identified as if I belonged to it. The period of my command has been rendered memorable by the despatch of a portion of the Bombay Army for service in Europe, where the three arms elicited the high encomiums of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief of the British Army. I bid farewell to all ranks, and in doing so desire to assure them that I shall always take the warmest interest in all that concerns the Bombay Army. C. STAVELEY, General, Commander-in-Chief.

"By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief,

"H. F. BROOKE, Brigadier-General, Adjutant-General."

SIR CHARLES STAVELEY'S SUGGESTIONS FOR THE REORGANISATION OF THE NATIVE ARMY.

A Regimental three Battalion system to be adopted.

1. That each regiment shall consist of three battalions, and as in some corps of the British Service, that the officers of the three battalions be on one list for promotion, and transferable from one battalion to another.

Recruiting to be Regimental.

2. That all recruiting be for the regiment, and the Sepoys transferable from one battalion to another, so that when a battalion is on service its strength might be at once increased, and subsequent casualties filled up from the other battalions.

Battalion Establishment.

3. The establishment of each battalion to consist of 1 lieutenant-col., 1 major, 4 captains, 4 subalterns, 1 adjutant, 1 quartermaster, 1 medical officer, 1 subadar major, 8 subadars, 9 jemadars (including native adjutant), 33 havildars (including drill havildar), 41 naiques (including drill naique), 1 drum major, 16 drummers, 600 Sepoys (in time of war 800).

Double Company Establishment.

4. Each battalion to consist of eight companies, which for administrative and tactical purposes will be formed into four double companies. The establishment of the double company to be as follows:—1 captain, 1 subaltern, 2 subadars, 2 jemadars, 8 havildars, 10 naiques, 4 drummers, 150 Sepoys in peace, 200 Sepoys in war time.

Company Formation.

5. On parade the captain to be mounted (except under fire), the subaltern to command one company, and the senior subadar the other.

6. It is proposed to improve the status of the captain, giving him additional powers and making him responsible for the payment and interior economy, as well as the drill and musketry instruction of his double company.

7. Besides other recommendations which might be advanced having reference to the manner of fighting of the present day, the double company system has, it is considered, this tactical advantage, that when a company is skirmishing and is reinforced by the other company of the same double company there will be no confusion although the companies are mixed up, and for the reason that men and officers know one another.

8. The double company system, if carried out as intended, will give more responsibility and independence to the captain than he has under the present system in British regiments. He will, therefore, have more interest in his work, and have more opportunity for qualifying for higher command. The subaltern, too, being in actual command of a company on parade, will necessarily be a better preparation for him for higher command than riding behind his wing as at present, doing nothing. On service he will be at hand, required to take his captain's place.—Bombay Gazette.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite retaining power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Leg, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s., to 16s. each, postage free.

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS,
HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,
Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,
CRANSTON AND CO.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

THE DEAF, AND THE SO-CALLED

"DEAF AND DUMB."

PRESIDENT.
HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The "German" System teaches spoken and written language to the "Deaf and Dumb." It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablet.

Applications for the admission of Students and Pupils should be addressed to the Secretary, No. 1, Nottingham-place, York-gate, Regent's-park.

Donations and Subscriptions are solicited for the purpose of extending the System throughout the United Kingdom, by promoting Schools for the Poor; and for the gratuitous or assisted training of Students, not in a position to pay the ordinary College fees.

The want of well qualified Teachers is one of the most serious drawbacks to the proper instruction of the Deaf, and to supply this want in the best manner is a main object of this Society.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1/4d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay to October 21; Allahabad and Madras, October 19; Calcutta, October 18. Owing to the storm of Saturday morning the mails did not arrive in London till Saturday afternoon.

THE official reports on the season and prospects for the week ending October 8 was as follows:—General prospects in Madras remain unchanged; injury to standing dry crops in part of Kurnool continues from excessive rain, and in South Canara and Malabar the rain interferes with harvesting operations; in parts of Tinnevely and Coimbatore rain is still needed. The number—77,784—on relief works and that—48,412—in receipt of gratuitous relief both show a further diminution, the decrease being 6,180 and 4,836 respectively. In Mysore the crops are excellent, and prices continue to fall. The numbers on relief works and gratuitously relieved exhibit a further decrease of 106 and 1,967 severally. In the Bombay Presidency prospects on the whole remain good; the river in Sind continues to fall, and in that part of the Presidency there has been some damage to crops from locusts. Prospects in the Central Provinces have again much improved; harvesting of the minor kharif crops is in progress; rabi sowings have commenced in some districts, and in others ploughing is being vigorously pushed on; cholera is now slight, and prices are generally steady. In Berar prospects continue good. Sowing for the rabi has commenced in Central India. In Rajputana the want of rain is felt in Jeypore and Ulwar. Prospects in Bengal are generally favourable as heretofore; there has been rain in nearly all the districts, but more is wanted in Lohardugga, Manbhoom, Sarun, and in Pergunnah Chausa of Shahabad; the autumn harvest is now nearly over, the yield being satisfactory; preparations for the rabi have commenced. There has been no change in Assam. In British Burmah rain has fallen in abundance; and there is a further great improvement in the circumstances of the province. Prospects continue favourable in the North Western Provinces and Oudh and the Punjab.

THE public health reports for the week ending October 8 state that in Sind fever is prevalent in Shikarpur and in Upper Sind Frontier, also in Guzerat and Khandesh. Cholera is abating in Nasik. In Ahmednagar 27 deaths from cholera, but disease is light in Puna and Satara, and abating in Kanara. In Kattiawar and Baroda fever is prevalent. Bengal: fever prevalent in Hill Tipperah, Rajshaye, Hooghly, Bankoora, Purneah, Sarun, and Palamow. North West Provinces and Oudh: health good. Punjab: fever prevalent in Delhi, Hissar, Jalandhar, where mortality is great. Fever is abating in Amritsar, but prevalent in Lahore, Rawal Pindi, Mooltan, and Dera Ismail Khan. Central Provinces: Cholera slight, fever prevalent in some districts. British Burma: Cholera in Arakan; 18 cases in Rangoon, of which 13 were fatal; 29 deaths in Promé, where sickness was prevalent; public health good in Tenasserim. Health fair and improving throughout Central India. In Rajputana: fever very prevalent in Meywar, Ajmere, Jeypore, and Ulwar.

As yet we have no news from Afghanistan save the accounts of warlike preparations on either side. The Ameer's letter is understood to have embodied the most haughty message ever received by the British Government since the days of Lord Clive, and to have been divested of the most ordinary forms of official courtesy. The British ultimatum was, from fear of injury to a British messenger, hurriedly placed in the hands of the commandant at Ali Musjid, and a copy put in the Ameer's private post-office at Peshawur. Until the 20th time is given for him to appear to answer to this last summons with which he has been, it may be said, duly served, though the manner of serving seems to pertain more to a timorous attorney than to the Viceroy of India. The Prime Minister on Saturday explained that "we have made arrangements by which, when completed, in all probability at no distant day all anxiety respecting the north western frontier of India will be removed. We shall live, I hope, on good terms with our immediate neighbours, and not on bad terms, perhaps, with some neighbours who are more remote." At present our Russian neighbours are stated to be drilling Afghan troops at Jellalabad, and war preparations are being pushed forward by the Ameer. The sound of 15 heavy guns, recently heard in position at Ali Musjid, is heard at our advanced post, and Candahar is reported to be strongly reinforced. It is said that 60 per cent. of the Afghan troops are down with fever, and the fidelity of the tribes becomes more doubtful daily. Our forces are being rapidly massed at the positions indicated. The orders for the Quetta Field Force will be published in our next issue; they show great foresight and skill. We subjoin the chief movements of troops telegraphed since our last:—

The following additional regiments had arrived at Mooltan:—The 50th Queen's, the 15th Hussars, the 10th Bengal Lancers, the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles, the 4th and 10th companies of the Bengal Sappers and Miners, the 15th Sikhs, the 12th Khelat-i-Ghilzais, the 25th Punjab Infantry, together with a heavy siege train and a mule battery. Every precaution has been taken that this column shall start perfectly equipped. The Ferozepore Arsenal is rapidly sending up supplies of tents, ammunition, accoutrements, and entrenching tools. Maps have been issued to the various corps. The troops are in excellent condition. Orders have been issued that all available sepoy's tents are to be given to British regiments. Bell tents are to be dealt out to camp followers. The troops are most eager to advance. It is rumoured that another division will be formed here, the present one moving forward to some place between Mithankote and Quetta. The troops at present assembled in and around Peshawur are the 17th and 81st, the Rifle Brigade, the 11th and 14th Bengal Lancers, the 17th Bengal Cavalry, the 14th Sikhs, the 20th and 22nd Punjab Infantry, the 7th Native Infantry. In the Fort of Jumrood are one company of Sappers and Miners, two companies of the 22nd Punjab Infantry. Outside the fort are the 1st Sikhs, the Guide Corps Cavalry and Infantry, and No. 1 Mountain Battery. At Hari Singh ka Burj, half-way between Peshawur and Jumrood, are one battery of Royal Horse Artillery, one battery of Royal Artillery, a 40-pounder battery, the 2nd Battalion 9th and the 81st Queen's, one squadron of the 14th Bengal Lancers, and two companies of the Sappers and Miners. In addition to these forces, which are under the command of the brigadier, there are various regiments of the Punjab Frontier Force under the direct command of Major Cavagnari (detachments of local levies?). There was considerable sickness among the troops.

The following Madras regiments have been selected for service.—The 67th (Queen's), the 14th Hussars, the 1st Madras Light Cavalry, and the 30th and 36th Native Infantry. It is reported that the Bombay Brigade will probably consist of the 83rd (Queen's), the 4th and 15th Native Infantry, and the Punjab Horse. The following regiments have been warned for service with the force under the command of Sir S. J. Browne:—Artillery, two 40-pounders and two mountain batteries; Guides Cavalry; two companies of Sappers, the 17th, 81st (Queen's), and 4th Battalion Rifle Brigade. Native Infantry: 14th Sikhs, 20th, 27th, 45th, and 4th Goorkhas, 1st Sikhs, and the Guides Infantry. Colonels Chichester and Doran act as brigadiers. The Uthman Kheyls have threatened Fort Abazai; accordingly, one squadron of the 11th Bengal Lancers, three companies of the 27th Punjab Infantry, and a battery of Horse Artillery have received orders to be prepared to march from Nowshera on a moment's notice. Sir Samuel Browne has left for Peshawur. Two batteries of the Royal Artillery and the 2nd Battalion of the 9th (Queen's) have arrived at Peshawur from Harri Singh ka Burj. The Henri-Martini rifles of the Rifle Brigade have all been sighted for 2,000 yards in volley firing against a number of targets arranged to represent an approaching enemy. They were found perfectly effective at 2,100 yards. The brigadier has issued directions to all commanding officers to frequently exercise their men in route marching, in order to get them into good training for a mountain campaign.

The European officers of native regiments have been commanded to wear turbans in order to diminish the distinction between officers and men.

News from Mooltan states that the 12th and 25th Native Infantry, the 3rd Goorkhas, a brigade of cavalry, and a battery of artillery are leaving by rail for Khanpur, thence to Rajanpur, and by the Dera Bugti route to Dadur and Quetta. The remainder of the First Division proceed to Sukkur, thence via Shikarpur, Jacobabad, and Dadur to the Bolan. The march from Rojhan to Burzen will be most severe, no water, forage, or firewood being procurable on the way.

The whole of General Roberts's Division is rapidly concentrating. General Gordon commands the troops already assembled at Thall, consisting of the 5th and 29th Punjab Infantry, the 5th Ghoorkhas, the 12th Bengal Cavalry, the 5th Punjab Cavalry, one battery of Royal Horse Artillery, one field artillery, one company of sappers, one battery of mountain artillery, the 8th (Queen's), the 23rd Pioneers, and the 4th Ghoorkhas. The commissariat and telegraphic officers are hard at work. Supplies are rapidly being collected. Small arms, with ammunition (50 rounds per man), have arrived. Grain is being collected in the Banu district. Two convoys have already arrived. The Waziris are giving every assistance in passing the convoys safely through their country. The Kuram valley is said to be deserted, the Afghan sirdars having collected the whole of the grain and revenue in advance. Kapiyan, a small mud fort across the Kuram, two miles from Thall, is held by some 150, and Kuram Fort, forty-six miles higher up, by 500 Afghan troops; while the Peiwar Pass, one march further up, at the head of the valley, is reported to be occupied by 2,000 men and eleven guns. Twenty-two miles beyond the Peiwar is a second pass called the Shutar Gardan, which once crossed Cabul and Ghazni are within seventy miles reach. It will only be possible to occupy the Peiwar this year. It is about 7,000ft. high, well covered with forest, and an advance thence in spring will be quite an easy matter. Supplies form the chief difficulty, but camels and mules are abundant.

The health of the troops is on the whole satisfactory. There is, indeed, a good deal of fever, but of a mild type, which appears to attack the English more than the native troops. The following troops are en route for Hassan Abdal:—One battery of Royal Horse Artillery, the 9th Lancers, the 10th Bengal Cavalry, the 1st Battalion of the 5th and the 51st (Queen's), the 24th Native Infantry, the 2nd Ghoorkhas, Mhalwara Battalion, and two companies of Sappers. A field battery from Hyderabad and one from Kurrachee proceed at once to Sukkur to join General Stewart's force. It is stated that the Sibi are threatening our line of march near Dadur, which will consequently be immediately occupied by our troops. The whole of this route is described as very difficult. General Biddulph reached Sebi on the 1st inst. The route from Mithankot, via Machru, is now open. This is eighteen miles shorter than that by Rajanpur and Asui. The telegraph line to Gadakhel—first march from Kohat to Thall—has been finished.

The thermometer at Quetta is already below 20, which, it is hoped, will rapidly ameliorate the fever seriously prevalent among the troops. Two regiments have together 300 sick. General Biddulph was to arrive on Saturday.

THE following table gives the approximate mean monthly temperature at Quetta, the elevation of which above the sea level is about 5,500ft. The table is founded on nearly two years' observations, taken by the medical officers attached to Major Sandeman's mission in 1876, and to the garrison which has since been stationed there:—January, 39 deg.; February, 43 deg.; March, 54 deg.; April, 59 deg.; November, 48 deg.; December, 41 deg. The temperature of the winter months is considerably lower than that of Himalayan stations a thousand feet higher above the sea, the mean January temperature of Ranikhet being 46 deg., that of Naini Tal 43 deg., and of Simla and Darjeeling 41 deg., and the daily range of temperature is so great as to render warm clothing at night very desirable even in the hottest months of the year. The lowest temperature recorded at Quetta in January, 1877, was 12 deg. in the shade, and the highest in August was 103 deg. At Kandahar, about 3,500 feet above the sea, the maximum temperature in the hot months sometimes exceeds 110 deg., and in the cold weather the shade temperature sometimes falls to the freezing point. The daily range of temperature is fully as great as at Quetta, the average being probably about 40 deg. The prevailing direction of the wind on the Beloochistan plateau seems to be S.W. in the winter, which is the rainy season, and W. or N.W. in the hot weather. The winter rains and snows commence in November and cease in April, and that their quantity is generally inconsiderable is proved by the circumstance that mud walls built by our expedition in 1839 were found still standing in 1876 with less than a foot washed away from the top. The heavy rains and snows of last year were altogether exceptional, and there is no reason to suppose that they will recur this year. They were, doubtless, due to the same cause as the unusually heavy cold weather rains we have had in Northern India during the last two years.

THE Pioneer points out that the Cabul expedition has been got ready with a promptitude that contrasts in an amusing manner—considering the dissatisfaction of the English papers—with the deliberation shown in organising the last Cabul campaign. A brief review of the facts connected with those earlier operations will throw light on the contrast to which we refer. Lord Auckland issued his Simla manifesto on October 1, 1838. This document declared his intention to co-operate with Shah Sujah for the restoration of that interesting monarch to the throne of his ancestors. Were troops on their way to Quetta in the course of a month? They were only collected on the Indus by the following January. The leading brigade passed the river on February 14. Towards the end of March the force reached Quetta, and in April took Kandahar. Ghuznee was stormed and captured on July 22, and Cabul was entered in August. After the campaign was once in full swing it will thus be seen that events moved with very fair rapidity. But the interval of delay between the determination of the Government of India to make war and the arrival of British troops at Quetta was more than five months. As some of the force under General Biddulph's command will certainly be at Quetta early this month the corresponding step has been taken this time in about five weeks. That certainly shows an activity on the part of the present military authorities which argues them not altogether unresponsive of the lessons of modern warfare.

THE Turkestan Gazette has received news, dated July 1, from the native force which the Russians have posted in the valley of the At-Bash, to observe the course of affairs in Kashgaria. The letters sent refer chiefly to the suppression of the insurrection in Khotan, a pacification procured by the Chinese at no small cost; for a division of 3,000 men, which marched under the command of the Turfan Commander-in-Chief from Aksu to Khotan, suffered a great defeat, and were annihilated by Sarts, who rose in insurrection under the leadership of the former Khotan ruler, Niaz Beg, of whom we have often heard. Fresh Chinese troops to the number of two, or two and a-half thousand, were despatched from Yangishahr to Khotan to suppress the insurrection; and thus Tsun Tsan was left in Yangishahr with only about 600 Chinese troops, while in the villages surrounding Kashgar there were no Chinese at all. The flight to our territory of the well-known Mulla Turan Khoja, which led to the reinforcement of the former Chinese posts along the Chakmak road, and to the establishment of new ones in the Turugard, Terekti, Korumduk, and Kogart Passes, left the Aksakal Khosanjanbai to bear the chief burden of responsibility. The latter was security for Turan Khoja, and was accordingly put to torture by order of the Chinese Governor of Kashgar. He only escaped after five or six days' suffering, and by paying a heavy ransom. After this the Chinese publicly executed the youngest son of Yakoo Beg, together with the Sarikol Beg, and the Kirghiz chief Alif Beg, who had risen with his dependent Kirghiz against Tsun Tsan. At the same time the Chinese ordered the caravan which had set out for Khokand to return to Kashgar.

THE following is the Aden news report for the week ending the 9th day of October:—"H.M.S. Euryalus arrived here on Saturday, the 28th ult., and H.E. Rear-Admiral Corbett, C.B., Naval Commander-in-Chief, East Indies, hoisted his flag on board of her on the 2nd inst. H.M.S. Undaunted left for England on the 4th inst., and H.E. Rear-Admiral Corbett, C.B., sailed from here in the Euryalus on the 5th inst. for a cruise in the Bay of Bengal. A large sailing vessel, the Bannockburn, port of registry, Greenock, official No. 72,385, stranded off Ras Sulan, about twenty-six to thirty miles eastward of Aden on the 2nd of this month. So soon as information was received, the Indian Government steamer Kwantung, Captain Elton commanding, was sent to render all assistance, and succeeded in getting her off and towing her into Aden Harbour by 6.3 p.m. on the 5th inst. The vessel is little damaged. She was laden with coal, and had to jettison about fifty tons of her cargo before she got off. Unfortunately the second mate and two of the seamen were drowned whilst putting out a stream anchor.

The Foudhlee tribe, who own this part of the coast, behaved well, and never attempted to board the vessel, and the young chief Ahmed bin Hussain volunteered to render any assistance in his power. Two of the bodies of the drowned men were washed ashore on the coast some miles to the eastward of Aden, not far from the village of Abian, and were buried near where they were discovered.

The murderer of Captain Pemberton has been tried and sentenced to death. It is an interesting fact that after the bishop had concluded his address at the funeral, which was attended by many respectable Mussulmans, Zain ul Abadin Khan, the head of the local Mahomedan community in Nimar, stepped forward, and, on behalf of his co-religionists, disavowed all sympathy with the murderer, who had brought such disgrace on his class. The murderer endeavoured to excite sympathy by declaring that he intended only to murder the native assistant commissioner in revenge for his attempting to disturb the remains of ancient mosques. At Ajmeer one of the most loyal and respected Mahomedans, Mir Nizam Ally, Jaghirdar, and an honorary magistrate, was murdered by an assassin, supposed to be a Rajpoot, who attacked him while sitting in his courtyard surrounded by his attendants, who suffered the murderer to escape.

The importance of the Punjab Northern State Railway, as an aid in any movement against Cabul, can scarcely be over-estimated, and the completion of the line to Rawul Pindie is therefore very much to be desired. The Government of India has recently been endeavouring to hasten on this work regardless of expense, but the want of rolling-stock is a cruel obstacle in the way. We understand that no less than ninety first and second class carriages that were coming out from England for this line were lately lost at sea, and some time must necessarily elapse before another supply can be obtained. For the present, the Punjab Northern State Railway, having changed its narrow gauge for a broad one, is eking out its own resources with carriages and wagons lent by the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway.

The accounts of piracies in the Persian Gulf, calling for increased force as well as activity on the part of our cruisers, gives occasion to the Englishman to point out that the real danger to the peace of the Gulf is the forcible establishment on its shores of the Wahabis of Nejd. At all events the latest news goes to show that the Nejdeans are ready for another attempt to secure an outlet on the coast. Should they carry their purpose into effect the British Government can have no reason for opposing their suppression of such chiefs as him of Zobara. The danger consists in a probable collision between the Nedjeans and the Turks. Should a quarrel break out on the shores of the Persian Gulf it would soon be transferred to the western side of the peninsula, and would involve the Turks in long, fruitless, and exhausting operations. It seems more reasonable for England to step in and prevent an outbreak by negotiations having for their object the settlement of the growing Wahabi power on the shores of the Gulf. Should a Euphrates Valley Railway become an actual undertaking the attitude of the Government in these waters would be simply ridiculous. It is already undignified. There is no need for England to occupy Bahrein. If an establishment be formed in the Gulf, it would be better to place it on one of the islands at the entrance, Linga for instance. But there is a decided need for some better policy than that which fails to give peace or strength to Oman, which cannot overawe such chiefs as Zobara, cannot secure tranquillity in Bahrein, which does not satisfy the Turks, and which makes the English name to be hated by the Wahabis.

The Spaniards are attempting to carry matters with a high hand in Borneo. News has reached Singapore that a Spanish gunboat, the Eldorado, visited Sandakan Bay, Malluddu Bay, and Tampassak, the three stations in Baron Overbeck's newly ceded territory of Sabah, and ordered the Spanish flag to be hoisted, as the country was now Spanish territory, under the recent treaty with the Sultan of Sulu. However, those in charge of the stations refused to accede, and the Eldorado left with a threat to return in force and take possession.

DURING the early part of last week telegrams received from Lloyd's agents from the ports on the Indian coast, between the Ganges and Krishna rivers, report that a hurricane had swept over that locality, causing great destruction to life and property. At Vizagapatam the French barque Cambodge, belonging to Nantes, and the English iron ship Fifeshire, 700 tons, belonging to Glasgow, the property of T. Law and Co., had been totally wrecked; part of the crews only saved. The British barque Olive Branch, Captain Park, belonging to Scarborough, owned by J. E. Ilicks and Co., was wrecked off Bimlipatam; part of the crew only saved, including the captain. The wreck was to be sold. The hurricane was felt at Coconada, but no damage was done there to shipping. The Fifeshire carried a crew of twenty-seven hands all told, and a telegram to the owners states that all have been lost except five. The Fifeshire left Liverpool, where the crew were shipped, on the 9th May, and arrived at Madras on the 22nd August.

At the Viceregal legislative meeting, in putting the motion for the consideration of the Vernacular Press Act, as amended, the Viceroy remarked that the existence of the law had been eminently beneficial in its effects and productive of marked improvement in the general tone and character of the vernacular journalism. The law, whilst effectually restraining seditious and profligate publications, allowed the greatest and fullest expression of opinion on the policy and conduct of the Executive personally. The Viceroy's object had been, not to check or injure, but to promote the growth and improve the position of the vernacular Press, which had received from Government not merely toleration, but sympathy; not mercy and good wishes, but good offices. Our duty, he said, was to protect the community from an abuse of freedom while encouraging the cultivation of that freedom which the law denied to no honest journalist. The Press circulated facts as well as opinions thereon, and if the facts were untrue the opinions were unsound. In India the Government was the only source of authentic political information. In the arrangements organised for supplying the Press with information no distinction was admitted between one journal and another, and no attempt had been made to bias their opinions. A similar arrangement had been already commenced for placing the vernacular Press on the same footing.

A MEMORIAL has been presented to H.E. the Governor by the insurance offices against the municipal license tax, ranging from Rs. 500 to Rs. 1,000 per annum, imposed on the agents as a contribution towards the expenses of the fire brigade. There are twenty-six offices represented, and the total tax amounts to about Rs. 19,000, while the total cost of the fire brigade does not exceed Rs. 25,000. The Bombay Gazette, by an amusing misprint, makes the memorial conclude with the words "and your petitioners will ever pay" (sic).

REVIEWING the results of the yearly course of musketry in the Bengal Presidency, the Commander-in-Chief in India declares himself, on the whole, satisfied with the progress made in both British and Native regiments, but notices the very indifferent shooting of the native troops at the long and more difficult ranges, owing possibly to its not having previously been included in the figure of merit, and therefore not having received that attention given the standing and kneeling distances. There are still a great many non-exercised men in the Native Army, and his Excellency trusts that, under the full operation of the recent rules on this subject, the number next season will be reduced to a minimum. The Commander-in-Chief invites more attention to the instruction of recruits in British regiments, in many of which the principal attention of the musketry staff would appear to have been given to the training of the drilled soldiers, for which company officers are responsible, instead of to the early and careful instruction of recruits, which is their special duty. In the Native Army the results of the training of recruits is, on the whole, very satisfactory.

A PORT LOUIS correspondent says:—"The sugar planters in Mauritius have been a good deal excited of late by the putting into force of what is termed in the colony 'the labour law,' which is an ordinance that has been framed, pursuant to a report of the Royal Commission of Inquiry on Indian Immigration into the colony. This law gives great power to the Governor, who is able in certain cases of ill treatment to Indians to remove the manager from a plantation without reference to the law courts of the colony. The ordinance in question has been petitioned against by the most influential men connected with the colony in England, as well as by the colonists, as interfering with private rights, but the Secretary of State has approved of it in the main notwithstanding."

WE are told that, with a view to decrease the expenditure incurred on account of the Indian Medical Establishment, her Majesty's Secretary of State has suggested to the Government of India the expediency of effecting reductions in that establishment by reducing its present strength. In consequence, the Government of India have suggested to the local Government to report whether it would be practicable to give effect to the proposal of the Secretary of State by placing, at stations where there are more than one regiment, one medical officer in charge of all the regiments located at that station, instead of, as at present, having a medical officer for each regiment. They have also inquired as to whether it would be possible to place regiments garrisoned in a civil station in charge of the civil surgeon of that place.

THE annual report on the Calcutta medical institutions shows an increase in the number of patients treated in the town and suburbs, except at the Alipore and Aratoon Apcar dispensaries, at each of which there was a slight falling off. As compared with 1876 there was an increase of 9,793 in the patients of the Calcutta hospitals, and of 15,546 in suburban hospitals and dispensaries. The total number of patients treated was 24,822, and of deaths 3,308. Cholera patients numbered 574, of whom 294 died. The year was considered to be an unhealthy one, and the death-rate per thousand was 31.9, showing a higher average than any year since 1868, excepting 1875, when it attained 35. The results of treatment with the chinchona alkaloids manufactured at the Government plantation at Rungbee were highly satisfactory. In connection with the fact that out of 73 cholera cases in the European wards 65 came direct from the shipping, attention is called to the fact that the sewage of a native population numbering 2,500, living in the port, is still discharged into the river. The question of the proper method of putting a stop to this poisonous practice is under consideration by the Government of India.

It is stated that much sickness prevails among the troops quartered at Agra. The 4th Battalion 60th Rifles have 100 men in hospital, principally suffering from fever. The 13th N.I., recently returned from Cyprus, have 200 men sick with the same complaint.

FROM the accounts of the trade and navigation of British India for the first five months of the current financial year we see that, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, the value of merchandise imported was Rs. 15,29,02,498, as against Rs. 15,94,46,389, and that of merchandise exported Rs. 25,63,67,827, as against Rs. 27,18,73,882. The value of treasure imported was Rs. 2,42,24,096, as against Rs. 5,59,94,494, and that of treasure exported Rs. 91,77,984, as against Rs. 90,69,223. The gross amount of import duty collected, including the salt duty, was Rs. 1,71,48,377, as against Rs. 1,91,48,221, and that of export duty collected Rs. 20,82,267, as against Rs. 16,13,586.

THE actual loss on the Secretary of State's bills on India from the 1st of April to the end of September has been Rs. 1,54,69,960, which is Rs. 7,29,365 above the estimated loss.

WE understand that Mr. G. P. Sanderson has been appointed superintendent of the Government elephant khed-dahs at Dacca. The interesting work recently published containing his Mysor experiences in elephant hunting conclusively proves Mr. Sanderson's fitness for the post.

LARGE contracts for green tea have lately been made in Kumaon and Garhwal, and it is estimated that the total out-turn from these tea districts this year will be from 150 to 200,000lb. The Calcutta reports estimate that the whole season's exports will not exceed 35,000,000lb., and may very likely fall short of that amount. The estimate of the season crop of indigo amounts to 1,10,000 maunds, against 1,55,149, the actual result of last year.

THE Indian salt revenue for the first five months of the current financial year was Rs. 2,57,10,218, as compared with Rs. 2,66,23,344 in the corresponding period of last year.

A TELEGRAM from Larnaca, dated 8th inst., states that Mr. Kellner, the Accountant-General, has been invalided, and was to leave Cyprus that day.

It is stated that the brigadier general commanding the Bombay forces has been holding a private inquiry into the medical treatment of a distinguished officer of the Bombay Army who died a short time since. Incidentally, it is believed, the inquiry will extend to the whole system of the treatment of patients in the different services by their official medical advisers, and the temptation that undoubtedly exists among the official medical men to devote too much time to private practice, and perhaps to give a preference to private patients.

IN a letter to the Times, the sworn foe of pretended centenarians, Mr. W. T. Thoms, earnestly appeals to all editors not to admit into their columns "reports of exaggerated age without testing the facts and without being satisfied that they are not being hoaxed. Of the need of the latter requirement, he gives two proofs, in fabrications imposed on the public during twelve months. We make the Friend of India responsible for the truth of the following:—"Old John Lawrence, the centenarian, and the oldest inhabitant of Aurungabad, breathed his last on Oct. 26. He lived to the respectable old age of 108 years, and was chef de cuisine of the Nizam's service, now the Hyderabad contingent; to within a few days of his death he was seen to take his 'morning constitutional' by the help of his walking stick." We certainly do not think our contemporary has been hoaxed, but we hope the proofs of so great an age having been attained by a European in India are complete enough to satisfy Mr. Thoms.

IN the resolution on the General Administration report of the Orissa division for 1877-78 we find this paragraph:—"Considerable excitement was caused in Orissa by the barbarous murder of a priest of the temple of Juggernath by the Rajah of Pooree. It is satisfactory to find that there was universal indignation felt against the murderer, and that the sentence passed upon the Rajah was accepted by the people as the righteous judgment of the Deity upon the misdeeds of his servant. This contrasts most favourably with the tone adopted by the native press in Bengal, which, in many instances, so far from condemning the peculiar atrocity of the crime, seemed to find in the Rajah's position a sort of justification for his act, and was disposed to urge that his personal sanctity was a ground for mitigation of the sentence."

THE uses and abuses of advertising in the Government gazettes have been exercising the mind of the Governor-General in Council. The advertisement columns of the newspapers seem to him to be better vehicles for intimating the desire of the Government to secure a tenant for the Great Coco Island than those of the Gazette of India; while on the other hand it has not been thought unworthy of the Punjab Gazette to advertise a Pushto text-book and Chinchona febrifuge. It seems that so long ago as February attention was called to the practice of publishing private advertisements in official gazettes and withholding important public notices from the ordinary journals. The selection of advertisements and advertising media was "left to the discretion of the officials," which quality seems to have been somewhat dormant, as the Assam Gazette advertises "Apartments to let," "Kerosine Oil," and a manual of "Kitchen Gardening," while the Madras papers know nothing of advertisements for tenders for public supplies and vacancies in Government offices; all of which are duly set forth in the Fort St. George Gazette, and in it alone. The resolution goes on to say that his Excellency believes it to be very probable that some of these advertisements appeared in public journals as well as in the gazettes; in such cases, there can be no objection to the publication of such notices in the Government gazettes also. It is understood, also, that in remote provinces, like Assam or Nagpore, notices are published in the official gazette because there is no local newspaper at all. But, even in such cases, the departure from the principles laid down in the resolution of February last either affects the newspapers which may happen to circulate in such a province, or else prevents the successful establishment of a local journal. Such local newspapers, though they may have their shortcomings, must, in the end, do much good to the provinces where they may be started. The Governor General in Council recognises that it can rarely be expedient for a Government department to publish its advertisements in every journal in the country, though, in the case of some postal notices, such publication might be decidedly beneficial. Each Government or department would naturally select one or more journals, such as circulate most largely among the communities for whose information a notice was intended. Some notices would be published in vernacular journals, and some in English newspapers. His Excellency the Governor General in Council is confident that, after this second expression of the views of the Government of India, public servants of all provinces and all departments will do the best to give effect to those views. In some departments there may at first be some small additional expense, but, in the end, the objects of the public and of the Government will be better served. In order that there may be no doubt about the intentions of the Government of India, the publisher of the Gazette of India will be directed not to publish, without special orders of the Government of India, any notice or advertisement, save those which he is compelled to publish by law, unless the officer sending the notice or advertisement certifies that it has been either published, or sent for publication, in at least one public journal.

THE Mahomedan Marriage Registration Act has now been in force for more than two and a-half years, and the only districts in which the Act appears to be at all popular are Chittagong and Rungpore. In these districts, with fourteen and fifteen offices respectively, there were registered during the past year 2,973, and 2,206 ceremonies, or more than half the total for the fourteen districts in which the Act was in force. In Backergunge, only 211 ceremonies were registered among a Mahomedan population of 1,255,427, and in Furreedpore and Jessore only 105 and forty-six ceremonies among populations of 863,053 and 312,974 respectively. From the reports received on the working of the Act in the districts to which it has been extended it appears to be the general opinion of the district registrars that, unless registration of marriages and divorces is made compulsory, the provisions of the Act will only be made use of to a very limited extent. The Lieutenant-Governor is not, however, prepared to accept the recommendation of the district registrars. The success attained in two districts, which are in no way specially circumstanced, seems to him to show that the provisions of the Act are not ill adapted to meet the requirements of the Mahomedan population of Bengal. Prejudice and ignorance prevail widely amongst the lower classes of the Mahomedan population of the Eastern districts, and, together with the opposition of local mollahs interested in the maintenance of the present state of things, militate, no doubt, against the rapid extension of registration, and it may possibly be some years before the provisions of the Act are generally made use of; but Sir Ashley Eden prefers waiting until such time as the people voluntarily avail themselves of them to exciting the widespread opposition which he believes would be the result at present of making the Act compulsory. There can be very little doubt amongst sensible people, we should think, as to the wisdom of not trying to push time on too fast in this matter.

NICOSIA, OCT. 25.

ON Thursday last, 17th inst., we received the first message by the new submarine cable which connects Cyprus with Alexandria, and thus brings us within three hours' wire of London. Mr. Douglas Gibbs, the superintendent of the Eastern Telegraph Company in Alexandria, has been commissioned to lay down the new lines which will establish intercommunication throughout the island. The Government have promised him whatever assistance he may require in the conduct of this work. A new branch is about to be opened at Nicosia of the Imperial Ottoman Bank. Mr. Siouffi, the agent of the bank at Damascus, will provisionally undertake the direction of it. The Commissioner for the Larnaca district, Colonel White, has received a further extension of three months' leave from the 3rd ultimo, for special service in Cyprus.

The accident to Mr. Hepworth Dixon has proved more serious than was at first anticipated. This, however, has not prevented him from coming forward, with more valour than discretion, as the champion of his injured host. I referred in my last letter to the fact that Colonel White, in accordance with the strict orders issued by the Government as regards excavations for antiquities, had been obliged to arrest Major di Cesnola, the American Consul at Larnaca. This simple execution of duty has been magnified into an outrage on the man and an insult to his country. The American Consul at Beyrout has taken up the affair, and the American Minister at Constantinople has been communicated with. In spite of a broken collar-bone, Mr. Hepworth Dixon has braved the rough journey to Nicosia in order that he may personally bring under the notice of the Lord High Commissioner the grievances of his illustrious host. The case comes off in a few days, but it is to be hoped that the friends of Major di Cesnola will prevail on him to desist from his present ill-advised course, as he must know that ample reparation will be made him if he can prove the charge to have been unfounded. I will briefly recapitulate the rights and wrongs of the affair. Previous to the English occupation the gallant major received permission from the Grand Vizier to make excavations, which permission, being informal, was necessarily illegal. Since the occupation he asked Sir Garnet Wolseley to grant him fresh permission to carry on his excavations, but was refused, and ordered to discontinue such. This order he disregarded, and the Government, acting on sworn information, arrested him. It may be said that sufficient consideration has not been shown to Major di Cesnola, especially as the offence was a civil and not a criminal one. On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that he disregarded not only the order to discontinue excavations, but one to deliver up such antiquities as he had already recovered. Besides this, when Captain Spencer, on behalf of the Civil Commissioner for Larnaca, called on him at his villa, he received anything but a courteous reception; indeed, it pretty well amounted to defiance. So that Colonel White is absolved from having acted in too summary a manner. The Jews in Cyprus have set a commendable example in calling together the few members of their persuasion at present in the island. Since the massacre of the Jews at Salamis, in the time of the Romans, this is, perhaps, the first meeting that has been held. The object was to discuss the proposal to build a synagogue, for which, it is understood, funds are forthcoming.

Commander Cameron, R.N., has arrived in the island on a tour, which will extend ultimately to Syria.

INDIAN FOUR-AND-A-HALF PER CENT. TRANSFER LOANS.—The India Office notify that they will be prepared to receive applications for the balance of the Four-and-a-half per cent. "Transfer Loan" which remains unallotted.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE ECONOMISTS AND THE AMEER.

WE wonder how far the Ameer Shere Ali was encouraged in his insolent attitude by the apparent military weakness of India. If ever the truth comes to be known, we dare say it will be found that he took greater courage from the military economies of our own Government than from all the assurances of our unfriends, the Russians. Let us figure to ourselves the opinions any one in the Ameer's position must naturally form from all that has been written and spoken about the army, European and native, within the past few years. Of course, Shere Ali is much better informed of what passes in India than our Government is informed of what happens in Afghanistan. British India, from Peshawur to Mysore, is overrun with vagabond Cabulees selling fruits and horses, and we may be sure that these people and their friends and relatives keep the Afghan bazaars well posted in all the news, political and military, of this empire. And what have they to tell? That the British army in Europe is so weak that we had to send sepoy from India to strengthen it. That the native army is badly officered and badly organised, and the theme of everlasting depreciation in the newspapers. Well, no one will deny that this is gossip well calculated to make the Ameer think little of our power, especially when supplemented by a fact officially well known to Shere Ali himself—that for years past the Government of India have thought it necessary to purchase his neutrality, not to demand it. The Afghan, we must recollect, cannot possibly regard all these matters in the modifying light our own English public opinion throws upon them. He is a semi-barbarian, he knows nothing of Englishmen's habits of self-depreciation in these things, or of the influences which may be at work to say this is so, and this is not so. All a man like Shere Ali can gather from Indian politics as they are represented in the press and in conversation is this, that the Indian Government is hard up for money and deeply in debt; that the British Government is very badly off for troops, and that the native army is inefficient! What more is wanted to puff up the conceit and the confidence of the Ameer. It signifies nothing that Englishmen know better, that Shere Ali himself will know better whenever it comes to blows; the truth remains that, to all intents and purposes, the Ameer is misled by what must appear to him to be the military weakness of England and India together. It is more than probable, of course, that Russia has been instigating Shere Ali to defy the Indian Government, but of this we may be sure, that, even at Russia's instigation, the Ameer would not have dared to take up his present insolent position had he not been convinced that British power in India was no longer so strong as it used to be. The constant economies and reductions going on in our Indian military establishments as well as the economy of subsidy practised on the Ameer himself cannot have been lost on a man like Shere Ali. He, no doubt, like all unsentimental politicians, English or Oriental, believes the British Empire of India to rest on English bayonets, and, not giving us any credit for paternal government, which he cannot comprehend, or for the affection of the ruled, a virtue unknown to him, he can only suppose that the English are mad in not attaching the first importance to their army in India, and he must hope for his own profit in their madness.

It is not here inferred that the Government of India are to blame for the sweeping retrenchments, reorganisations, and reductions which have made Indian military establishments a sport for the economist's shears any time these twenty years past. It would be hard to say who is to blame for economies which are now leading us into war, and which will be no economies by the time the war is over. Men like Professor Fawcett, with the best intentions in the world, are quite as much responsible for these errors as the Secretary of State or the Viceroy. More, for, to do the Indian Government justice, we believe they have often and often protested against the unwisdom of reducing the Indian garrison to the lowest mark, that is to say to a point unequal to the control of abnormal circumstances. One Commander-in-Chief, Lord Napier of Magdala, is said to have threatened to resign if there were any more reductions of the Indian army—a story which was not lost, we dare say, upon Shere Ali, if it ever reached his attentive ears. However, economy of things military was and is a fashion of the day, and the world will not know how really costly the fashion is until India and England have perhaps several wars on their hands at one and the same time, when the so-called economists will awake to a sense of the fool's paradise in which they have been dreaming so long.

We are very far from advocating a large and expensive army maintained only for show or for a menace and admonishment to our neighbours, but we do say that the army has been starved to pay for such whims as model barracks. The millions wasted over fantasies of that kind would have given India twenty thousand additional British bayonets and sabres and raised the European garrison of India to 80,000, none too many. We could in that case have reduced the native army by two or even three hundred men per regiment—a real saving, and not a perilous one. Three hundred men per regiment is enough for the number of European officers now with native corps, and the regiments so reduced could be made much more useful than they are at present by stationing them invariably with British regiments, and causing them to perform such garrison and other duties as are hurtful to the British troops in this climate. With 80,000 British soldiers in India, and with a smaller, but a better, native army, neighbours like Shere Ali, and troublesome persons like some of our Indian chiefs, would think twice before being insolent; however, we look upon reforms tending towards this end as the inevitable result of the first war this country is engaged in, consequently it is needless to discuss them any further at present.—Madras Times.

JUBBULPORE SCHOOL OF INDUSTRY.—The objects of interest to the traveller in Jubbulpore are not many; perhaps the object of most intense interest, from its tragical association, is the reformatory and prison house for murderers, happily called the School of Industry. The workshop is a modest, square-shaped, one-storied building. The grounds are clean and well kept, but the floors of the workshops are uneven and in bad order. The fabrics turned out are inferior to those produced in such jails as Tanna and Surat. At the time of my visit the prisoners were away for their dinner; a few, however, were still in the yard, and I was conducted round by one of them. He was an old greybeard, and, except that he had a low, villanous forehead, and was beetle-browed when he looked straight at you, he appeared a resolute, simple, and aged Hindustani. His beard was well snowed by time. Humble as he looked, when addressed, there were times, when he did not expect you to be looking at him, when you found his humble mien transformed into an attitude of fierce prying, and his face expressive of the most malignant cunning. He told me much of Thugs, and you could see his face beam with pride and excitement, feelings that soon gave way to an expression of deep melancholy and sorrow, as, rapidly and excitedly winding my handkerchief into a cord, he showed me how easy it was to throttle a human being. I asked him if it was possible to strangle a person with one twist of the wrist, and explained to him that I was somewhat incredulous about it being possible to wrench the neck of a human being with a single handkerchief in such a way as to cause immediate death. Looking at me with an expression and look of the most supreme pity, he said with excitement, "The man who cannot do it is unworthy of the profession." Then recollecting himself he added, "I have not done much myself, but I have often seen it done." This old man came of a great family of Thugs. His uncle was the famous Jemadar Miam Saheb. One ferocious ruffian, a "dacoit," with face black as soot, and gleaming, restless eyes, attracted my attention. He was heavily ironed, and had been some six years here, but now they had found for him a wife, and Government were in hopes he would repent and settle down and get reconciled to his retirement after marriage. Marriage is one of the means by which it is sought to reclaim these savage monsters, and so we see here, as in a more advanced state of society, men saved by their wives. The Thugs have a school, and a range of decent huts to live in. Government has also provided them with houses of prayer. A sentry is on duty on the lines always. This sentry was an old Hindustani Mussulman, and I asked him if the Thugs were much given to long prayers. "God pardon the villains," he said, "they pray longer than honest men." The system on which they are paid has been altered; instead of receiving monthly rations they receive, at the end of each month, a certain sum in money—a system calculated to breed some feelings of self-respect—and their families are paid by piece-work.—Correspondent of Times of India.

Major C. E. Bates, private secretary to the Governor of the Punjab, has resigned his appointment, and proceeds to join his regiment, 32nd Pioneers, at Quetta. Capt. C. H. T. Marshall is appointed in his place.—Englishman.

Mr. J. Pitt Kennedy, standing counsel for Bengal, is about to resign the service.—Pioneer.

Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite, Registrar of the High Court of Allahabad, has accepted the Judicial Commissionership of British Burma.—Pioneer.

THE KRISHNA SHORE.—The Rangoon papers state that it is contemplated to erect two pillars as beacons on the shore opposite the Krishna shoal, one at each end. After the monsoon a survey will be made to fix on a site for a new lighthouse.—Pioneer.

THE ALLIANCE BANK OF SIMLA.—At a meeting of the Alliance Bank on the 1st of October, the report was adopted. The outgoing directors and auditor were re-elected, and the declaration of a dividend of 8 per cent. confirmed. The accounts of the bank for the half-year ending June 30, 1878, showed satisfactory progress. The working capital, which on December 31, 1877, stood at nearly 12 lakhs, on June 30, 1878, amounted to nearly 17 lakhs. This increase is partly due to issue of new shares, but mainly to new deposits of about 3 lakhs. The balance-sheet embraces all capital and accounts at head office and branches; but the directors note for the information of shareholders that the liquidation fees realised at Lahore are not included in profits. The commission accruing from that source is kept distinct for disposal when the work of liquidation terminates. The net profits were Rs. 20,647-7-11, and the directors declared a dividend of 8 per cent., or Rs. 14,037-13-0, leaving the sum of Rs. 6,609-10-11 for disposal, according to the wishes of shareholders at the present meeting; but the directors recommend that this sum be carried to reserve fund, Rs. 2,000; bad debt fund, Rs. 4,609-10-11. In regard to the Rawal Pindi, Murree, and Lahore branches, the directors are glad to be able to say that business progresses well, and they are all found to answer satisfactorily the purposes for which they were established.—Delhi Gazette.

LICENSE-TAX FRAUDS.—Two circle officers, holding the position of sub-deputy collector at Dinagore, charged with misappropriation of the license-tax collections, have, we learn, been suspended, and are being criminally tried. In addition to this offence, it appears they have been collecting the tax from people who are not at all amenable to it. In fact, they have been levying black mail right and left.—Mirror.

TEA IN CHUMPARUN.—An interesting account is given in the annual report on the Patna division of the beginning of tea cultivation in Chumparun, where Mr. J. M. Gibbon has started a garden on some small hills near Tribani, and put out some forty acres of tea. The climate is, however, said to be there unhealthy for Europeans, and there is a difficulty from want of water.—Friend of India.

FEMALE EDUCATION IN CHITTAGONG.—A girl's school has recently been opened in Chittagong, supported by local subscriptions and a small grant from the municipality; but it has not yet obtained any pupils, in consequence, the commissioner states, of the prejudices entertained by a Mahomedan population in favour of the exclusion of females.—Friend of India.

LAWRENCE MILITARY ASYLUM.—October 2 was Founder's Day at the Lawrence Military Asylum, Dalhousie, and Sir James and Lady Brind inspected the schools and distributed the prizes to the scholars. There are now in the asylum 250 boys and 175 girls, while on Founder's Day last year there were 224 boys and 182 girls. There are 114 candidates for admission, and the popularity of the institution, one of the best managed and most useful in India, is unbounded among the soldiers.—Friend of India.

SUICIDE IN 13TH HUSSARS.—A trooper of the 13th Hussars, named Freeman, committed suicide at Lucknow on 8th ult., by shooting himself through the head. No cause was discoverable, but the unfortunate man had been observed for some time to be in a gloomy and depressed state. This makes the fourth suicide in the regiment during twenty-one years.—Englishman.

CROPS IN OUDH.—A letter in the Lucknow paper says:—"As for the crops, they will be, without using any overdrawn figure of speech, really bumper ones. The ears are unusually full and rich, and on all sides are heard calculations going on as to the great return our peasant proprietors are expecting to make when their grain is harvested. If the irrepressible buniah does not in his usual enterprising manner step in and mar the prospect, the food of the common people should be cheap and plentiful all through the approaching cold season."—Bombay Gazette.

TEA PLANTATIONS.—The last number of the Calcutta Gazette contains the revised rules for the grant of leases of land for tea cultivation in the districts of Jalpaiguri, Darjiling. Grants are, we see, limited to eight hundred acres, except in special cases.—Englishman.

THE QUEEN ANNE.—The master pilot, Mr. G. J. C. Smart, who was in charge of this vessel when she was lost, has been found guilty of negligence and incompetence by the Marine Court, and sentenced to be dismissed the service. The sentence requires the confirmation of the Government. The jury added to their verdict a censure on the captain for having left port on September 25 without a third bower anchor.—Indian Daily News.

NORTH WEST PROVINCES.—INQUIRY INTO FAMINE ADMINISTRATION IN BUDAON.—The Government of India has directed the Government, N.W.P., to make a local inquiry into certain allegations concerning the administration of the late famine in Budaon, contained in a series of replies to the questions of the Famine Commission by Mr. T. R. Wyer, assistant collector of Budaon. Mr. Edwards, commissioner of the Rohilkund division, has been directed to proceed at once to Budaon to inquire into the charges on the spot.—Pioneer.

LIEUT. JUDGE.—A letter from Lucknow states "that the preliminary inquiries ordered to be instituted on Lieut. Judge have come to a termination, and that the charges have been proved not only baseless and spiteful, but that he will, pending sanction from army headquarters, at once revert to his appointment as governor of military prison. After minute inquiries no defalcations in the accounts have been preferred against him."—Times of India.

PANIC AMONG THE PALKI BEARERS.—A panic has been caused among the palki bearers of Calcutta by the fact that the registrar of hackney carriages has been recording the names of all whom he could find. This was interpreted to mean a purpose to impress them as ambulance attendants to be sent to Cabul with the expeditionary force. There has been a general exodus in consequence.—Indian Daily News.

COLONEL MARSHALL.—Colonel Marshall, of Tonghoo, has been tried by Colonel Duff, Commissioner of Temnasser, and found guilty of adultery. The sentence was a fine of Rs. 4,000 or four months' imprisonment.—Pioneer.

The H and I batteries of the C Brigade R.H. Artillery being required in the Punjab, they will not proceed to England in her Majesty's troopships Serapis and Jumna as previously ordered.

MADRAS.

MUNICIPALITY.—Mr. Burrows has been confirmed in the appointment of President of the Madras Municipality.

MEDICAL APPOINTMENT.—The Secretary of State has affirmed the appointment of a Eurasian as civil surgeon in the Hassan district of Mysore, at Rs. 450 per mensem, rising to Rs. 700 after fifteen years. The medical charge of the district has hitherto been held by an apothecary.—Times of India.

DEATH OF REV. D. FENN.—The Madras Times announces the death, on October 15, after a short illness, of Rev. David Fenn, M.A., Church Missionary Society, son of the well-known secretary of that body.

EMPLOYEES OF THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—A meeting of upwards of 200 uncovenanted employes of the Madras Railway was held on Oct. 17 for the purpose of adopting measures to address the agent on the subject of privileges, and especially of pensions.—Madras Times.

GOOD RAGI HARVEST IN MYSOR.—We hear of most encouraging prospects of the ragi harvest in Mysor, which will, it is asserted by the ryots of several districts, exceed any they have reaped for the past twenty years. This year a bumper crop may be expected, as the rains, though late in commencing, have been abundant and seasonable, while the land has been benefited by three-years' cultivation that has aided Nature in setting free the elements needed for plant fertility. Further, there have been for the same period no crops to exhaust either Nature's bounty or the ryot's feeble manuring.—Madras Times.

EDUCATION IN CALICUT.—Not long ago Government was pleased to express the utmost satisfaction with the enlightened and liberal action of Manavikrama, the Zamorin of Calicut, in establishing the Kerala Vidya Sala, a high class school educating at present up to the matriculation standard. The school was originally meant for educating the young Princes of the Zamorin family, but it is now open to Brahmans and Nairs also. As a mark of their approval, Government has sanctioned the disbursement of Rs. 1,815 for the school to fit it up with a library and physical apparatus.—Madras Athenaeum.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.—A conference of all the Protestant Missionary Societies in South India is announced to take place next year at Bangalor, similar to the late Allahabad Conference and the great Neigherri Conference held in 1857. Subjects in connection with missionary societies will be discussed during the session.—Pioneer.

SCARCITY OF SURGEONS.—Owing to the paucity of medical officers the surgeon-general has been unable to appoint an assistant-surgeon to the Madras General Hospital as recommended by a committee, and sanctioned by Government as far back as 1874. But as the number of patients to be treated have in no way decreased, on the contrary, considerably increased, and the tax on the physical exertion of the surgeon is found too great, orders have recently been issued to diminish the number of patients by 25 per cent. In Calcutta the Medical College Hospital of the same proportions, and treating annually about the same number of patients, has nine medical officers and Madras cannot obtain a much needed fourth.—Pioneer.

RUMOURED CESSION OF MYSORE TERRITORY.—A report has been going the round of India to the effect that a part of the province of Mysore is shortly to be given over to the Madras Government as payment for the money that this Government borrowed during the famine. We do not know how the report originated, but we are able to say that there is not the least truth in it. In the first place, the Indian Government cannot take an acre of land from this province without being guilty of a breach of trust. The province is held in trust for the Maharajah, and it must be delivered up to him entire when he comes to the throne. If the districts mentioned were to be taken in the way described the Government would be open to a charge of annexation. There is no one in Mysore to make terms with, and of course the Viceroy would have it all his own way, and the consequence would be that confidence in the Government would be completely shaken and an immense amount of injury would be done. Mysore will be able in time to pay off its debt, and if the Government of India wanted the money all at once the people in the province would soon lend it. When the country has been given over there may probably be some exchange of territory between the two Governments, but till that takes place nothing can be done. The report which has gone forth is calculated to do a great deal of injury in the province if left uncontradicted, and we are happy to be able to give a complete denial to it.—Bangalore Spectator.

ENCOUNTER WITH A BEAR.—Captain H. Bailey, district engineer of Calicut, while lately on a tour of inspection in Wynaad, happened to come upon a ferocious bear at a place called Sultan's Battery. The captain fired at the bear but unfortunately missed it; the brute instantly charged him, threw him down, and bit his right arm, almost disabling it. Captain Bailey then thrust his left arm into the bear's mouth in order to free his right, so that he could pull out his shikari knife from his side, but this he was not able to do readily. Some Panniars who had accompanied him then shot the bear dead. Captain Bailey was removed to Calicut, and is under the treatment of Dr. Roberts. His left arm has sustained a compound fracture, both the bones, the ulna and the radius, being smashed an inch above the wrist; the forearm and the hand are severely wounded in three or four places; the right hand has a deep flesh wound.—Bombay Gazette.

NEW NATIVE JOURNAL.—A native correspondent informs the Madras Times that it has been determined to start a Telugu weekly newspaper from Friday, November 1, to be called Varthamana Theringini, or Flood of News, and will be more a law journal than a mere newspaper, as it will contain the following, viz.:—1, local and foreign news; 2, abstract of court decisions; 3, abstract of local record; 4, abstract of Acts, &c., useful to officials; 5, abstract of public orders of the Government and the Board of Revenue; 6, discount, premium of company bonds, &c., of mercantile matters; 7, educational and poetical matters; 8, wonderful tales; 9, appointments and all other informations that may be got at the time of publication of each issue.

REORGANISATION OF THE SALT DEPARTMENT.—The several suggestions made by Mr. Bliss, involving expenditure, have, for the most part, met with the approval of the Government of India. One of Mr. Bliss's principal suggestions was to nominate respectable, trustworthy, and educated persons to the appointments of salt superintendents, now held by uneducated natives on very small salaries, the consequence of which was that a good deal of corruption crept into the department. We learn that the reorganisation in the several salt producing districts is to take place at the beginning of the next official year.—Madras Times.

LOCUSTS.—A tahsildar in the Madras Presidency has hit upon the following plan of getting rid of locusts. He paid one anna to every individual who made a meal of them in his presence. After this the people took to the diet with such avidity that there were soon no locusts left in the taluk.—Pioneer.

FAMINE FUND PROSECUTION.—The Tahsildar of Hadgelly, who was being prosecuted at Bellary, at the instance of the Madras Government, for bribery in connection with famine funds, has been acquitted after a long trial. The judge and the assessors were unanimous, and the judge said the accused left the court without a stain upon his character.—Indian Daily News.

TYPHOID FEVER.—The correspondent of the Times of India writes that typhoid fever prevails to a very great extent in Madras, many deaths being reported. The native portion of the city is described as fearfully dirty, and sanitary regulations are much wanted.

BOMBAY.

STATION TALK.

OOMRAWUTEE, OCT. 9.—The news of the failure of the well-known house of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. has been received here with feelings of considerable surprise and regret. Great sympathy is felt for Mr. Hamilton Maxwell. Your special telegram from London, announcing the cause of the collapse of the City of Glasgow Bank should convey a salutary lesson to banking institutions in this country not to make advances to mercantile houses except on tangible security. It has always been a matter of surprise to me how one bank grants large "cash credits" to the European trading class in Berar, who make a living ostensibly on the "cash credit system," as the capital they are known to possess, in proportion to the advances they are allowed on no security whatever, is sufficiently represented by zero. Take, for instance, some of the mercantile firms who are engaged in the cotton trade in Berar. The branch banks afford them large cash credits annually, and by way of security they deposit fire insurance policies on cotton representing one-half or three-fourths of the capital advanced. They further sign an agreement with the bank to make over for discount all drafts drawn against consignments sent to Bombay, and as the houses so drawn upon have not a high commercial reputation the business is not altogether satisfactory. The local firms who obtain cash advances soon exhaust them, and they further draw bills at thirteen and sixteen days' sight on houses in Bombay, who act as their agents to the extent of a lakh or so, and what security does the bank possess as a set-off against its liabilities? Why, simply nothing! The bills it discounts goes to the head office in Bombay, by whom it is presented to the house on which it is drawn, when it is duly accepted; and the first bill for, say, Rs. 10,000 drawn is paid, when liabilities to the extent of a lakh and a-half, probably, have been incurred by moribund firms, whose assets, prior to this, were not worth ten thousand rupees purchase. A serious fall in the price of cotton, when stocks to the extent of 1,500 to 2,000 bales are held, would at once cause the collapse of some of the houses in Berar, who speculate freely on a system of financing, vulgarly known as lite-flying, and any failure of this kind must inevitably affect the position of firms in Bombay, with whom they have a quasi sort of connection, to facilitate financing of this nature; and as a logical sequence, the pockets of the bank shareholders. Can anything be more unsatisfactory? No one can refute my assertions, for the simple reason that I speak from facts that have come under my notice. As the consequence of Nicol and Co.'s failure, the native bankers in Oomrawuttee have been instructed not to encash any bills of European houses in Berar, whose paper at the present time is considered of no value whatever.—Correspondent of the Times of India.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY FRAUDS.—The

London board of directors of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have ordered by telegram that Mr. Dewey and Mr. Bedford are to be reinstated in their employment.—Bombay Gazette.

PANDHARPOOR.—His Excellency the Governor of Bombay visited this town on October 9 and laid the foundation-stone of a new orphanage to be erected at the cost of Mr. Chutoorhoop Mooraji, of Bombay. The municipality subsequently presented an address of welcome to the town, which is well known throughout India for its sacred shrine of Vittoba, the annual resort of 300,000 pilgrims.—Times of India.

DEATH OF MR. ARDESHIR MERWANJEE SETT.—On October 16 Mr. Ardeshir Merwanjee Sett, head of one of the wealthiest Parsee families in Bombay, was thrown from his horse and died soon after being removed to his own house. The deceased was thirty-six years of age. He was a member of the Municipal Corporation, and one of the largest landowners in Bombay, if not the very largest. The extensive property known as the Nowrojee Hill belonged to him. He leaves behind him two infant daughters. As heir to the Maneckjee Sett's family, he was trustee to all Maneckjee Sett's charitable institutions, and by right of his ancestors was head of the Bhagarsath Mobeds, or priests, of Bombay. Deceased had commenced to rebuild the large place known as the Maneckjee Sett Wadai in the Fort for the free use of the Parsee community, and had set apart a large sum for the purpose.—Times of India.

THE PRINCE'S DOCK.—This great undertaking, which is intended to improve the port of Bombay by affording safe and convenient means of shipping and discharging goods in lieu of the present clumsy process, by which merchandise has to be transferred from ships to boats, and from boats to bunders, and vice versa, with much delay and at considerable risk, is rapidly advancing towards completion. The exceptionally heavy and continuous rains of the recent monsoon of course retarded operations a good deal; but the work was pushed on vigorously whenever opportunity presented itself, and with good results. Altogether, there seems no reason to doubt that the dock will be ready to be opened by May next year. Several of the leading shipowners trading regularly with Bombay have already, we understand, entered into negotiations with a view to having a portion of the quay space of the dock set apart for their vessels. When it is completed there will be little danger of the facilities it will offer being neglected and its splendid machinery being allowed to rust, as some people predict it will, for want of use.—Bombay Gazette.

THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. W. NICOL AND CO.—The excitement in the native bazaar caused by the failure of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. seems to be subsiding, and there can be no reason why it should be kept up, as we believe the maximum amount any native creditor can lose on the estate is Rs. 50,000. Mr. W. Macaulay, who has been employed for many years in Messrs. W. Nicol and Co.'s office, has started in business on his own account, and we are glad to hear that he will probably be able to keep together most of the agencies held by the old firm. The British India Company, however, have sent over an agent from Calcutta to take temporary charge of their business. It should be mentioned in justice to Mr. Fleming, and we make the statement on the best authority, that he was anxious to stop payment in the year 1870, but that the directors of the City of Glasgow Bank, of whom his brother, James Fleming, was one, insisted that he should go on, and, as they were even then his largest creditors, he yielded to their advice.—Bombay Gazette.

DYED COTTON.—We have been shown some samples of dyed cotton by a new process said to have been invented by Mr. Dadabhai Jeejeebhoy Soonawalla, of Surat. The samples before us are of yarn dyed yellow, orange red, pink, and various shades of green. The dyed samples were submitted for the opinion of Dr. Lyon, professor of chemistry, Grant Medical College, and chemical analyser to Government, who found on examination that the colouring matter of the first two samples consisted entirely of compounds of lead. The colouring matter of the three green samples was found to consist of a mixture of indigo and a compound of lead. Under the microscope each fibre of the yarn seemed to be thoroughly stained, and no detached particles of colouring matter could be seen. Dr. Lyon is therefore of opinion that all the samples are dyed in such a manner as to make it highly probable that the colouring matter will remain fast under any ordinary circumstances. We need hardly say that this is a step in the right direction and deserves encouragement. At present all the quantity of dyed yarn required in India comes from Europe. We are aware of several attempts having been made in this presidency to give fast tints to yarn, but the efforts hitherto have been unsuccessful. Mr. Soonawalla's dyed samples have been also tested by Messrs. Rogers and Co., of Bombay, who certify that the colours are quite as fast as the samples of English dyed yarn they have tried. We have no doubt the enterprising millowners of Bombay will follow up this new opening, and, with the help of the Parsee inventor, be able to supply the Bombay market with Turkey red and blue cloths equal to the European manufacture.—Times of India.

KIRKEE SMALL ARMS AMMUNITION FACTORY.—In view of possible war with Afghanistan, a question of the very greatest importance is the efficiency of the manufactories whose work it is to supply ammunition for the Henri-Martini and Snider rifles, with which our troops are armed. When the news arrived that the Ameer of Cabul had refused to permit the Embassy sent by the Government of India to pass through his territory, Sir Richard Temple paid a visit to the Small Arms Ammunition Factory at Kirkee to satisfy himself by personal observation that everything is in a satisfactory state. His Excellency was well pleased with what he saw, as indeed he had every reason to be. The factory is capable of turning out 60,000 rounds of ammunition—35,000 Snider and 25,000 Martini—per diem.—Bombay Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPSHIPS.—H.M.'s troopship Euphrates arrived in Bombay harbour from Portsmouth on October 20, bringing drafts for several regiments in India. The s.s. Queen Margaret, 2,044 tons, Captain B. K. Butler, arrived in harbour on October 19 from London (which port she left on the 20th Sept.), calling at Malta and Suez, with the following officers and troops:—Captain J. L. Willis, Capt. S. D. Barrow, Lieut. Bennet, Surgeon-Major Brierley, 430 rank and file of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, and 230 horses.—Bombay Gazette.

CROPS.—We regret to hear that crop prospects in some of the Bombay districts are by no means favourable. The late rains have damaged them considerably, and the price of grain is rising. We hear from Allahabad that the excessive heat which has recently prevailed in Upper India has affected the crops greatly, and not more than a three-quarter one is expected.—Times of India.

BOMBAY COOKS.—It is pleasing to observe that the head-quarter staff of the Quetta force cannot be perfectly organised without some assistance from Bombay. The following advertisement appears in the columns of a local contemporary:—"Wanted, for Headquarter Staff at Quetta, a first-class Cook. Bombay men preferred.—Apply to, &c." Our cooks, then, if not our military men, are recognised at last.—Times of India.

TULSI WATERWORKS.—At a recent meeting of the Town Council an assurance was given by the municipal commissioner that the Tulsi water would be ready for delivery by the 1st of next January.—Times of India.

THE NERBUDDA BRIDGE.—The high level temporary bridge at the Nerbudda has been restored, and through train service resumed.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS.—At length the long, weary season of rain has broken into sunny weather, which may be expected to bring forward crops with rapidity. Everywhere, save in one or two favoured districts, the ripening of the cherry hangs back. The first blossoms did not mature: hence the paucity of early samples of coffee. In the Ouhah districts it was feared the spring blossom would be a failure; but, though late, it is putting in an appearance, and some look to have a five hundredweight crop in the spring. From Rakwane the accounts of crop are very favourable indeed. The result of the season's operations, as regards coffee exports, shows the extreme difficulty of accurately predicting the extent of our coffee crops. Opinions were all but unanimous in estimating the shipments for the season just closed at 500,000 cwt., or, at most, 550,000 cwt., whereas there have been exported fully 70,000 more than the highest of these estimates. This quantity does not include any of the new crop of Kandy coffee. In ordinary years there is a good deal, say about 30,000 cwt., of low-grown coffee, from Kaduganawa, Dolosbage, Matale, &c., cured and shipped during August and September. This year, we believe, only one parcel of 6 cwt. of new crop has been as yet exported. Had the usual quantity gone forward the season's exports would have amounted to 650,000. It will be well, therefore, that this fact be borne in mind in estimating the extent of the growing crop.—Ceylon Times.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint C. S. Hay, Esq., to be deputy to the Queen's Advocate for the Northern Circuit and visitor of the prison at Jaffa, under the Ordinance No. 16 of 1877. It is also notified that the Right Hon. the Secretary of State has been pleased to appoint H. Thwaites, Esq., to be registrar of the Supreme Court of the island of Ceylon, with effect from January 1 last. His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to recognise M. Saint-Etienne Fajou (pending reference to her Majesty's Government) as Vice-Consul at Galle for France during the absence of M. Ruinat from the colony, and to appoint him a justice of the peace for the island.—Gazette.

THE Ceylon Times understands that it is the intention of Mr. Justice Clarence to proceed to Europe in February next on three months' leave, Mr. Justice Dias taking up the acting appointment which he now holds for Mr. Stewart. Mr. Cayley goes home on eighteen months' leave of absence.

DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—It is now generally understood that the Secretary of State has offered the appointment of Director of Public Instruction in Ceylon to Mr. Charles Bruce, rector of the Royal College, Mauritius, which office he has filled since 1868. Mr. Bruce was formerly assistant librarian British Museum, and professor of Sanscrit at King's College, author of various pamphlets on classical subjects, and has published works on the Indian Veda.—Ceylon Times.

POSTAL REVENUE.—The report of the Postmaster-General for 1877 states, instead of a steady increase in the value of stamps sold and in postal collections, the receipts under these two items show a falling off on the previous year's revenue of 2,699 rupees and 75½ cents. The payments to the treasurer on account of money orders, parcel post, moneys, &c., bring up the total receipts of the year to 259,376 rupees and 69 cents., which amount exceeds the previous year's revenue by the small sum of 167 rupees and 24½ cents.—Ceylon Times.

THE NORTH WEST PROVINCE.—The administration report for the North Western Province for 1877 is certainly more encouraging than very many that have gone before, and we learn from it that good work is being done in regard to irrigation. The revenue for the year was 1,066,159 rupees and 39 cents, which was the largest on record, being an increase over that for 1876 of 33,548 rupees due to Puttalam district, the revenue of which was 761,339 rupees and 23½ cents, with an increase of 86,073 rupees and 79½ cents, there being in Seven Korales a decrease of 52,525 rupees and 79 cents. The chief decrease was under "Land Sales," which realised only 18,668 rupees and 68 cents, against, in 1876, 106,075 rupees and 81 cents, which had been exceptionally swollen by unusual competition for some large blocks of land brought forward for sale in that year.—Ceylon Times.

FREEMASONRY.—Freemasonry is making rapid strides in Ceylon, and the island can now boast of a Provincial Grand Lodge, of which Captain Gorman is the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, and Mr. John Maitland his deputy. The other Provincial Grand officers are exclusively past masters of lodges in the island. On the 10th ult. the Sailors' Home was formally dedicated to the purposes of Freemasonry, with the usual impressive ceremony, the Provincial Grand Lodge officers being present. The home will in future be used as a masonic hall.—Ceylon Times.

NEW ICE COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the Colombo Ice Company (Limited), held on October 6, the following resolution brought forward by the directors was referred to a committee:—"That the following arrangements made by the directors to sell the property, business, and goodwill of this company to a new company to be formed for the purpose of buying up the property, business, and goodwill of the Colombo Ice Company (Limited) and the Ceylon General Ice Company (Limited) is approved and confirmed, viz., that the Colombo Ice Company (Limited) is to receive 7 per cent. per annum on an assumed capital of Rs. 75,000, and that the balance of profits exceeding 7 per cent. per annum, viz., all profits over Rs. 5,250, be equally divided between the two companies."

CHINA AND RUSSIA.

THE attention directed to the Afghan crisis has hitherto caused but little heed to be paid to the political possibilities in other portions of Central Asia. The British public up to the last week or two has not looked beyond our own North Western Frontier, save so far as concerns the secret advice and possible aid from Russian Turkestan, on which the Ameer confessedly relies. It is hardly worth while to discuss the amount of "aiding and abetting" to be laid to the charge of Russia. The most recent telegram, which informs us that some thousands of Russian officers and soldiers have volunteered for Cabul, may be true to a certain extent. What is of much more concern to us, if we are wise enough to take advantage of it, is the altered relations between the Chinese in Eastern Turkestan and their Russian neighbours. It has gradually become evident that there is a very bitter quarrel on foot, which may break out into actual war. We are told that China demands—not sues for, but with strong insistence demands—the retrocession of certain territory occupied by the Russians as a sort of temporary police, under promise of restoration. Just as the retrocession of Bessarabia was insisted on, so is that of Kuldja or Ili, the former seat of Government, whence the Viceroy sent from Peking ruled Chinese Turkestan. The resolute determination evinced by the Chinese to regain their territory seems at first sight incredible. The prevalent idea in the minds of most has been that the existing friendship between the Chinese and the Russians was a continual source of danger to British interests. As a rule, this was only taken into consideration as affecting the commercial relations of China and England. As for the possible importance of Chinese friendship or enmity, as from a political point of view, it has been as much overlooked as the geographical fact that she is a great Asiatic Power whose borders nearly approach our own. The successful rebellion which for a time swept away Chinese authority in Kashgaria may be held partly responsible for this erroneous notion. The restoration of that authority, and the consequent demand for the retrocession of Kuldja, has forcibly reminded us of the true position that China holds in Central Asia. Simultaneously with the successful revolt of Yakoob Beg in Eastern Turkestan the authority of the Chinese in Ili or Kuldja, beyond the Thian Shan, was overthrown. A hundred years after the conquest of the province the Viceroy of Ili, sooner than surrender to the rebels, destroyed himself and many others, both friends and foes, by firing a mine of gunpowder prepared beneath his yamen. Abul Oghlan, who became nominal ruler in 1866, showed himself hostile to Russia, refusing to ratify the treaty of commerce executed at Kuldja between China and Russia in 1851. As he further permitted marauders to enter the Russian territories, the authorities of Naryn and Vernoe proceeded in 1871 to annex his dominions. Dzungaria was "annexed in perpetuity" and converted into the sub-governorship of Priilinsk, with admittedly good results in the way of material improvement; so good that the Russians are said to have demanded two millions as compensation for what an Irish tenant would call "unexhausted improvements." Although the terms of the proclamation, as quoted above, declared Ili to be annexed in perpetuity, yet the Russian Minister at Peking formally acknowledged it to be Chinese territory, and solemnly promised, in the name of the Czar, to restore it to his Imperial brother so soon as the latter should be able to maintain tranquillity therein. The fulfilment of this promise is now demanded by China, and her commander-in-chief has mustered some 50,000 men, equipped with Berdan rifles, and backed by Armstrong guns, by way of actual demonstration of his power to maintain the tranquillity of the country. The retrocession so urgently demanded by China is declared by the Russian Press to be impossible. There must be no retrograde movement in Central Asia. We hear of embassies projected or despatched; of various excuses and evasions on the part of the Russian authorities. Tso Tsung Tang reiterates his demand, and hurries up his reinforcements. Day by day the breach widens; the antagonism of Chinese and Russian interests develops itself; China, once awakened from its dream of Russian truth and friendship, will open its eyes to see other points of contact and conflict. The Mantchu pride and valour will risk a war sooner than recede. Thus, instead of massing troops for the conquest of Balkh, or the reinforcement of the Ameer, the Governor of Turkestan may find himself menaced at Tashkant; and this surely affords us an opportunity of demonstrating that we also can avail ourselves of the frontier difficulties of our rival, and create a diversion which will seriously embarrass him by co-operating with the Chinese, or at least endeavouring to enter into closer bonds of alliance with the third great Power of Central Asia.

There can be little doubt in the mind of any one who takes a calm retrospect of our policy during the last ten years that it has by no means conduced to co-operation on the part of the Peking Government. It would seem as if we had forgotten that the Emperor of China, with whom we had concluded treaties of amity, albeit obtained at the cost of a series of wars, held sway over countries conterminous with India. One clause of our treaty prohibited English travellers or traders from exercising their rights of travel or traffic in rebellious provinces. In apparent unconsciousness of this, we sent a mission to Yunnan, then in the possession of the rebel Panthay Emperor of Tali-fu, and we bullied the King of Burma, a tributary of the Chinese Empire, for not heartily abetting us in the scheme of opening up Chinese trade routes by the help of Chinese rebels. It is notorious that on the one hand the unlucky Mahomedans of Yunnan were buoyed up by the vain hope of British aid, while on the other the slow but sure vengeance of Pekin was quickened in its movements by the apprehension of such a possibility. But this was of little consequence compared with the masterpiece of diplomatic blundering, called the treaty between England and Kashgar, entered into in 1874.

It will be almost incredible to future readers of our Asiatic history that England, as it were, held out the right hand of friendship to the Emperor of China, and with the left ratified a treaty acknowledging "His Highness the Ameer of Kasghar and Yarkand, his heirs and successors," as the rightful owners of the Chinese province which Yakoob Beg had won by rebellion and massacre. The heirs and successors have fled or surrendered, and the Chinese authority is reinstated over Eastern Turkestan, supported by well-armed and well-disciplined forces of victorious veterans. It may well be that the task of convincing the Court of Pekin of our readiness to support it against the common enemy in Central Asia will be a hard one. It is, however, plain that we can need no extension of territory which can diminish the Chinese Empire by one square mile, while the ever-advancing tide of Russian dominion is not likely to be stayed by the Thian Shan range or any other physical barrier. There is a strong party in China which inclines to our side, although the lingering strength of the old obstructive or exclusive Mandarins is by no means broken. Had it not been for the paralysing influence of the famine we should ere now have witnessed an increased development of Chinese resources under the auspices of English engineers. The very famine itself has given an opportunity for the cultivation of feelings of gratitude to the foreigners who helped the starving thousands. We have still to overcome the jealous suspicion of our desire for conquest which hermetically closes the frontier of Thibet. An opportunity is offered for repairing the blunders of the past; for showing a readiness to establish a solid and sincere pact of mutual benefit. It must be the true object of English statesmen to define the barriers of the three Great Powers in Central Asia, and thus secure peace and prosperity within our borders. Are we to leave China to be forced or cajoled into an injurious alliance or an uncertain conflict with Russia, or are we to seize the opportunity of consolidating an alliance with her? Such an alliance must give the two allied Powers that preponderance in the politics of Central Asia which may prevent the appearance even of the indistinct "shadow on the hill-sides" of Afghanistan. The Russian journals, with scarce an exception, have taken care to undeceive us as to the real meaning of the intermeddling of the agents of the Court of St. Petersburg in the councils of the Ameer. The jubilant denunciation of our interference with the progress of Holy Russia in Central Asia at least deserves to be converted into "truth" for the future. We are not advocating offence or attack, but if, for purposes of her own, Russia instigates hostilities on our side of the Hindu Koh, it will serve as a counterpoise if she is brought to find herself vulnerable beyond the passes of the Thian Shan. The very possibility of diplomatic reprisals may make her hesitate; the certainty, once assured, must make her pause.

The Kurrachee paper considers that his Highness Mir Ali Murad of Khyrpore has been grossly maligned by the reports which have been published to the effect that he was in secret correspondence with Cabul. The Bombay Gazette is inclined to think with the Beacon that the old Sind Chief is too wide awake to his own interests for these rumours to have any foundation in fact.

It will be published in Paris on the translator's return from his present Indian voyage. This work was undertaken some years ago, but its completion was prevented by the Franco-Prussian war. M. Gauvain is greatly interested in Indian literature, having already published a French translation of Bishop Bigandet's "Life of Gautama."

THE MESSAGERIES NATIONALES S.S. "D'JEMNAH."—We learn from a private letter that the above steamer, on her departure from Marseilles on Sunday last, struck on a rock. The stormy weather had delayed the sailing of the steamer, which did not leave till 5 p.m. While the passengers were at dinner they were alarmed by the shock and the grinding of the vessel upon the rock. After a night of great alarm—during which the pumps were continually at work—the vessel was towed off in the morning and returned to Marseilles, when on examination she was found too infirm to proceed on her voyage. Her passengers left on Friday in the Sindh, and the D'Jemnah will be ready to leave next month.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—It is notified by the company that, in pursuance of a resolution of the board of directors, proprietors holding shares with £18 per share already called up, are required to pay a further call of £2 per share upon each such share (making £20 per share called up) on or before the 30th day of December proximo, at the London and County Bank, 21, Lombard-street, London, and if such call be not paid on or before the said 30th day of December, the holders of the shares will not be entitled to receive interest upon any portion of their shares so long as such call shall remain unpaid, but will, nevertheless, be chargeable with interest upon the arrears at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, and the shares will become liable to forfeiture under "The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845."

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £200,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £52,500, and to Bombay, £50,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 18. 7½d., and on Bombay at 18. 7¾d., will receive in full. No allotment below this price. Last week the price for both Presidencies was 18. 7¼d. Tenders for £200,000 in Government bills on India will be received at the Bank of England on Wednesday next, of which not more than £80,000 will be drawn on the Government of Bombay. The power reserved by Clause 3 of the advertisement of Aug. 23, 1876, in regard to sums recently advertised, for which tenders have not been accepted, will not be exercised on this occasion.

THE DUTCH INDIES.—A telegram from The Hague states that in Tuesday's sitting of the Second Chamber, the Minister for the Colonies presented the Budget for the Dutch Indies. Replying to objections on the part of the Bureaux of the Chamber, he defended the military policy of the Government with respect to Acheen. The Government desired that the positions of the Dutch should be effectively maintained, but wished to avoid all aggressive action unless it became absolutely necessary. Proposals would shortly be brought forward for the definite settlement of the financial relations between the Indian possessions and the home country, and in the meantime colonial bonds to the extent of 4,000,000 florins would be withdrawn. The deficit for 1879 the Minister estimated at 8,830,000 florins. In order to place the Indian finances upon a more stable footing the Government was preparing several reforms, among which were the revision of the succession duty and of the excise upon tobacco and spirituous liquors the increase of the export duties upon products outside Java, and the introduction of a capitation tax in the Lampong district.

PROPOSED INDO-MEDITERRANEAN RAILWAY.—A correspondent, writing from Beyrout, says:—"Lieutenant Cameron is still engaged in organising his expedition for exploring the Tigris Valley to ascertain its fitness for the proposed Indo-Mediterranean Railway. Lieutenant Cameron holds this route to be preferable to that along the Euphrates Valley, being better adapted for trade and more thickly populated. The expedition will be absent until the end of April at least. The people at Beyrout are most desirous that their town should form the western terminus of the proposed railway. Lieutenant Cameron, on leaving Beyrout to explore the Tigris Valley along the sea coast to Latakiah, and thence eastward up the valley of the Kebni, across the Orontes, and passing through Aleppo, will strike the Tigris a short distance above Mosul. M. Schaeffer, of Luxembourg, and M. Boruragan, a Chaldean, and formerly missionary in Mosul and in Persia, accompany the expedition, the latter as interpreter. Two or three surveys have been organised at Beyrout, to obtain a practicable route for the proposed Indo-Mediterranean railway across the Lebanon to the plain beyond. The valley of the Beyrout river has been surveyed up to the Lebanon proper, but as this rises on its north side almost like a wall, a tunnel of five or six miles would be necessary. The coast route to Tripoli was also found full of expensive obstacles. Another survey is to be made to the south, by Sidon, across the Litany river, and thence between Mount Hermon and the spurs of the ante-Lebanon via Damascus."

GENERAL JAMES MACLEOD BANNATYNE FRASER-TYLER, C.B., formerly of the Bengal Staff Corps, who has been recently placed on the retired list, served as a subaltern in the campaign of 1842 in Afghanistan under General Pollock, and was severely wounded at the Khyber Pass. He next served as aide-de-camp to Lord Gough throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, and Sobraon, receiving a medal and two clasps for his services. He was likewise on active service throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the passage of the Chenab, battles of Chillianwallah and Gojrat, and pursuit of the Sikhs and Afghans; for his services in this campaign he was awarded a medal and two clasps, and the brevet rank of major. On the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny he was employed as assistant quartermaster-general to Sir Henry Havelock's force from its first taking the field in July, 1857, and took part in the actions of Futtehpoore, Aoung, Pandoo Nuddee, Cawnpore, Oonao, Busserutgunge (both actions), Bithoor, Mungarwar, and first relief of the garrison of Lucknow, on which occasion he was severely wounded. For his services during the Indian Mutiny he received a medal with clasp, the brevet rank of colonel, and a year's service, being likewise nominated a Companion of the Bath on the 21st January, 1858. On the 6th March, 1846, he was nominated adjutant to the 9th Regiment of Bengal Irregular Cavalry, and became second in command of that corps on the 5th May, 1849. He was latterly for a few years in command of the Sirhind division of the Bengal Army, and for some time has been in receipt of a reward for distinguished service from the Indian Government. General J. M. B. Fraser-Tyler, C.B., was placed on the retired list on the 20th August, 1878.

BENGAL UNATTACHED LIST.—Colonel Andrew Simpson Smith, Bengal Infantry, died on Oct. 27, at 3, Norwood-terrace, Southsea. The deceased joined the Indian Army in March, 1842, and was promoted lieutenant in April, 1845; captain, March, 1854; major, April, 1859; lieutenant-colonel, September, 1866; and colonel, March 3, 1873. He served throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the actions of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Buddiwal, and Aliwal (medal with two clasps). Served in 1853 as second in command of the 3rd Punjab Infantry, with the force under General Hodgson employed against hill tribes west of the Derajat; also at the affair of Kehat Kohtul, under Major Coke; in the Meranzaie expedition, under General Chamberlain, in 1855. Served in the Indian Mutiny campaign in 1857-58; in Moozuffurnuggur District as commandant of Sooltan Jan's Ressala, from September, 1857, until April, 1858 (severely wounded at Thannah Bown, lost use of right hand); was orderly officer to Brigadier Coke at the actions of Bhagwala and Nugeene; joined General Jones's column at Moradabad, and accompanied it to Bareilly, was in command of pursuing party at the Dojorah Nullah on May 5, 1858; captured enemy's guns and ammunition—horse killed under him by a round shot (mentioned in despatches of Generals Jones and Coke, medal and brevet of major).

England, to assume command of the Reserve Column of the Afghan Expedition. Captain N. R. Stewart, 68th Regiment, has joined the general's staff as aide-de-camp. Colonel J. Hills, V.C., C.B., who commanded the mortar battery in the Abyssinian campaign, and who greatly distinguished himself during the mutiny, when he received special mention in the Governor-General's despatches, has been selected to perform the important duties of assistant adjutant-general on the staff of General Stewart. The appointment of Sir Neville Chamberlain as military member of the Governor-General's Council has only been made as a temporary measure. Sir Frederic Staines has, it is understood, no intention of withdrawing from the command of the Afghan Expedition, and the idea prompted by the telegram from India that General Sir Samuel Browne will replace him is believed to be entirely erroneous. General Sir James Brind, K.C.B., is about to vacate his divisional command and return to England. Major-General R. O. Bright, C.B., has arrived in India, and relieved Lieutenant-General the Hon. Arthur Hardinge, C.B., in his divisional command.—The 5th and 6th Batteries of the 8th Brigade Royal Artillery, consisting of ten officers and 174 men, and the depot battery of the 8th Brigade, consisting of one officer and 119 men, have embarked at Plymouth for conveyance to India. They are accompanied by the usual complement of women and children. A draft of forty-one men, under an officer of the 51st Light Infantry, have also arrived at Plymouth by rail for passage to India by the Malabar.—Major-General G. C. Silver, Madras Army, now in England on leave, has applied for permission to resign his command in India and retire from the service.—In the event of hostilities with Afghanistan, it is understood that Colonel C. G. Arbuthnot, Inspector General of artillery for India, and now in Calcutta, will be chosen to command the artillery of the expedition. He was formerly stationed at Simla, in the capacity of officiating inspector general of Ordnance and Magazines, in which post he was succeeded by Colonel G. Campbell, R.A.—Major W. H. Noble, R.A., secretary to the special committee on Ordnance at Simla, is selected to be assistant adjutant general of the siege train on the Afghan frontier. He was formerly secretary to the Ordnance select committee at Woolwich, and before leaving for India served as British Commissioner at the Philadelphia Exhibition.—A complete siege train, composed of 63-inch howitzers, 40-pounders, and the several guns, carriages, wagons, and stores which go to make up what is known as a light unit, has been issued from the Woolwich Arsenal for the use of the army in north-west India.

PROPOSED PURCHASE OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY BY THE GOVERNMENT.—A rumour was afloat in the City last week to the effect that the Indian Government had decided to take over the East Indian Railway. According to the original contract, the Government has the right to purchase this railway on February 15 next. This is the first time the Government has decided to exercise its right of purchase, the time for doing so having expired in the case of the Great Indian Peninsula. It will be interesting, therefore, to cite the dates at which the successive transfers may take place under the agreements between the Government and the companies. The Eastern Bengal may be taken over in July 30, 1883; Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi, January 1, 1885; Oude and Rohilkund, August 2, 1887; South Indian, March 1, 1890; Bombay, Baroda, and Central India, May 1, 1905; and Madras, April 1, 1907. The rumour was proved to be true by the following official communication made to the London Stock Exchange by the secretary of the company:—"I am desired to state, in order to prevent any doubt arising on the subject, that the Secretary of State in Council has signified his intention of acquiring the property of the East Indian Railway Company (including the Jubbulpore line, by agreement) in the terms of the contract. The price proposed is £125 for every £100 of capital stock, and the mode of payment an annuity terminating on Feb. 14, 1953, of £4 6s. with 4s. added for the redemption of the stock, which is equal to £5 12s. 6d. for every £100 of capital stock. It is also proposed that the administration of the line shall remain in the hands of the company upon terms which, together with those of the purchase, will be submitted to the shareholders at an extraordinary general meeting, summoned for Tuesday, the 19th instant." A reference to Mr. Juland Danvers' report, recently issued, shows that the total length of the line, including both main line and branches, including the loop and chord lines, with their branches and the Jubbulpore line, is 1,503¼ miles of 5 feet 6 inches gauge, the whole of which is opened for traffic, with 410¼ miles of double line. It enjoys the advantage of being able to procure the whole of the fuel consumed from its own resources in India. The total number of proprietors up to Dec. 31, 1877, appears to be 17,608, both European and native, in England and in India, and the total amount of capital authorised to be raised to March 31, 1878, £39,857,967. The capital expended, partly estimated has been £30,532,000; and the earnings per cent. per annum £9 os. 10d. Several leading stockbrokers have addressed the secretary of the company a joint letter asking for more particulars as to the terms on which the Indian Government has taken over the line; in reply to which the company publish the terms of working and the settlement of the future relations of the company with the Government. In virtue of this arrangement the company will continue to work the line for a term of years to be agreed upon. The capital of the newly-organised company will be one-fifth of the present share capital, or about £5,000,000. This capital will receive a minimum interest of 4 per cent., and all surplus profits will be divided in the proportions of one-fifth to the company and four-fifths to the Government.

LIEUT. GEN. SIR SAMUEL BROWNE, V.C., C.B., K.C.S.I., who has been appointed to the command of the troops now being massed in the Peshawur Valley, was brought up in the 46th Bengal Native Infantry, the regiment which had the honour of training Speke and Grant. Sir Samuel served with it throughout the Punjab campaign, being present at the passage of the Chenab, the affairs of Ramnuggur and Sadoolapore, and the battles of Chilianwallah and Goojerat. With the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, in December, 1852, Capt. Browne served in the operations against the Oomurzae Vaziris on the Bunno frontier, when he was mentioned in the despatch of Major John Nicholson; in the Bondar expedition, under Sir Neville Chamberlain, Capt. Browne was again mentioned. On the outbreak of the mutiny, a squadron of his regiment, under Lieut. Dighton Probyn, was detached to Hindostan, and in the siege of Delhi and subsequent affairs between that city and Lucknow earned for its young commander a brevet majority and Victoria Cross. At the siege and capture of Lucknow, the affairs at Koorsee, Roowiah, Allygunge, and Battle of Bareilly, Capt. Brown commanded his regiment, and then, being detached in charge of a small field force, consisting of the present 24th Punjab Infantry and a couple of companies of Rifles, planned and executed a brilliant attack on the rebels strongly posted at Sirpoorah on Aug. 31, 1858. The enemy were defeated with great slaughter, their camp and guns falling into our hands. For this action Major Browne was awarded the Victoria Cross, for having, in the words of an official despatch, "while advancing upon the enemy's position at daybreak, pushed on with one orderly sower upon a 9-pounder gun that was commanding one of the approaches to the rebel position and attacked the gunners, thereby preventing them reloading and firing upon the infantry who were advancing to the attack. In doing this a personal conflict ensued, in which Major Browne received a severe sword cut on the left knee, and shortly after another sword cut, which severed the left arm at the shoulder, not, however, before he had succeeded in cutting down several of his assailants." Had it not been for the heroism of two Sikh orderlies, Jamiyat and Shefe Singh, the 2nd Punjab Cavalry would have had to deplore the loss of their brave leader, who for his conduct received, besides the Victoria Cross, the Companionship of the Bath and a brevet lieutenant colonelcy. Until 1864 Col. Browne retained command of his original regiment, when he was promoted to the Corps of Guides; and in 1869, on the Peshawur Brigade falling vacant, he succeeded Gen. Donald Stewart in that post, relinquishing it on promotion to major general two years afterwards. In 1875 Gen. Browne was selected to accompany his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to India, and for his services in connection with the Royal visit was, in conjunction with Adjutant Dighton Probyn, selected for advancement to the knighthood of the Star of India. After the Prince's visit Sir Samuel Browne was nominated "Director of Remount Operations," and, on the Lahore division falling temporarily vacant, owing to the absence on sick leave of Gen. Donald Stewart, he once more succeeded that officer. Unfortunately, just about this time the Government of India was deprived of the services of Sir Edward Johnson, the military member of the Viceroy's Council, who was compelled to take sick leave to England, and the choice of a successor fell on Sir S. J. Browne, whose wide experience of mountain warfare and intimate knowledge of the Afghan people peculiarly qualified him to advise Lord Lytton at this crisis.

BREAKDOWN OF THE "MALABAR."—This troopship, which, as stated in our last issue, left Portsmouth on Friday, the 1st inst., to call at Plymouth to take on board a detachment of soldiers, broke down twelve miles off Start Point at 5 a.m. on Saturday. She signalled to the Benjamin Whitworth, steamship, for assistance. At 5.30 a.m. those on board the Benjamin Whitworth saw a couple of rockets sent up from the Malabar twelve miles off the Start Light, and on coming alongside the captain of the Malabar asked to be taken in tow by the Benjamin Whitworth. At the time of the latter ship coming up a small steamer was endeavouring to tow the Malabar, but she failed in the attempt. The Benjamin Whitworth stood by till eight o'clock, when she took her in tow. About six miles outside the breakwater they were met by two steam tugs which had been sent out to meet them, and all three towed into Plymouth Sound, where they arrived at 4 p.m. A survey speedily showed that the breakdown was occasioned through failure in the compensating vacuum balance of the port main slide, by which the slide was subjected to undue pressure, causing it to cut up badly, also seriously injuring the cylinder slide face. It was at once decided to advise the Admiralty that the only effectual remedy was to remove the slide to the factory at once and relace it, which could be completed by the evening of the following Wednesday, provided the Admiralty would sanction workmen being employed in relays night and day until the job was completed, and also allow the machinery to be worked the whole of Sunday. The Admiralty approved the submission, and requested the estimated date to be anticipated if possible. The defective machinery was taken into Keyham on Sunday evening, and the men worked upon it throughout the night. The Malabar was taken into Messrs. Muir and Anderson's (late Napier and Co.), Glasgow, on the 4th of May last, and was thoroughly repaired by them, at a cost of £30,000. She returned to Portsmouth about three weeks ago, so that the present is her first trip. £300 is the estimated cost of her repairs, and this will fall upon the Indian Exchequer. Captain C. T. Curme, Mr. J. Trickett, chief engineer of Keyham factory; and Mr. W. N. Covey, chief inspector of machinery afloat, sat on Tuesday afternoon as a court of inquiry to take evidence and report to the Admiralty upon the break-down. It was elicited that the work recently performed upon her by Messrs. Muir and Anderson was carried out to the entire satisfaction of Mr. L. F. Jordan, the chief engineer of the ship, and that in her passage from Glasgow to Portsmouth, and also in her steam trials at the latter port, the working of her machinery in every part was all that could be desired. It was confessed a departure was made from the Admiralty direction, which lays down that at the conclusion of all trials, before the machinery is received from the contractors, and the necessary certificate given, all working parts shall be opened up for the inspection of the steam reserve and ship's officers. The engines having appeared while working absolutely free from defect, and the India Office pressing for the speedy service of the ship, were the reasons put forth in justification of the omission. With respect to the break-down, it was stated that for the first few hours after starting the engines worked well, but shortly after midnight, when about twenty miles east of the Start, indication was given that something had gone wrong with the main slide valve; the captain's permission was obtained for the engines to be stopped for fifteen minutes, to allow an adjustment to be made, whereby it was hoped she would be enabled to reach Plymouth for further repairs. The adjustment, as far as possible from the exterior, being made, to the consternation of all the attempt to start proved fruitless, the engine showing a resolute determination to remain stationary. The whole of the engine-room staff were at once called to remove the slide bonnets, when it was proved that, in addition to the entire collapse of the compensating balance arrangement, the faces had terribly scored. A report embracing the whole evidence was forwarded to the Admiralty on Tuesday evening, with the court's recommendations thereon, for their lordships' consideration.

THE AMU DARYA.—If the Russian papers are correct in asserting that the Amu Darya has returned to its original bed, one of the most extraordinary revolutions have occurred in Central Asia. Whether the work has been accomplished by human means—as is more probable—or by the fiat of nature, as the Russians would have it appear, there can be no question that this event must work a great change in the existent condition of things in Western Turkestan. The Amu Darya, or Oxus, has for several centuries discharged itself into the south-east corner of the Sea of Aral. But geographers had proved to the satisfaction of all students of the question that even in the fifteenth century it still preserved its original and natural course to the Caspian Sea. Intimately connected with the Amou question is that of the past existence of the Aral Sea, which is known at various periods to have been to a great extent converted into a marsh, and which now owes its existence principally to its two river feeders, the Oxus and the Jaxartes. But the question of the original bed of the Oxus is not so simple as it would appear from the question whether its true outlet is in the Caspian or in the Aral, for there yet remains to decide which is its ancient bed to the former sea. The more probable view is that it was that known as the Oghuz, which, skirting the steep Ust Urt plateau, traced its way to the Caspian either at Balkan or Michael Bay. That bed still remains clearly traceable from Khiva to the Caspian, and it was with the object of diverting the Oxus to that channel that the "Company for the Encouragement of Industry and Commerce" was started some eight years ago, under the special patronage of the Grand Duke Constantine and Prince Gortschakoff. The scheme is a grandiose one, and in order to carry it out to a successful conclusion would necessitate an expenditure and an amount of labour that could not be applied without some rumour of it reaching our ears. At the same time it is wise to recognise that, if this design were accomplished, it would give Russia immense advantages, of which not the least would be a direct water way from the Volga to Charjui, on the borders of Bokhara and the Turcoman country. There is also another abandoned channel known as the southern branch of the river. This breaks off at Hazarasp, south of the city of Khiva, and is traceable across Kara Kum and through the Kuren Bagh. It entered the Caspian probably in the vicinity of the Atrak river at a place still known as Aktubbe. It consequently passed close to Kizil Arvat, the Turcoman post which the Russians appear now to have permanently seized. Strictly speaking, these are the only two original beds of the Oxus, but it is highly improbable that it is to either of them that the river Oxus has reverted. If such were the case it would not only lead to "Russia reoccupying Khiva," but also to her acquiring possession of the whole of Kara Kum, and the centre of her power in Central Asia would at once be shifted from Tashkent to Krasnovodsk and the shores of the Caspian—a revolution in present circumstances in Central Asia which must be obvious to every observer. It is more probable, however, that the change is not of this startling character, and that the rumour refers only to the Laudan arm of the river, which is the most western branch of it, and which should flow into the marshy lake of Aibughir, the south western corner of the Aral Sea. This arm was dammed up about fifty years ago, and its waters diverted to another arm; but ever since it has displayed a constant inclination to return to its former course. The flow of water was believed to be increasing with each year, so that the task would not have been a difficult one of removing the dam altogether, and thus restoring the Laudan branch to its original bed. This is probably what has occurred. It may also be the first step towards the completion of the greater design of flooding the Oghuz channel; but to effect that gigantic scheme much remains to be done. It is necessary to remember that the greatest rush of water is at present towards the west, because the canals for irrigation, &c., are all constructed on the left bank of the river. This fact must facilitate the task of restoring the Oxus to its old bed. The Russians probably mean by the phrase "re-occupying Khiva," that they will seize the Laudan mouth of the river.—Times.

THE TRUE STORY OF SIR LEWIS PELLY'S MISSION.—The following information, which has reached us (Globe) from a source entitled to every confidence, has a very important bearing at the moment, on account of the clear view it presents of the chain of events which led up to the present critical situation on the Indian frontier. The excusable anxiety of the public for authentic information in connection with Sir Lewis Pelly's mission and its results has led to a demand in some quarters for the publication of the official papers connected with the mission. We have reason to believe that what we now publish represents matters as faithfully in all essentials as the official despatches themselves:—'In the autumn of 1876 Lord Lytton sent an invitation to Ameer Shere Ali to attend the great Delhi assembly when the Queen of England was declared Empress of India. It is not certain whether the Ameer of Cabul really comprehended the precise nature of this addition to the 'styles and titles' of Britain's Sovereign, but one thing he saw clearly, that to accept such an invitation would be to yield his position as an independent monarch. It was hardly to be expected that an independent ruler, possessing an army of 60,000 troops, should deign to place himself on a level with such minor satellites as the Rajah of Cashmere and the Khan of Kheht. The invitation thus sent in the name of the Queen of England was treated with scorn, and the Viceroy waited in vain for a reply. It was a clever move on the part of the Viceroy, but the bait did not take. Sundry rumours then reached the Indian Government, through their native agent at Cabul, that the Ameer was sulky, and, moreover, that a Russian spy was present at the Cabul Court in the person of a certain Bokhariot. Such being the state of things, the Indian Government thought it well to test these rumours by inviting the Ameer either to come in person or to send a properly accredited Envoy to meet the Governor General's agent at Peshawur. A political conference was arranged. The British Plenipotentiary selected for this mission was Colonel Sir Lewis Pelly, and the envoy appointed by the Ameer was Syud Nur Mohamed Shah. The Peshawur conference commenced on the 23rd of January, 1877, and lasted a period of some six weeks. Throughout the whole conference it was evident that the Ameer was not amenable to argument. The demands of the Indian Government were moderate and reasonable. The present state of affairs in the East required that Her Majesty's Government should be in possession of the most trustworthy information with regard to the affairs of Central Asia, and the time had now arrived when England desired to place English officers as agents in Herat, Balkh, and Candahar. As it was known that the Ameer objected to having an English envoy at Cabul, that would not be pressed, although the principle that such an agent might eventually be sent even to the Cabul Court was insisted upon. In return for this England was prepared to enter upon a treaty both offensive and defensive with the Ameer, to restore the subsidy at one time granted to his father, Dost Mohamed; and, if the Ameer wished it, the succession to the throne of Cabul of his favourite son, Abdullah, would be guaranteed. The proposals were, of course, submitted by letter to the Ameer, and some time elapsed before a reply was received by his agent. The Ameer of Cabul was inexorable. He needed no help, he required no treaty; he had borne with the English long enough! What had the English done for him? When he was dethroned by his brothers, Afzul and Azim, the English had recognised the usurpers as Ameer of Afghanistan! When he sought their arbitration with reference to his difficulties with Persia on the Seistan question, the English had decided in favour of his enemies! When his son Yakub was in open rebellion against him, the English had tried to interfere in his rebel son's favour! And now they had even threatened his kingdom by the occupation of Quetta! For six long weeks did Sir Lewis Pelly try his diplomatic skill to the utmost to find a remedy, but he left Peshawur on April 2 with the draft of the treaty unsigned in his pocket, whilst the whole country around him was breathing threatenings of a religious war. There was, it is true, a report circulated that the sudden death of the Cabul Envoy at Peshawur had brought the conference to an untimely end, but no one knows better than Lord Lytton himself that Ameer Shere Ali Khan had virtually declared war during the very sittings of the political conference at Peshawur. From March 26, 1877, the day on which the Ameer's Envoy died at Peshawur, until the day on which Major Cavagnari was insulted in the Khyber Pass, not one single communication has been received from the Ameer of Cabul. More than one person has been killed by order of the Ameer as suspected British spies at his Court, whilst eighteen months ago he openly summoned the chiefs of the different tribes to join him in a jihad against the British. All this has been going on day by day and month by month for the last two years; and yet our impending war with Afghanistan takes the whole British nation by surprise."

THE COMMERCIAL BANK OF ALEXANDRIA.

The second annual report and balance-sheet of the above company was submitted to the shareholders at the general meeting at Cannon-street Hotel on Wednesday. A dividend of 3s. per share was declared, which, with the interim dividend of 1s. 6d. per share paid in May last, will be equal to 7½ per cent. per annum. The profits for the past year amount to £25,092 5s. 8d., which, considering the dulness of trade at Alexandria, may be considered very satisfactory. £5,000 was placed to the reserve fund, raising it to £25,000, and the following directors, J. M. Aglasto, Esq., J. C. Cheromi, Esq., T. M. Ralli, Esq., and C. M. Salvage, Esq., who retire by rotation, were re-elected. The business of the bank seems to be steadily improving and affords very desirable facilities for trade and commerce between this country and the East.

THE returns of mortality among the British troops serving in the Madras Presidency for the half year gives the following results:—The total strength of the European troops is given at 11,016, and there were 12,591 admissions into hospital. There were 160 deaths in hospital and 28 out of it, the death rate being 14.54 per 1,000. Secunderabad shows the highest comparative mortality among the stations, 37 deaths having taken place there.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1871, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—“It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics.”

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. THE DEAF, AND THE SO-CALLED

“DEAF AND DUMB.”

PRESIDENT.

HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The “German” System teaches spoken and written language to the “Deaf and Dumb.” It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablet.

The Training College and School of the Society is situated at The Elms, Castlebar-hill, Ealing, Middlesex.

Applications for the admission of Students and Pupils should be addressed to the Secretary, No. 1, Nottingham-place, York-gate, Regent's-park.

Donations and Subscriptions are solicited for the purpose of extending the System throughout the United Kingdom, by promoting Schools for the Poor; and for the gratuitous or assisted training of Students, not in a position to pay the ordinary College fees.

The want of well qualified Teachers is one of the most serious drawbacks to the proper instruction of the Deaf, and to supply this want in the best manner is a main object of this Society.

Subscriptions may be paid to the Treasurer, Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., at Messrs. Roberts, Lubbock, and Co., 15, Lombard-street, E.C.; or to the Vice-Chairman, E. James Thompson, Esq., M.D., at Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., and Co., Cavendish-square, W.; or to the other Bankers of the Society, Messrs. Fraed and Co., 189, Fleet street, E.C.; and Messrs. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay to October 28; Allahabad and Madras, October 26; Calcutta, October 25.

THE general remarks on the season and prospects for the week ending October 15 are as follows:—"Prospects in Madras continue good; the weather in Kurnool is now more favourable, and good rain has fallen in Tinnevely; in Malabar and Coimbatore some damage to crops is again reported. A further decrease of 6,848 has taken place in the number—70,936—on relief works, and of 7,258 in that—41,154—gratuitously relieved. In Mysore the crops are doing well and prices continue to fall. There has been a further diminution of 2,152 and 639 respectively in the numbers on relief works and in receipt of gratuitous relief. In the Bombay Presidency prospects generally are fair, but in several districts some damage has been caused by locusts, and in Sind prices are high. In the Central Provinces the prospects of the kharif continue to improve and are on the whole good; harvesting of rice on high lands and lesser millets is going on, and preparations for the rabi are in active progress; cholera continues to decrease, and prices remain generally steady. In Berar the kharif crops are in good condition, and preparations for the rabi have begun. In Central India rain is wanted in Gwalior and Bundelkhand for rabi sowings; in Malwa prospects are very favourable. In Rajputana the want of rain continues to be felt in Jeypore and Ulwar. Prospects generally remain favourable in Bengal; good rain has fallen in parts of Eastern Bengal and in Pooree, but its want is now felt in places in the Burdwan and Patna Divisions, and generally in the Chota Nagpore Division; floods have caused some damage in a few places. The report from Assam shows no change. In British Burma prospects have continued to improve, and are now on the whole favourable throughout the province, especially in the Arakan and Tenasserim Divisions. In part of the Prome districts, however, it is improbable that there will be a good outturn, as in some cases the land has only lately been planted out, and in Thayetmyi it is too late to replant what has been destroyed. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the outturn of the harvest, which is being gathered in, is expected to be generally good; locusts and hot winds have done some damage in places, and in Jhansi rain is much wanted. In the Punjab prospects continue good; fever is very general, and is indeed reported to be prevalent throughout a great part of the country. Rain is wanted in the Hissar district, where rabi sowings are in progress.

THE reports of the general health for the week ending October 15 record: Fever prevalent throughout Sind and in Guzerat. Malarious fever in Tanna, and twenty deaths from cholera in Ahmednagar. Fever in Kattywar and Baroda. In Bengal fever still prevalent in 24-Pergunnahs, Maldah, Hooghly, Bankoora, Bhagalpur, Sarun, and Shahabad. North West Provinces and Oudh, fever prevalent. Punjab: Autumn fever very general; mortality great in Jullundur. Central Provinces: Cholera decreasing, but fever generally prevalent. Burma: In Arakan public health normal, fever prevalent; nine cases of cholera in Rangoon, twelve in Prome, but the disease was decreasing. In Tenasserim health good. Central India: Fever has been unusually prevalent and severe, and much still prevailed. Rajputana: Fever universally prevalent.

THE feeling in India, as expressed by the Bombay Gazette, is that there is no course left open for Lord Lytton but to declare war, and that there must be no hesitation in giving full effect to the policy of bringing Afghanistan under English control. The struggle between England and Russia for the supremacy of Asia has begun.

The Times' telegram confirms the opinion universally expressed by the Indian Press that no hope is entertained of submission on the part of the Ameer. No trustworthy news has come from Cabul, but on our side it is believed that an early attack on Ali Musjid is intended, for which the necessary military and commissariat preparations for an immediate advance are almost completed at Peshawur under the superintendence of General Sir Samuel Browne. The Viceroy, accompanied by Sir Neville Chamberlain, the Foreign Secretary, and Colonels Colley and Baker, is expected to arrive at Lahore from Simla to-morrow. The most recent military news telegraphed yesterday is as follows:—

"The field force now constitutes a command distinct from that of the district. Four brigades are in course of rapid formation. The first will muster at Hurri Singhke Burj, recently abandoned for sanitary reasons; the second and third are being formed at Peshawur and Jamrud, and the fourth will assemble at Nowshera. The four brigades will together number about 7,200 fighting men. The cavalry brigade will assemble at Thana, and will number about 1,000 men. General Sir Samuel Browne commands the Division, Colonel Williams the Royal Artillery, and Colonel Maunsell the Engineers. The first Infantry Brigade, commanded by Brigadier General Macpherson, V.C., C.B., consists of the 4th Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, the 4th Goorkhas, 20th Punjab Infantry, the 2nd Company of Sappers, and a mountain battery. The second Infantry Brigade under the command of Colonel Tytler, V.C., C.B., consists of the 1st Battalion 17th Foot, Guides Infantry, 1st Sikhs, the 3rd company of Sappers and Miners, and one battery of Royal Horse Artillery. The 3rd Infantry Brigade, commanded by Col. Appleyard, comprises the 81st and 14th Sikh and 27th Native Infantry. The 4th Brigade, under the command of Col. Bronze (?), consists of the 51st Light Infantry, the 6th Native Infantry, and the 45th Sikhs. The Cavalry Brigade, commanded by Col. C. Gough, V.C., comprises two troops of the 10th Hussars, the Guides Cavalry, the 11th Bengal Lancers, a battery of the Royal Horse, one of the Royal Artillery, and one of Royal Artillery with heavy guns. The Engineer force consists of three companies of Sappers, with engineer and ordnance field parks. A contingent of troops will shortly be formed from the Sikh feudatory States, consisting of 3,000 infantry, 1,000 cavalry, and thirteen guns. Of this number, Patiala supplies 800 infantry, 300 cavalry, and four Horse Artillery guns; Bhawalpur, 300 infantry and 100 cavalry; Jhind, 500 infantry and 200 cavalry, and three guns; Naba, 500 infantry, 200 cavalry, and three guns; Kapurthalla, 300 infantry, 100 cavalry, and a mule battery; Kotla, 200 infantry and 50 cavalry; Faridkot, 200 infantry and 50 cavalry; Nahun, 200 infantry. The whole Bhopal contingent has volunteered its services, and its offer has been accepted. The battalion will be armed with Sniders, and are under orders to join the division formed at Hassan Abdal. It is stated that the men were quite clamorous to be sent to the front, the Begum strongly encouraging this display of their loyalty. News from the Hassan Abdal field force reports that the condition of the troops is very healthy. This force is expected shortly to reinforce the Peshawur troops. General Maude commands the division. The 1st Infantry Brigade comprises the 5th Fusiliers, 6th Bengal Light Infantry, 45th Sikhs, and the 2nd Goorkhas. The 2nd Brigade consists of the 81st Foot, the Mairwarra Battalion and the 24th Native Infantry. The Cavalry Brigade comprises the 9th Lancers and the 10th Bengal Lancers. The Artillery Brigade is formed of two horse batteries and one field battery. From the Kuram force we hear that the whole of General Roberts's force is expected shortly to arrive at Thall. Maps have been liberally supplied to officers, and a useful guide-book containing full directions and information as to the Kuram Valley and the passes leading to Cabul has been circulated by the quartermaster-generals among the officers. Besides those generally known other routes are believed to exist by which infantry could successfully operate—one from Habib Kala to Jellalabad, by which the higher passes would be turned and an earlier junction effected with the Khyber Column, and two others, diverging from the neighbourhood of Ali-khel, which lead to Khushi and Ghuzni.

"The force already collected at Quetta, under General Biddulph, comprises six regiments of native infantry, one regiment of native cavalry, two mountain batteries, and two regiments of native cavalry at Mastang. News from Kandahar reports the prevalence of great sickness. Little or no resistance is anticipated there. The Bombay brigade comprises the 1st Sind Horse, the 1st Beloochees, the 19th Native Infantry, the 83rd Queen's; 10,000 camels have been ordered to be collected at Sukkur, and 20,000 camels are being collected at Karachi. The Madras force comprises the 67th Queen's, 14th Hussars, 1st Madras Cavalry, 30th and 36th Native Infantry."

A Bombay special correspondent states that this force will be ready to advance by the 20th. A telegram from Sukkur, dated 10th inst., says:—

"The Quetta column of troops is arriving daily. D Battery, 2nd Brigade, I Battery, 1st Brigade, Field Artillery, the Telegraph and Pontoon Companies, with the field ordnance and Engineer park, a wing of the 50th Foot, and the 15th Sikhs are passing through. A Battery, B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, G Battery, 4th Brigade, Field Artillery, the 5th and 6th Batteries of the 11th Brigade, Heavy Field Artillery, the siege train, 2nd Battalion of the 60th Rifles, and 1st Ghoorikas are expected. Generals Palliser and Lacy are here."

We take the following items of Calcutta news from the Times' telegram of yesterday:—

"The death by accident is reported of Ameer Khan, of Patna, the Wahabee convict. Business is still dull. There are 70,852 tons of shipping disengaged. The Four per Cent. Government Rupee-paper is quoted 94 4. The King of Burma has married, in accordance with the custom of the country, his own half-sister. The Seistan revolt has been suppressed."

THE true account of the recently reported raid from Quetta on a Beloochee village is as follows:—The political officer at Quetta received information that a considerable number of horses, with some horsemen of Cabul, had been collected in a village within the Beloochistan frontier, about seventeen miles from Quetta. As these horses could be used for a "chapao" or night surprise on the Quetta cantonment, it was considered advisable to reconnoitre the village. This was done by the political agent, joined by Colonel Browne and Mr. Bruce, and attended by a few Brahoe sirdars. The village was found to be full of horses, and there was a large number of men of soldierly appearance and unfriendly demeanour, one or two of whom insulted the Brahoe sirdars for bringing Feringhees there. It was consequently determined to make a night movement on the village, and that night it was surrounded by troops from Quetta. The village surrendered on the terms of giving up the men who had insulted the sirdars, and, as the people said they were peaceful horsedealers, they were told that there could be no harm in assisting them to take their horses down the Bolan Pass towards their market, Hindustan. Two headmen came into Quetta as hostages for good behaviour. It will be seen that this was not a raid, as has been stated in certain quarters, but simply a precautionary measure taken by the commandant of a frontier garrison.

THE Government have sanctioned a free passage by rail to Bombay, and home by troopship, to the families of officers whose regiments and batteries were under orders for England, but who have been detained in India on service.

ACCORDING to a Kohat correspondent the Ameer is believed to have 72 battalions of infantry, each 700 strong; 25 regiments of cavalry, each 500 strong; and 200 guns, including a battery of Armstrongs. It is also reported that the Russians have presented him with two mountain batteries, and that a number of Russian engineers and artillerymen are on the road to Cabul.

RELATIVE to the recent heavy floods in the valley of the Indus, the director of State railways, Western system, has, in a letter to the Government of India, shown that the damages done are not so severe as at first believed. Although tested by an afflux in some instances of as much as three feet, no bridge nor culvert was carried away, while the damages to banks were limited to a length of about fifty miles east of Sukkur. Several station buildings, now under water, will have to be rebuilt; and the engineers have been advised to confine themselves to measures for protecting the banks as they stand, and preventing the widening of breaches by rivetting the sides of the latter with sand-bags.

INTELLIGENCE has been received of the death of Feroze Shab, son of the ex-King of Delhi, at Mecca, on Dec. 17, 1877. In 1858 and the beginning of 1857 he took an active part against the British, first in the North-west Provinces and afterwards in Central India. He was known to have come in collision with Sir R. Napier and to have been defeated by General Whitelock. In 1860 he was heard of in Kandahar on his way to Persia. In 1861 he was in Bokhara, and at the end of 1862 turned up at Teheran, where he remained some time. In 1863 inquiry was made from Persia whether the British Government would give any reward for his apprehension. He was next heard of in Herat, and in 1868 he was in Swat, and after-and he was subsequently reported to have been seen at Samarkhand. In 1872 he went to Constantinople and Egypt, where he called himself Sultan Ibrahim. From that time he resided at Mecca, being known as Haji Feroze bin Sultan Mirza Bakht. He died in a state of penury, being almost entirely dependent on an allowance made him by the High Sheriff of Mecca. The only relation left by him at Mecca is a wife.

GRAVE dissatisfaction is said to have been created among military men in Western India by the disregard of the claims of Bombay officers to staff appointments with the expeditionary forces. The Bombay Gazette illustrates the treatment of the Bombay Army by the following instance:—Two batteries of artillery have been ordered up from Sind to the frontier. This is a lieutenant colonel's command, and the adjutant general of artillery at Puna telegraphed to Simla to know if a lieutenant colonel and staff officer might be detailed from Bombay, as the two batteries in question belonged to this Presidency. The answer returned was—"No; a lieutenant colonel and staff officer will be nominated from here (Simla)."

A REUTER'S telegram of the 15th inst. states that the Times of India has published a despatch from its correspondent at Kohat stating that stringent orders have been sent from Simla to the commandant of the column to supervise all telegrams intended for the press, which will now be submitted to the inspection of the general in command after crossing the frontier. It is believed that correspondence will also be placed under control. Civilians acting as special correspondents, who may be guilty of indiscretion in reporting military matters, will be sent to the rear, and military men offending in a similar manner will be made an example of.

THE following general rules have been laid down for guidance in carrying out in India the examination of captains for promotion to the rank of major:—1. Captains must have served five years in that rank before being examined, except in special cases, when they expect early promotion. 2. They must have passed the examination in the field and produce the certificate—viz., of their having passed a practical examination in the field in the command of a regiment of cavalry, a battery of artillery, or battalion of infantry, as the case may be, before being further examined in the subjects laid down in the Horse Guards General Order, No. 66, of 1875. These rules supersede all previous ones made applicable to captains of all arms of the British service in India.

THE inquiry into the allegations made by Mr. Wyer respecting the recent administration of famine matters in Budaon was ordered by the North West Government on its own motion. No suggestion on the subject emanated from the Government of India or the Famine Commission.

THE results of Mr. Brough Smyth's prospectings and workings in South East Wynaad, which have been for some time anxiously looked for, have been announced in a telegram from Bombay as a discovery, in an area of 25 miles by 13, of ninety outcrops of ore reef, with a thickness of two to four feet, yielding from a few pennyweights to 200 ounces per ton. The richer stone shows, when broken, a fine and coarse gold, with jagged pieces as large as peas. In some reefs there is much stone practically unproductive, but they have yielded variously 8, 10, 14 pennyweights, 2 and 4 ounces per ton. It is somewhat illustrative of the irony of fate that this verification of the anticipations of the shareholders in the gold mining company should have followed so soon on the collapse of Messrs. Nichol and Co., who were the financiers of the undertaking. It is certain that the Neilgherry planters, who, in the last report of their association, expressed great anxiety as to the labour supply on their estates, will, to their cost, experience the fulfilment of the prophecy made last month by the Madras Times: "The spread of the gold mania is likely to interfere seriously with coffee planting on the Neilgherries. There will be a great rush for land should gold be discovered in any large quantity, and the estates will be drained of coolies for the gold-fields." It may well be doubted whether the discovery of gold will be more profitable than the development of the coffee plantations of the Wynaad.

OFFICERS of the superior revenue establishment of State Railways are to be included in the schedule of officers eligible for admission to the benefits of the more favourable leave rules.

THE following rules have been approved by the Government of India and issued to regulate the outfit allowances to non-commissioned officers who may be awarded commissions while serving in India. A non-commissioned officer granted a commission in India shall have the option of receiving £100 in England, or Rs. 1,000 in India, in aid of his outfit. A non-commissioned officer granted a commission in India on appointment to a Horse Brigade of the Royal Artillery, or to a regiment of cavalry, shall be allowed the option of receiving £150 in England or Rs. 1,500 in India in aid of his outfit. Riding-masters of Royal Artillery shall have the option of receiving £100 in England or Rs. 1,000 in India. A schoolmaster, promoted in India to be sub-inspector of Army Schools, shall be allowed the option of receiving £100 in England or Rs. 1,000 in India in aid of his outfit. A non-commissioned officer granted a commission in India as sub-lieutenant in a regiment of cavalry prior to December 1, 1876, or as second lieutenant on or after that date, shall be allowed the difference between the sum of £100 or Rs. 1,000, already paid to him, and the sum of £150, or Rs. 1,500, with the option of receiving that difference in England, £50, or in India Rs. 500. This order applies to all three Presidencies.

THE Englishman, commenting on the recent resolution of the Government of India regarding the "value payable" parcel postage system, says:—"It is noteworthy that the peculiar position of the Anglo-Indian tradesman is completely ignored in the resolution. And it is this peculiar position on which the strongest arguments against the extension depend. Tradesmen in the Continental countries, whose example is appealed to, are not generally exiles from their native land, conducting their business under exceptional conditions as regards expense, risk, and personal convenience, for the behoof of a limited number of their fellow-countrymen, and consequently compelled to charge proportionately higher prices for their goods."

THE Government of Bombay have issued a resolution commenting on the annual report of the administration of the jails in the Presidency for the year 1877. In that year, during which the principal pressure of the famine was experienced, the total number of prisoners confined in the criminal jails throughout the Presidency was increased by 73 per cent., the figures being 50,154, as compared to 29,059 in 1876, which again was an increase of 3 per cent. over the number incarcerated in 1875. The lion's share of the increase fell to the Deccan (including Belgaum, Kaladgi, and Dharwar), where there were 138 per cent. more criminals than in 1876, and 265 per cent. more than the average number of the three previous years. In the Konkan there was an increase of 42 per cent. over the average, in Guzerat 28 per cent., in the town and island of Bombay 29 per cent. Sind was the only district in which a decrease is shown, and in that province there were 7 per cent. less prisoners than the average of the previous three years. It was a natural consequence, as the Government declare, of the general failure of crops in the Deccan, and of abnormally high prices everywhere throughout the Presidency except Sind, combined with a strict administration of justice, that the number of persons sent to prison should be exceedingly high.

THE administrative report of the Central Provinces for the last year shows that within the last decade the net receipts of revenue have increased from Rs. 7,253,688, in 1867-8, to Rs. 1,09,07,071. In one year the increase has been Rs. 2,86,760. The net receipts in 1877-78, omitting merely both entries, Rs. 1,09,07,071, against Rs. 1,06,20,311 for the previous year. Applying the comparison of the previous ten years the land revenue shows an increase of 14 per cent, while the excise receipts have been raised 53 per cent. This latter increase is not a result of wide-spread excess, but of better administration, especially as respects opium. The consumers of opium and ganja will soon be brought more under control, as the Government system of supply will be extended to seven districts in which alone it has not yet been introduced, and there will be fewer facilities for smuggling. The net stamp revenue has also increased, in ten years, from Rs. 7,42,138 to Rs. 10,04,540; and in the Forest Department the surplus of the past year, viz., Rs. 372,132, was greater than the whole income ten years ago. There are now in the Central Provinces 2,548 square miles of reserved, and 16,952 square miles of unreserved forests, all wholly or partly managed by the department. The coal deposits of Chanda are yielding most valuable supplies. Last year the Warrora colliery raised 40,786 tons, at a profit of Rs. 64,064, or 9 per cent. on the capital outlay of Rs. 695,069. The coal is equal to the best Bengal coal, and 133lb. of it are as good for steam purposes as 100lb. of English coal. The Empress Cotton Mills, at Nagpur, the success of which will probably lead to the starting of others, is due to this supply of coal. The Medical Department possesses two hospitals, one at Jubbulpur and another at Nagpur, with seventy-six dispensaries, in which 461,309 patients were treated; while the number of vaccinations amounted last year to 304,188 in a population of about nine millions. The successful working of the Educational Department has resulted in the fact that the Government offices are now well supplied with natives of the Central Provinces. When the provinces were first formed not only were all the officials class foreigners, but the language of the courts was Urdu. In the Mahratti districts Mahratti is now the language of the courts; in the Northern districts Hindi is the official language, and in Sumbulpore Uryah is used. Thus the people, if they like, may at least learn how justice is administered. Schools have been established especially to instruct the children of Eurasians and Europeans who are unable to send their sons and daughters to England or to a hill station. There are now seven excellent schools open for this class.

ON the recommendation of the Government of India the Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of an additional commissioner in the Central Provinces on the pay of a first grade deputy commissioner. No additional expenditure will be incurred, as a saving equal to the amount of the salary attached to the new appointment will be effected by the reduction of the upper Godaver district to the rank of a sub-division.

THE revenue of the Indian Post-office was increased by something over six lakhs of rupees during the last financial year, the result of an outlay in increased expenditure of about three lakhs; whilst at the same time many substantial concessions were made to the public. It would be difficult to find a department of the public service in any country in which the wisdom of liberal and enterprising administration is more distinctly evidenced than in the Indian Post-office of to-day.

A BOMBAY contemporary says a question of considerable interest to shipowners and the mercantile marine generally, where the master and owners of a steamer disclaimed any liability for running down and sinking a native craft with all her cargo, because the former was at the time in charge of a "duly recognised pilot as appointed by law," has just been decided in the High Court of Bombay. The question arose out of the collision between the s.s. Zante and the buggalow Ladh in Karachi harbour in April last year. At the marine court of inquiry the pilot (Ward) was held to blame, and the owners of the cargo shipped from Bombay brought actions in the High Court at Bombay against the steamer for the value of their respective consignments. On the arrival of the Zante at Bombay a warrant of arrest was issued, but, to prevent her detention, a sum of Rs. 15,000 was deposited in court as security. The question appeared to be a simple one enough, and turned upon the construction of particular sections of the Indian Ports Act, which, however, left room for much argument. The steamer was plainly the cause of the collision, but it was contended that, it being compulsory to take a pilot, and the steamer being in his charge when going out of the Karachi harbour, the liability was shifted from the owner. Sir Charles Sargent held that contention good, and dismissed the suit, each party paying their own costs of the "test case" that was tried. As, however, that ruling might be reversed on appeal, the learned judge did not think it advisable to order the return of the deposit until the appeal was decided.

A NEW chapter is to be added to the Indian Civil Code, which will state in a concise, accurate, and accessible form the law relating to the ownership of alluvial lands, islands, and abandoned river beds. Madras, Bombay, and Burma have hitherto had no statutory law on this subject. Elsewhere in British India certain defective regulations, acts, and complicated decisions have produced a constant crop of litigation. The terms island, owner, and thread of the stream are carefully defined, and a channel is to be considered fordable when its maximum depth throughout twenty-four hours in the dry season is five feet. The care with which the Alluvion Bill is drawn, so as to provide in all parts of India against the vagaries of the Indian rivers and the litigious habits of the riparian owners, is evidenced by the three definitions of the term "thread of the stream." The first, suitable to the Punjab and the Bombay rivers, the large rivers of the North West Provinces, and the perennial streams of the Berars, is "the middle line of the main stream during the dry season." The second, "the line between the shores on each side when the water is at its ordinary height," interests the Madras rivers; and the third, "the line of the particular channel where the alluvial island has arisen," was suggested by the Lieut. Governor of Bengal. That the explanations and definitions are almost too precise was admitted by Mr. Stokes in a caustic apology for adding an explanation of the word "opposite." He confessed he had thought that "opposite" was as clear and simple a word as existed in the English language. But it seemed he was wrong. The Madras Board of Revenue observed that the word in question "is not defined," and asserted that "it would be impossible to settle conflicting claims without a more precise expression of the intention." One of our ablest English judges (Lord Justice Brett) had recently declared that it was not right for judges to profess not to know phrases in the English language which were well known in English society. But this doctrine was constantly disregarded in India. In the very last number of the Indian Law Reports he found the learned Chief Justice, who presided with such dignity over the High Court at Allahabad, asking the meaning of the expression "where a decree is appealed against," and calling it not only "obscure and doubtful," but "rather unfortunate and ambiguous." The sad necessity of precluding, if possible, such criticism would account for much in our Indian laws which would otherwise be rightly regarded as superfluous and childish.

THE exceeding credulity of the Punjab readers of the vernacular papers was amusingly illustrated by Mr. Thornton during the debate in the Viceregal Council. So far back as 1861 a vernacular journal announced that a proclamation was about to be issued enforcing upon all male inhabitants of India the wearing of "a chimney-pot hat." Two or three years ago the general commanding at Lahore proposed to test the efficiency of his transport arrangements by moving a battery to Amritsur. The Lahore paper stated jocosely that the general intended to "take the city of Amritsur by storm." This being literally translated in the vernacular press was accepted as serious truth, and a general closing of shops and popular panic ensued. But the best example of the curious mental condition of both the writers and the readers of the native journals is afforded by the city of Delhi, which we quote verbatim, as it seems to have much amused the Council:—

"In that city is published a vernacular newspaper which goes by the name of the Nihir-i-Darakshan, or 'Bright Sun.' In the pages of this brilliant periodical there appeared, in the month of July last, an article the object of which was to prove the race-identity between the Hindu and the Englishman. This proposition, my lord, is supported, is seriously supported, by the following arguments:—Argument the first: 'There is a tribe of people in Europe called the Dutch. Daksha is the name of one of the sons of Brahma.' Argument the second: 'In the Urdu language khatrin means a woman of the khatri caste. One of the wives of King Henry the Eighth of England was called Katharine.' Argument the third: 'Both Englishmen and Hindus bathe daily.' Argument the fourth: 'Both Englishmen and Hindus eat pork. Barah, or the hog, is the name of an incarnation of Vishnu, and bacon is a common name in England.' Argument the fifth: 'English women and Hindu women wear petticoats.' And now comes an argument which our author evidently considers (to use a familiar phrase) the clincher. It is as follows:—'Some Hindus wear the Brahminical thread. Englishmen wear braces.'

THE results of the subjection of Lower Burma to British rule, as set forth in the report on the trade and navigation of British Burma in the past year, show a large advance in commercial prosperity. The total trade of the province amounted to nearly 16 crores, showing an increase of 21.7 per cent. on the preceding year. This is mainly due to the advanced prices obtained for rice and food products generally. The exports amounted, in kind, to seven crores, and the imports to five, the difference being made up by importation of specie. One item which is hardly a subject of congratulation is in the import of opium, which increased from Rs. 3,48,384 to Rs. 6,68,688. It would appear that a considerable amount of the money which flowed into the country was expended on this as well as other luxuries; but a large amount was also spent in augmented comfort and increasing the fixed capital. Tea, cigars, apparel, machinery, books, oils, provisions, paper, tobacco, salt, cotton twist, &c., were all imported in greater quantities. The Burmese cultivator is described as being ready to lay out his profits well in land and stock, and also in works of public utility. There is another point of view from which the condition, or rather character, of the people does not appear to us great advantage. If the population are prosperous, they have a bad pre-eminence in the tables of comparative crime of British India according to the police report for this year. The Chief Commissioner appends figures which show that in Burma crime of all kinds is much more prevalent than in any other part of India. For example, the proportion of crimes to population is three and a-half times what it is in Bengal, and double what it is in the North Western Provinces; while the proportion of convicts in jail to population is nine times what it is in Bengal, and two and a-half times what it is in the North Western Provinces. On the other hand, Burma is at the head of the list in the matter of detection, the percentage of convictions being half as much again as in Bengal, and double what it is in the North Western Provinces. The disorders in neighbouring States have doubtless much to do with the state of things disclosed by these figures, while perhaps the large number of visitors from Upper Burma and other parts—including bad characters, who live just across our frontier, and traders and coolies who come down for the season—has probably more. To this may be added that convicted felons are not looked upon with any ill feeling, provided they do not injure their neighbours. They may be perhaps feared, but the Burman will not trouble himself in the public interest to help the administration of justice. Thus they give no aid to the police, who are not so experienced in the art of prevention or detection as the Dacoits are in that of committing crime, and, moreover, only show one policeman to thirteen square miles of difficult country.

DEPARTURE OF SIR THOMAS WADE.—Sir Thomas Wade, K.C.B., her Majesty's Minister to China, left Charing-cross station by South Eastern Company's tidal train at 10.45 on Friday morning for Paris, en route to China via Marseilles, per steamer Irrawaddy. Some of the members of the Chinese Embassy were at the station to bid his Excellency farewell.

DIVORCE CASE.—On Wednesday, in the Court of Session, Edinburgh, evidence was heard before Lord Young in an action by Captain Patrick Murray, of the 109th Regiment of Bombay Infantry, and at present residing at Merchiston, Edinburgh, against Crawford Robina Gordon Murray, his wife, for divorce, on the ground of infidelity. It was proved that Mrs. Murray had been living in various lodging-houses in Brighton in company with Lieutenant Hutton, of the pursuer's regiment, and the Lord Ordinary gave a decree of divorce as asked.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE LIFE OF YAKOOB BEG.*

THIS would have been a good book at any time, and, perhaps, would have been more valuable if it had been published earlier. This is because it is a work that derives no small part of its value from its application to the present state of our Eastern policy, for the due understanding of which the importance of Kashgar, or Chinese Turkestan, is second only to that of Afghanistan. Even in respect to this last there is much that has yet to be learned. Of Kashgar we knew, until the publication of the works of Shaw and Hayward, little more than the name. "Chinese Turkestan," as a province with an indefinite boundary, and the three towns of Kashgar, Khoten, and Yarkend, each on its own proper branch of a river which ran eastward, with the "Desert of Kobi" in one direction, and mountains on the north, south, and west, was all that presented itself on the ordinary maps. The official report of Sir Douglas Forsyth added largely to these outlines, and the latest Russian authorities more. Mr. Boulger's work gives us all this and much beyond it, and that in a systematic and comprehensive form. It probably tells us as much as (out of Russia) is known about a very important and mysterious country; and in Eastern history and Eastern geography England's backwardness is Russia's opportunity.

As a biography the subject is the eventful life of Yakoob Beg, or the Athalik Ghazi; but the proper introduction to this is the earlier history of Kashgar. This Mr. Boulger gives us in a full and regular form; and the three chapters, the geography, the ethnology, and the history of that country, are by no means the least valuable part of his work. The second of these subjects is illustrated by a clear and careful map, not only of Kashgar as a whole, but of an adequate portion of the regions by which it is bounded—viz., the Chinese Empire, the British (Cashmere), the Russian, Afghanistan, Bokhara, and the independent, or half-independent, districts of the Tunganis on the north-east, and the Tadjiks on the south-west, every one of which, either politically or geographically, is an element in the heterogeneous mass of details which complicate the present relations between India and Afghanistan, or (changing the names) between England and Russia.

Mr. Boulger has the rare merit of taking an unexaggerated view of his hero, and he does not, because he thinks him worthy of a biography, think it also necessary to add a single inch to his natural dimensions. When an author writes as follows, we may be pretty sure that we shall find in his pages much common sense and very little hero-worship:—

"Yakoob Beg was a very able and courageous man, and the task he did accomplish in Kashgaria was in the highest degree creditable; but he was no Timour or Babur. His internal policy was marred by his severity; and the system of terrorism that he principally adopted, and his external policy, bold and audacious as it often was, was enfeebled by periods of vacillation and doubt. Yet his career was truly remarkable. He was not the arbiter of the destinies of Central Asia, nor was he even the consistent opponent of Russian claims to supremacy therein. He was essentially of the common mould of human nature, sharing the weaknesses and fears of ordinary men. The Badaulet or, 'the fortunate one,' as he was called, was essentially indebted to good fortune in many crises of his career. He cannot, in any sense, be compared to the giants produced by Central Asia in days of old; and, among moderns, Dost Mahomed of Afghanistan probably should rank as high as he does."

When authors write in this way of their heroes we may be sure that we are in safe hands. And this leads us to another question, the extent to which the writer is a politician; and it so, of what cast and character. He thinks highly of his hero as an individual; and, as a element or power, in Eastern politics he thinks even more so of China. This he tells us in his preface; and he adds, with great truth, that her importance is too much overlooked or neglected. After his valuation of the character of Yakoob, he continues:—
"The following pages strive to bring before the English reader the great merits of China as a governing body, and this object is really the more important of the two. It is absolutely necessary for this country to remember that there are only three great Powers in Asia, and of these China is in many respects the foremost."

This is in his preface. In the body of the book he develops his views in some detail. It is probable that to some of them some of us may take exception; but, upon the whole, the principle is an important one. No one, perhaps, believes at the present time that Russia is either ready or willing to fight. Nor is she so well prepared as England to ensure peace by showing herself prepared for war. She is rather playing a game of brag, with the hope of a diplomatic victory in Europe; and her way of doing this is to create a diversion of our power into another channel. We cannot say that there are no complications in our coming to an understanding with China, but it is better that there should be one between China and England than one between China and Russia. We cannot go so far as to guarantee Kuldja to China; but we can do much towards preventing the Turks of Kashgar from throwing themselves into the arms of Russia. This we shall, perhaps, have to in any case, and it is easier done with a good understanding on the part of China than a bad one. In any kind of an alliance between the three great Powers of Asia the position of the odd one is one to be avoided.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your leading article last week upon Russia and China a charge is made against the late Yakoob Beg of having achieved the conquest of Kashgar in a harsh and bloodthirsty manner. Permit me to point out that this charge is unfounded. Yakoob Beg always strove to mitigate the horrors of war as much as possible, and on the only two occasions when he was brought into contact with the Chinese he endeavoured to restrain the evil passions of the Tunganis and Kashgari under him. At the capture of the citadel of Yangy Hissar it is true that 2,000 Khitay were massacred, but this was despite Yakoob Beg's protest. At the surrender of the Zaogy Shahr of Kashgar several Khitay were murdered in the confusion that was caused by the blowing up of the Chinese commandant's palace, but Yakoob Beg himself checked this breach of the terms of capitulation as soon as he could. And lastly, after his great victory over the Tunganis of Aksu and Kucha, he exercised great moderation towards the vanquished. In short, whatever opinion we may form as to Yakoob Beg's other qualities, we must all acknowledge that he himself was moderate in his treatment of the vanquished Chinese and Tunganis. He was certainly free from the stain that must attach to the whole Tungan population, and to the townspeople of Yarkand, Kashgar, and Aksu, for their almost unparalleled barbarity in the years 1862-65.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Nov. 14.

FROM GHUZNEE TO CABUL.

CONTRIBUTED BY LIEUT.-GENERAL KAYE.

SHUSH GAO, 13½ miles, elevation 8,500.—A good firm road the whole way, leading for the first six miles about N.E. Immediately on leaving the last ground the road for about a mile skirted the base of the ridge on the left, and then for about the same distance led through narrow lanes between orchards attached to Mahmood's tomb. On emerging from the lanes we passed over undulating ground with rather sharp dips for some four miles. The ridge on the right here approaches the road closely, so that our path lay through a species of gorge. After traversing this swelling ground the hills opened out and formed a circle or amphitheatre, while our road, turning N.N.E., passed over tolerably level ground, and formed as it were the diameter of the circle. The interior space of this mountain hollow was not completely flat, as at first the road descended considerably, and again rose until we reached the commencement of the Sher Duna Pass, the road through and over which is good; ascent easy. At the summit (elevation 9,000) is a small ruined fort, thence a gentle descent and a firm road for some three miles along a valley, brought us into camp, N.N.E. of the ghaut. A considerable tract of cultivation on the left with some forts and villages. The valley extends to the rear in direction W.S.W. The hills which bound it on the left are very similar to those near Nanee, and are probably a continuation of them.

Huft Asiya, 9 miles.—The road (which was good, but occasionally stony) led N.N.E. and sometimes north, skirting the base of the eastern hills, often sweeping over the shoots, and sometimes running along the slope. The valley on the left highly cultivated, numerous villages scattered along the bottom and in recesses among the western hills. Small reservoirs of water are formed near the foot of the hill, supplied by springs issuing from the rock; hence small water channels are cut into the fields. Lucerne plentiful, but grass scarce. The hills have closed in considerably in to-day's march, and their slopes seem to meet in the centre of the valley. Camp formed on slope of eastern range.

Hyder Khail, 10 miles.—A rough stony road led as before along the lower slope of the eastern range, sometimes passing over spurs higher and steeper than those in yesterday's march. At about six miles the road crossed a broad dry torrent bed, and descended into the valley, which here widened, the hills on the right receding and forming a basin. After rather more than a mile the road again skirted the hills, and continued to pass over undulations until we reached camp, which was formed in the lower slope of the hill; the valley highly cultivated. Forts, villages, and trees (poplars, willows, and fruit trees) thickly border the banks of a small river, which runs along the bottom. Many springs gush out from the rocks on the right and flow into the river. Some forts among the western range, and a few situated on hills to the right. The road wound considerably, but led generally N.N.E. The valley rather less than a mile in breadth. Grass good and plentiful; lucerne procurable.

Shekabad, 10 miles.—A bad road, rough, stony, and occasionally muddy. For the first mile or so road skirted base of hills, and then descended into the valley and led across the river by an easy ford. The road then followed the left bank, passing over the cultivated lands for about three and a-half or four miles, when we reached a branch of the western hills, over which the road passed. At this point the valley of Huft Asiya became very confined and receded to the right; the space between the two ranges being scarcely wider than the bed of the stream; the hills on either side rising abruptly like walls and forming a glen. The scenery picturesque and better wooded than in general. The road continued its course across a gentle undulating hill for some distance, and then descended into the valley of the Loghur, a rapid river with about two and a half feet of water. The ford was about three hundred yards lower down the stream than the bridge (impassable for wheeled carriages) over which the road led. The river flows from left to right, as was the case also with the first river we crossed in this march, and which probably falls into the Loghur at no great distance from this camp, formed on the slope of the eastern range. The road wound considerably, about N. by E. generally; grass said to be plentiful.

Cabul river, near Maidan, 17 miles.—A good road, which gradually ascended for the first eight miles, lying between two ranges of hills, the space between them at first rather confined, but it gradually opened out until at the summit of the rise there extended to the left a somewhat extensive plain, bounded by a distant and rocky range. Thence we descended gradually to the valley, and the road approached the western range until at the sixteenth mile it led over a spur by an easy ghaut and entered the valley of Maidan. Encamped on the right bank of the Cabul river, the ghaut by which we came about a mile to our rear. Our course to-day about N. by W. The valley extends for some distance to the N.W., bounded by a rocky range; it is highly cultivated and tolerably wooded, and sprinkled with forts and villages. The country through which the road led on this march was but little cultivated until we neared the valley; grass good.

Maidan Valley, N.E. extremity, 4 miles.—After crossing the Cabul river, here a shallow stream, the road skirted the base of a hill on our right, the Valley of Maidan on our left; ascended over a low spur and again descended to the valley. A rough stony road then led over a rocky ridge, and a short distance from the base of it our camp was formed, about north of old ground; no grass near the encampment.

Urgundee Valley, near Kila Kazee, 13 miles.—A rough stony road. For the first three miles we ascended gradually towards N.E. by N., the road winding among low hillocks and occasionally crossing undulations, ranges of hills to the right and left running nearly parallel to our road. From the summit of the ascent we obtained an extensive view, the Valley of Urgundee lying in front, and beyond it three ranges of hills. The road then descended gradually into the valley, which is intersected by some deep ravines. Our course continued much in the same direction, until after we had passed the village of Urgundee, situated at the foot of the hills on the left, when we rounded the ranges on the right at about the eleventh mile and turned towards the last, gradually descending into camp, Kila Kazee, about two miles to the east on the Cabul road. The country through which our road led not very highly cultivated, but there are many villages at the bases of the hills and under a sharp and lofty range to the N.W. are several forts and orchards, the country in that direction, near Pughman, being apparently well wooded. As we rounded the hill we obtained a glimpse of the Cabul valley, from which we are at present separated by some low hills.

Cabul Valley, 6 miles.—E.N.E.—Passed Kila Kazee on our right at about two and a-half miles. Road then led through a highly cultivated valley; camp four miles west of Cabul.

Camp, two and a-half miles east of Cabul.—Road led through the valley amid orchards, gardens, and meadows; most luxuriant cultivation and beautiful landscape. Entered the city of Cabul, crossing the river of that name by a stone bridge, traversed several streets and covered bazaars and emerged from the city near the Bala Hissar, or citadel, a short distance to our right. The city is situated in the gorge between two rocky hills, sloping down close to the houses. The walls of the town are continued up the sides of the hills and are connected by a cross wall on summit.

RUSSIAN POLICY.

In reviewing the Russian policy of the last fifteen years we cannot but be struck with its unity, consistency, and success. A short time after the Polish difficulty, during which the dread of our interference was felt, the leading spirits of St. Petersburg seem to have adopted a very decided view as to the best means of dealing with England. It was freely expressed in the Press; it met with no opposition, and, as far as we can judge, it was approved by all who possessed influence. England, it was said, derived her power from the fact that she was unassailable. In case of war, she could inflict considerable damage on an adversary, by striking at his weak point, while she was not herself exposed to any return blow. A struggle with her was a duel with a man in armour, whose thrusts might be parried, but who could not himself be hit. This, it was held, gave her, with regard to Russia, an influence altogether disproportionate to the size of her army, and enabled her to assume the haughty tone of a nation which does not fear war. On the other hand, it was remarked that, in dealing with the United States, she had to endure a great deal, because from that direction she was open to attack. Of all civilised nations America alone has direct land communication with any part of our dominions, and to her claims we have always been attentive. The Russians knew well that, under similar circumstances, we should have treated any demand of theirs for compensation with contempt, though we submitted readily to the Alabama claims. The inference was drawn that Russia should push on her conquests in Central Asia until her territory was continuous with our own. They did not, it was said, wish to conquer India. It ready for such extension of Empire, China, as was pertinently remarked, offered a richer, a more useful, and, above all, an easier prize. What was sought was a vicinity which would give Russia a hold over us, and enable her to prevent us from interfering in her design on Turkey, the real object of her ambition. Such was the policy sketched out authoritatively fifteen years ago, and our readers can judge whether it has been executed. This idea of using a military position to be acquired in the East, in order to influence European diplomacy, boded no good for the occupants of the territory between the Russian frontier and our own. There were four independent Khanates in the way—Khokand, Samarcand, Bokhara, and Khiva. In 1864 the first of these was struck down by General Tcherniaief. Next Samarcand was captured, and Bokhara reduced to vassalage. In 1873 Khiva was struck down, and in 1874, after a general rebellion, the whole of Turkestan was consolidated and settled. The last step was designed to alienate Afghanistan from our alliance. It is to be remembered that, in the last generation, we contended with Russia for ascendancy of the diplomatic kind in Persia, as we are now doing in Cabul. We used the persuasive methods of subsidies and flatteries; she resorted to the coercion of invasion and threats. She was victorious, and has now an unquestioned ascendancy at Teheran. In the same way she has got the better of us in the rivalry for the goodwill of Ameer Ali. He has accepted our treasure, our gifts of arms, and our smooth words, but at the critical moment he has joined the other side. And now Russia has done exactly what in 1863 she declared she would do. She has been able to create a diversion on our Indian frontier and to call off our attention from a Turkish aggression. The two items of news, that an Afghan war was inevitable, and that Russia had declined to fulfil the Berlin Treaty by evacuating the south of Turkey, arrived simultaneously, and are no doubt connected. The rumour as to the purchase of large quantities of grain by the Russians, and their offer of money for a footing in Herat, have every appearance of truth. As we enter Afghanistan at one end they will probably be prepared to make some movement at another. The fear that if we put off the work of storming the passes they may be fortified by Russian engineers is most reasonable. Englishmen lately in the army or navy, and who have high hopes in those professions, fought under the Turks. Russians commanded the Servians before their country entered on the struggle. The policy may be right or wrong; it is always followed, and the injured nation protests in vain. The Russians will now take up a bolder position with regard to Turkey, and they will make preparations to join in the Afghan war in case we resent their new attitude. If we allow their occupation of provinces south of the Balkan, they will probably content themselves with giving an indirect support to our enemies on the frontier. And should we declare war we shall have to fight in two places—to defend as well as to attack. The programme of 1863 has been carried out, Afghanistan is now our Indian Canada, and we have to think of defending it whenever we quarrel with the Czar.—Indian Daily News.

DEATH OF MR. ROUSSAC.—The casualties from death have been unusually heavy amongst the old residents of Calcutta during the past year. Another name has been added to the list. Mr. A. G. Roussac, the broker, died suddenly from heart disease. The late Mr. Roussac's was a long and varied business experience in Calcutta, extending over a period of more than forty years.—Indian Daily News.

DIVORCE CASE.—The divorce case of Finden v. Finden and Villiers has been heard in the chief court at Lahore. There was no defence, and a decree nisi was granted with Rs. 20,000 damages and costs against the co-respondent.—Indian Daily News.

The following addition has been made to the Civil Pension and Leave Codes:—Service as private secretary to the Governor General or a Governor qualifies, provided that the officer belongs to the Covenanted Civil Service or to the Staff Corps, or belonged (previously to his appointment as private secretary) to the Uncovenanted Service.—Bombay Times.

THE LATE MR. BATCHELLOR.—A Calcutta paper states that the friends of the late Mr. Batchellor in the East Indian Railway propose, as a means of perpetuating that gentleman's memory, to collect a fund to be devoted to some purpose in connection with the welfare of the employes of the railway and their children, such as would have been his own especial wish.

THE STORM WAVE OF 1876.—Official reports issued from the Registration Department of Bengal state that the effects of the storm wave and cyclone of 1876 are still shown in the returns of Noakhilly and Chittagong, in which neither the registrations nor the receipts of the past year amounted to those of 1875-76. The district of Boileaugunge is, however, reported to have almost recovered its former prosperity, the registrations being nearly as numerous, and the receipts greater than before the cyclone. With the two exceptions mentioned, the rest of the district is stated to be more prosperous now than at any former period, and the financial position of the Registration Department is pronounced to be excellent.—Civil and Military Gazette.

NAGPORE FARM.—The experimental farm at Nagpore opened by Government five years ago with a view to showing the ryots what new crops can be introduced, and how established crops can be better grown, is to be retained as a permanent institution.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PRIZES FOR MILITARY DRAWING.—The United Service Institution of India advertised last July an exhibition of military drawings to be held at Simla open to all non-commissioned officers and men of artillery, cavalry, and infantry. The first prize was Rs. 70, second prize Rs. 30. For this there were, we learn, twenty-three competitors—nine Europeans and fourteen natives. On the 10th the Council awarded the prizes, the first being taken by a private in the 10th Hussars and the second being given to a non-commissioned officer of the Puna Horse. Sir Charles Staveley, in his farewell order, stated a "commendable commencement" had been made in field sketching by the Bombay Cavalry. He would be as surprised as pleased to learn that a cavalry regiment in his late command has, out of twenty-three competitors, won the second prize.—Bombay Gazette.

RANGOON AND IRRAWADDY RAILWAY.—The Rangoon and Irrawaddy Valley State Railway is not in particularly good odour with traders just now. Goods are often delivered in a damaged condition, and occasionally are not delivered at all. A Chinese trader has recently obtained a decree against the Secretary of State for Rs. 3,800 and costs in full damages for non-delivery of certain rice entrusted to the railway at Prome and not delivered to him. The learned recorder before whom the case was heard characterised the defence as an "after-thought," and disbelieved the statements of certain of the railway employes, who wished to make out the consignment had been delivered to the plaintiff's clerk without his having delivered up the receipt for the goods. Interest was likewise allowed the plaintiff by way of damages for the time he had been kept out of his money by the action of the railway authorities.—Friend of India.

MANDALAY.—The following is the substance of the proclamation recently issued by the Burmese Government:—"Royal Edict.—By his Great, Glorious, and most Excellent Majesty over Land and Water, Lord of the Celestial Elephant, Master of many White Elephants, Possessor of many descriptions of Arms, and the Fifth Founder of Religion, who has a desire to see the maintenance of the orders of the three laws in religion, the good government of the empire as administered by the good kings and sovereigns of the past in their Government:—I have installed my legitimate royal son as Eng Shay Min (or heir-apparent to the throne). My royal son Thootheeree Mahadama Rajah Prince of the Theebaw country, who is from the Konboug dynasty descended directly from the Mahadamada Oogamoka and Thagee-wen families, the real race of the Sun who is well versed in the three books of Beedagat and passed three first-class examinations with degrees of honour, and is well up also in civil and religious laws. I expect my royal son will act as I do in governing the kingdom. This proclamation has been forwarded to all (here the names of the above officers are repeated) for information and guidance, with a royal desire that they will serve the Government with peace and tranquillity."

THE NAGA HILLS.—Letters from Assam to the Civil and Military Gazette state that Jeypore is to be given up as a military station. A detachment of the 44th Sylhet Light Infantry, under command of Lieut. C. R. Macgregor, was to proceed to occupy the village of Kohima, in the Anyami-Naga country. Kohima is the largest village in the Naga hills, situated 5,300ft. above the sea level. The detachment at Jeypore has been ordered to Golaghat to act as a support to that at Kohima, as it is possible, but not expected, that the hill tribes may oppose this movement.—Times of India.

THE "ASIAN."—The Times of India says that, judging from the first impression, the new Calcutta sporting paper, named the Asian, is certain to be a success.

MADRAS.

THE GERMAN CONSUL.—Subject to the confirmation of Her Majesty's Government, the Government of India have recognised the appointment of Mr. James Stevens as acting consul for Germany, at Madras.—Times of India.

JUDICIAL.—His Grace the Governor in Council is pleased to declare the following to be divisions of the district of Cuddapah:—I. The taluk of Cuddapah under the immediate charge of the district magistrate. II. The taluks of Proddutur, Jammulamadugu, and Pulivendala, under the charge of the head assistant collector and magistrate, with headquarters at Proddutur. III. The taluks of Bodvel, Sidhout, Pullampet, under the charge of the deputy collector and magistrate on general duties, with headquarters at Sidhout.—Madras Times.

THE "MADRAS TIMES" LIBEL CASE.—The case of Christopher Hill v. the Publisher of the Madras Times, in which plaintiff sued for damages to the amount of Rs. 25,000 from the defendant, came on for hearing in the Madras High Court before Mr. Justice Forbes on the 22nd ult. The decree of the Court was that the defendant should pay Rs. 300 damages with costs, the judge holding that the apology awarded had been sufficient, but that damages were claimable.—Madras Times.

THE NORTH-EAST MONSOON.—The north east Monsoon was formally ushered in on Oct. 18 with the usual accompaniments of thunder and lightning. The peals of thunder were like the continuous discharge of artillery, and the flashes of lightning extremely vivid. A little house at Washermanpettah was caught by the electric element; its walls were shattered, and a man lying on a pial of the house was killed. The shipping in the roads, apprehensive of bad weather setting in at any moment, have shifted their anchorage to deeper water.—Madras Times.

THE MADRAS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.—The Deccan Herald concludes a long article thus:—"The practical character of this undertaking is most marked. Students are made to become acquainted with agricultural operations on the farm itself. During some period of each student's education he is to be engaged in actual work on the farm, because he cannot become a farmer in any other way. Then he is to have an education which will lead him to understand how to suit the cultivation of land to variations of soil, climate, &c. It is a grand work which is going on at this college, and, though it seems a small beginning for the millions of agriculturists of Madras, yet it will be like the little leaven which in time will permeate the masses."

WYNAAD VOLUNTEERS.—The Wynaad planters have again been invited to join in a volunteer movement, and to arrange for an annual meeting at Calicut or Ootacamund for drilling practice. But there seem to be considerable impediments in the way, and not the least is the difficulty of all being able to leave home at the same time, and the distances which many would have to travel for ordinary drill meetings. There have been several attempts made to organise a Wynaad corps, but somehow, from one reason or another, they have always come to nothing in the end.—Madras Times.

THE MYSOR FAMINE.—The total cost of the famine in Mysor has been about a crore and a half of rupees. The famine has not only exhausted the balance of sixty-five lakhs of rupees which was shown on April 1, 1876, but has also saddled the State with a debt of seventy-five lakhs of rupees. So—the Hindu says—the Maharajah of Mysor will have to take this agreeable heritage in addition to his throne.—Bombay Gazette.

PENSION RULES.—The Secretary of State has refused to sanction a relaxation of the pension rules in favour of a late controller of Public Works Accounts in Mysor, who memorialised him for an increase to the invalid pension of Rs. 3,000 a-year granted to him under the rules; on the ground that the memorialist having resigned the service in 1854, and not having been re-employed till August, 1855, had no claim to be regarded as an officer whose service commenced previous to May 19, 1855.—Madras Times.

PONDICHERRY.—There is a story current in Pondicherry that M. Trillard, the Governor, has been recalled on account of his having unduly interfered with the election of a deputy to represent French India in the Legislative Assembly. The successful candidate is a pronounced Republican, and M. Trillard strongly opposed him.—Times of India.

THE LAND REVENUE.—It is expected that, if the rainy season of 1878 is moderately good, the land revenue collections of 1878-79 will be equal to the average of ordinary years. During the two past years, 1876-77 and 1877-78, the deficit in the land revenue collections is estimated at 172 lakhs and 89 lakhs respectively, or 261 lakhs in all.—Madras Mail.

BOMBAY.

THE LATE MAJOR LYONS.—Major George Maughan Lyons, second in command and wing commander of the Bombay Marine Battalion (21st N.I.), whose genial face was well known to all classes in Bombay, was a very popular officer and gentleman. He was only forty-three years of age, and had a prospect of attaining the rank of lieutenant colonel in a few months from the date of his death. The date of his first commission in the army was Jan. 20, 1853, and he was gazetted major exactly twenty years afterwards, having attained the intermediate ranks of lieutenant in 1856 and captain in 1866. He was first appointed to the 21st N.I. in March, 1863, so that his intimate association with the regiment dates back more than fifteen years. The "Army List" records that Major Lyons served during the Mutiny "at the siege and capture of Ratghur, feint on Malthore Pass, battle of Betwa, siege and capture of Jhansi; present at the taking of the villages of Mhow and Mahoni." In addition to his regimental rank, Major Lyons was a member of the Bombay Staff Corps, to which he was appointed in 1863.—Bombay Gazette.

FAILURE OF MESSRS. NICOL.—It is reported that Government is likely to be a loser by this failure, as the firm had received an advance of two lakhs of rupees for the supply of iron girders, &c., for the P.W.D.—Times of India.

CHARGE AGAINST THE MANAGER OF THE AGRA BANK AT KARACHI.—An information was laid by the agent of the branch of the Bank of Bombay, Mr. Jas. Grant, against Mr. Chetham, manager of the Agra Bank, and Mr. Ardasui Gustaja, assistant of Fleming and Co., charging them with having forcibly taken possession of a quantity of wool belonging to the Agra Bank. The inspector of police found that there was not a shadow of ground for a criminal charge, and the magistrate dismissed it accordingly.—Times of India.

ASSAULT ON ENGLISH SOLDIERS.—The Puna Observer describes an assault by a gang of natives upon two privates of H.M.'s 2-11th Regt. The two soldiers, both of whom bore unexceptionable characters, were attacked about 9 p.m., without any provocation given, and seriously injured; one being left insensible, and the other stabbed in three places.

ESTATE OF W. NICOL AND Co.—Three members of the committee of five creditors appointed to manage the private liquidation of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co.'s estate have, we understand, given formal notice of their intention to resign unless the deed already signed by a large number of the creditors is cancelled, and another substituted for it, merely embodying the resolutions passed at the first meeting of creditors. The clause releasing the partners of the firm is, it seems, objected to, because its legal effect might be, it is feared, to set free the City of Glasgow Bank as well as Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. from the obligation to pay the creditors' bills.—Bombay Gazette.

HER MAJESTY'S INDIAN TROOPSHIP EUPHRATES, 4,173 tons, Captain C. J. During the voyage she experienced fine weather. PARSEE VOLUNTEERS.—The Akola and Umrawutti Volunteer Rifle Companies in the Berars have agreed to admit to their ranks respectable Parsees, several of whom have already been enrolled.—Friend of India.

THE TELEPHONE.—The Bombay Gazette gives an account of a successful attempt at conversing by means of a telephone between Belgaum and Puna. It is believed that this is the longest distance, viz., 212 miles, at which telephonic conversation has been accomplished.

A SINGULAR CAPTURE.—The ship Ardwar, when in Karachi harbour, had been taking in hides as a part of her loading. A would-be "stowaway," it seems, introduced himself in a singular manner on board among the cargo. One morning the captain on going into his cabin was rather astonished to find it occupied by a fine and lively cobra, of considerable size, which made demonstrations of hostility by partially erecting itself with expanded crest, and hissing like the very father of evil himself. The captain was rather non-plussed at first, but determined to add the very handsome reptile to his collection of natural objects; so, with a sang froid that only a "Jack Tar" could possess, he called his chief officer to his assistance, and, seizing a towel, deliberately threw it over the snake's head, and secured it by the neck; when, the chief officer laying hold of its tail, they proceeded to force it, tail first, into a large bottle of spirit, which was brought for its reception—in which singular and dangerous operation they were come upon by an astonished visitor, to whom the captain quietly turning, exclaimed, "Look, here's a queer creature."

THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL AND THE G. I. P. RAILWAY.—A judgment recently given by the Lord Chief Justice of Bombay affords a fresh illustration of "the law's delays." After a period of no less than fourteen months, Sir Michael Westropp delivered the judgment of himself and Sir Charles Sargent in an appeal preferred by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company from a decree of Mr. Justice

Bayley in favour of her Highness the Begum of Bhopal. In November, 1872, the Begum, with her daughter and a retinue of followers, came to Bombay to receive at the hands of Lord Northbrook, then Viceroy of India, investiture of the Star of India. While her Highness, with her daughter and a portion of the retinue, went to Surat, the rest of the followers, 160 in number, proceeded by third-class carriages of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway from the Byculla to the Hurdah station. Their luggage, as well as that of the Begum and her daughter, the latter including gold, silver, jewels, and other valuable property, went in a wagon by another train, which was burnt on November 23, 1872, by a fire which broke out in the wagon near the Mandwa station. The Begum sued the railway company for damages to the extent of Rs. 64,500; but Mr. Justice Bayley, before whom the case was heard for more than a fortnight, held that the value of the gold, jewels, &c., not having been declared, the railway company were protected by section 10 of the Railway Act of 1854; and, as to the rest, gave the Begum a decree for Rs. 15,200 damages, with costs, which have since been taxed at more than Rs. 7,000. From that decree, which was passed in July, 1876, the railway company appealed, and the appeal was heard before the Chief Justice and Sir Charles Sargent at various times between February and August, 1877. The hearing concluded on August 10, 1877, and the judgment was given on Oct. 19. Their lordships were unable to concur with Mr. Justice Bayley, and were of opinion that the lists of lost property furnished on behalf of the Begum were untrustworthy. The decree of the court below was reversed with costs.—Bombay Gazette.

★ SUICIDE IN H.M.'S 83RD REGIMENT.—We regret to record the self-inflicted death of a private of her Majesty's 83rd Regiment, William Varndall, who shot himself through the head, while in barracks at Karachi, about a quarter past one on the 4th Oct.—Bombay Gazette.

A DECADE OF TRADE.—The truth is, that certainly for the last ten years merchants trading in the East have had to encounter a constant and almost unparalleled succession of reverses. Speaking of Bombay only, we are sure that both the import and the export trade have been during that period in a most unsound condition. The price of cotton has been usually higher in the producing districts than in Bombay, and very often higher than in the Liverpool market, an anomaly resulting in great measure from the operations of Messrs W. Nicol and Co., who worked the presses of the Mofussil Company along with their general business, and were obliged to make large purchases of cotton in order to keep the presses regularly employed.—Bombay Gazette.

THE FORESHORE PROPERTIES.—The Government of India have sanctioned the proposal of the local Government to expend 77 lakhs in the purchase of the foreshore properties as follows:—Mazagon and Frere Company, 30 lakhs; Colaba Company, 18 lakhs; Sassoon Dock, 20 lakhs; Jamsetjee Bunder, 4½ lakhs; other properties, 4¼ lakhs. This sum is to be paid in Port Trust Bonds.—Times of India.

THE MONSOON.—The monsoon, which may now be considered at an end, has been altogether an exceptional one in Bombay this year. The rainfall up to date is 121 inches, the heaviest experienced for half a century. Fifty years ago there was a fall of upwards of 121 inches, and in 1848 the quantity of rain registered was 118 inches. The heavy rain this year has been followed by a plague of locusts, which have made their appearance in all parts of the Presidency. They have not as yet done much harm to the crops. During the past week we have had several heavy thunderstorms by way of a termination to the elephants and preparatory to the setting in of the cold weather.—Times of India.

VI.—Experience has shown the necessity for providing for intercourse for purposes of trade and barter between the people of the country and the soldiers and followers of our camps. ## THE LULL.

THE lull in active operations on the Indian frontier, as far as advance is concerned, seems a not inappropriate time for a review of one or two points in connection with the Afghan question. In a dispute where there are valuable authorities on both sides, where the object of the disputants is, of course, one and the same—namely, the safety and welfare of the Indian Empire—and the points at issue are not only difficult of solution, but not always easy to be understood, it seems almost superfluous to say that the language of passion is altogether out of place.

Something will, perhaps, have been effected towards a clearer apprehension of the problems presenting themselves, if certain analogies are shown to be untrustworthy, and, in truth, without applicability to the facts of the case. The whole discussion is rather a gloomy one, and we cannot resent the attempted introduction of a little fun; but when Sir Wilfrid Lawson said a short time back that the Afghan difficulty was, after all, only the old trouble arising from the jealousy of Mrs. Brown, who was offended because Mrs. Jones was admitted and her acquaintance declined, if we laughed at the quaint idea it was also impossible to conceive of any idea in so small a bulk containing a larger amount of error. But, curiously enough, the baronet's joke condenses misapprehension, which has been expanded in many diatribes by those who are opposed to the present Indian policy. For it presupposes that our Eastern Empire and Russia and Afghanistan are States which are in a position to treat on equal terms. Thus it has been said that one State cannot force an embassy on another; that one State has a perfect right to decline communications with another; that a State may choose its allies, and so on. The reasoning is indeed defective in another direction, for, in point of fact, in Europe no State that had diplomatic relations at all could decline to entertain them with one particular neighbour without due cause assigned. The only instance of such conduct that could be adduced would be the English refusal in the time of the Temporal Power to receive a Papal Nuncio. But that arose out of quite peculiar religious apprehensions. Let this pass, however. Our argument is that Afghanistan does not occupy, either to our Empire or to Russia, the position held by one European State to another. If it is asked Why not? the plain answer is that its condition of civilisation is not sufficiently advanced for it to stand on the same platform with Governments of the nineteenth century. It is not forty years, since in the Afghan capital, the de facto prince of the land having invited the British Agent to what he represented as a friendly meeting, turned upon him with sudden treachery, and shot him dead with his own hand. The action belonged to the middle ages, and, notwithstanding all the remarkable and exceptional circumstances surrounding it, must remain as an index of the low degree of civilisation at which the Afghans are stationary. They are, indeed, as all accounts agree, a race of lawless bigots; without morals, without fidelity, without affection; proud, indeed, and obstinate, but rather reckless and hot-headed than brave. Such a set have to be treated by persuasion or by coercion; for this sufficing reason, that there is no other conceivable way of dealing with them. The argument, too, about the relations of States to States, entirely ignores the fact that the English empire in India is now the greatest Asiatic Power in the world; ignores also a second fact, to which even the least impulsive observer can scarcely shut his eyes—that the time is fast approaching when there will only be three Powers of real importance in Asia—namely, England, Russia, and China. Even if it were desirable, it would not be possible for a great empire to deal with a little outlying kingdom on equal terms. When Prussia, fast advancing towards the hegemony of Germany, decreed that the existence of Hanover was no longer compatible with the interests of the Fatherland, that State was abolished, and Europe looked on in silence. The circumstances were, of course, quite peculiar, and the incident is not mentioned as an edifying example; but it at any rate shows that the exigencies of a paramount Power override the comity of nations even in the civilised West.

So long as the Russian frontier was still at a considerable distance, the Indian Government did not think fit to interfere with, or, indeed, to take much notice of, Afghan politics. Even when Shere Ali overlooked the coldness with which his early struggles for the throne had been witnessed, and frankly offered, for certain equivalents, his alliance to Lord Mayo (with whose noble presence he was greatly struck), that Viceroy, as was mentioned in Lord Northbrook's temperate speech at Winchester last Monday, promised him nothing but a little money and firearms, and the miserable commodity which is called "moral support." A treaty of any kind was positively refused. Of course there are some people who think all this was a wrong policy, and that an empire like British India, constituted as it is of rather combustible elements, can never afford to ignore neighbouring politics; that the surveillance of a frontier country so physically important as Cabul properly belonged to the paramount Asiatic Power of that part of the world. Surveillance and direction need not, of course, have involved any interference with internal administration. But, now that the Russian boundary has reached the Zurufshan range, the state of affairs is considered to have undergone a most serious change. The account of Sir Louis Pelly's negotiations, which was published in the Globe, has not been contradicted. If substantially correct it presents a picture of persuasion attempted to the utmost extent. A treaty, a subsidy, an assured succession, were offered in vain. If it be incorrect, it is hard to imagine the reason of mystification about these negotiations. After all, success may have been impossible—though, if Lord Northbrook is right in saying that the Ameer would resent Russian interference more than British interference, the opportunity seemed a favourable one for a skilful diplomatist. The proposed mission of Sir Neville Chamberlain was clearly only a pretext for proceeding, when persuasion had broken down to the only other resource—coercion. It was an unfortunate pretext in one respect—that it lent itself to misrepresentation and ridicule. The idea of going to war with a country because it did not wish to receive a visit does not sound well. But the question is, Could the Indian Government sit still and watch the growth of Russian influence without making any effort to let the Ameer know what the results of a Russian alliance would undoubtedly be to himself, and how distasteful such an alliance would be to the other great Asiatic Powers with whom the interests of Cabul are more closely bound up—indeed, that it could not possibly be permitted. If it was necessary to find a pretext for coercion it does not really much signify what the pretext was.

It seems essential that the frontier rectification question should be kept separate from that of enforced diplomatic intercourse. Of course, if the Ameer elects war rather than to enter into communication and negotiations with the British, one of the results of the conflict looked forward to would be the improvement of the frontier. And this is simply a military question, to be decided by military men: a scientific frontier is a scientific problem. But it is incorrect to represent the Indian Government as going to war to rectify their frontier; they are going to war, if that contingency must occur, to insist upon the recognition by the Ameer of the relative positions of himself and the paramount Power at whose door his kingdom lies.

We have heard of a "Plea for Shere Ali," but we are not persuaded that any such defence was necessary. The government by alternate parties in this country explains, if it does not justify, a vacillating policy in the East. But it must be difficult for a half-civilised chieftain, in the seclusion of his solitary hills, to either comprehend or forgive it. And, finding himself now apparently so much in request, he may naturally enough distrust an offer of friendship which contrasts so strongly with the chilly indifference exhibited towards him at an earlier period. But whether Shere Ali has erred in judgment, excusably or inexcusably, the necessities of the crisis demand that in either case he should be brought to his senses. As for the inquiry, what is to be done with Afghanistan when it is annexed, the time to consider that may be postponed till the idea of annexation is seriously mooted. It certainly has not been hinted at in any authentic official utterance, or from any reliable quarter as yet.

INVALIDS FROM CYPRUS.—A batch of invalids from Cyprus reached Netley Hospital on Saturday week. It is stated that they exhibit abundant evidence of exposure to malaria, but not a trace of scurvy or of its consequences.

HOME NEWS.

H.M. NAVY.—The subjoined information is supplied by the Admiralty:—H.M.'s ship Simoom arrived at Aden on the 12th inst., and was to sail on 13th for Bombay; all well. H.M.'s ship Orontes arrived at Halifax on the 11th inst., and left at 4 p.m. on the 13th. H.M.'s Indian troopship Euphrates arrived at Suez on Monday last, and left Port Said on Wednesday for Portsmouth.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £200,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £120,000; and to Bombay, £80,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 7 5-16d. will receive about 9 per cent., and on Bombay at that price 25 per cent. These prices are practically the same as those last week; the allotment, however, was not then in full, as at present.

THE REPORTED GOLD DISCOVERIES IN INDIA.—Mr. W. J. Rhodes, managing director of the Moyer Coffee Company, writes to the Times to say that his company possesses estates at Devalah, in the district in question, extending over nearly 2,500 acres, which abound in auriferous quartz reefs, and Mr. Brough Smyth, at the date of last advices, October 2, was engaged in examining them. He further adds that the directors have not disposed of any of the mining rights or any of the reefs belonging to the company.

FORSYTH'S MISSION TO KASHGAR.—A correspondent writes to the Athenaeum:—"I observe that Messrs. Trübner are advertising the report of Sir D. Forsyth's Mission to Kashgar at £5 5s. Some time ago this report, which was published in India, was on sale in Calcutta at Rs. 12; afterwards it was withdrawn from sale by authority, and not publicly procurable. Now it is offered by a private firm at nearly five times the original cost. This seems to require explanation."

A COOLIE SHIP ON SHORE.—The Royal Mail steamship Nile, which arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday from the West Indies, landed part of the crew of the Portland, a ship which, in going out from Trinidad, bound to Calcutta, with between three and four hundred coolies, went ashore and was lost. About three hundred of the men were taken off by an English steamer which passed a few hours later, and the remainder were landed by the ship's boats on the island of Monos, and were conveyed to Port of Spain by a steamer chartered by the local Government. An inquiry into the circumstances was held by the stipendiary justices, and the captain was acquitted of all blame, as the ship went ashore owing to the wind falling and a strong current running.

LORD NORTHBROOK, late Viceroy of India, delivered a speech on Monday last, at Winchester, in which he referred to the state of affairs in India and to Lord Beaconsfield's speech at the Guildhall. He remarked that he was responsible for the settlement of some of the difficulties which arose in 1876 between the Khan of Kelat and his nobles, but he had never contemplated in the arrangements which were then made the occupation of Quetta; indeed, he had always been opposed to such a step, and he also disagreed with other suggestions which had been made for the rectification of the North Western Frontier. He believed that our present frontier was unassailable, and to make any further advance into Afghanistan would be unwise. Our greatest difficulty on the frontier was in dealing with the independent tribes, and the further we advanced the greater this difficulty would become. He denied Lord Beaconsfield's assertion that the question of the North Western Frontier had been under the consideration of recent Indian Viceroy, and combated the idea of a Russian invasion of India in that direction.

GENERAL SIR JOHN GARVOCK, G.C.B., died on Sunday afternoon at 81, Queen's-gate South Kensington. Sir John entered the army in 1835. He was major of brigade in Sir Harry Smith's division throughout the Sikh campaign of 1845-46, and was present at the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Buddiwal, Aliwal, and Sobraon (where he was severely wounded). He served on Sir Harry Smith's staff at the defeat of the Boers at Boom Plaats in 1848, and in the Caffre war 1850-52. After serving at the head of the Quartermaster General's Department in Ceylon and in command of a brigade at Dover, he was appointed to the Peshawar division, and placed at the head of the Eusofzaie Field Force in December, 1863. The operations proved perfectly successful, and he was nominated K.C.B. Sir John Garvock commanded the northern district of England from 1866 to 1871, and was appointed to the southern district in May, 1877, but was compelled to resign through ill health on the 1st of October, 1878. He was advanced to G.C.B. in 1875.

IMPROVED ROCKETS FOR THE INDIAN ARMY.—The Government of India, recognising the value of war rockets in such operations as the contemplated campaign in Afghanistan, have requisitioned the Royal Laboratory Department, Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, to supplement former issues by a supply of rockets larger and more powerful than those in ordinary use. The department is, accordingly, manufacturing the pattern known as the six-inch rockets, the largest in the service, in which very few exist. It is, as its name implies, six inches in diameter, and its length is nearly 4ft. The bursting charge in the head, in accordance with the latest improvements, will consist of gun-cotton, occupying about one-third of the case, the remainder being filled with the firing composition. A strengthened attachment of the head recently tried at Shoeburyness is adopted, and it is proposed to introduce, in case of need, the new delayed-action fuse. Like all the war rockets now made, they are without sticks, rotation being imparted by the escaping gases, and they may be fired either from troughs or tubes. Twenty of these rockets are to be used for experimental purposes, but 100 will be sent out as soon as possible to the army in North West India.

MAJOR GENERAL FREDERICK ENGLISH, C.B., late of the 53rd Foot, died on the 5th inst. at 13, Oxford-terrace, Cheltenham, aged sixty-two. The deceased joined the army in March, 1833, as an ensign in the 35th Foot, with which he continued to serve until 1857, when he exchanged into the 33rd Foot with Lieut. Col. (now Major Gen.) Walter. He served in the Indian Mutiny campaigns from 1857 to 1859, and while in command of the left wing of the 53rd Regiment, 180 strong, with 100 Sikhs, attacked and routed at Chuttra a force of 1,000 mutineers, chiefly of the Ramghur battalion, taking all their guns, treasure, and camp equipage—thanked by the Commander in Chief, and nominated a C.B. Was thanked by the Commander in Chief for having cleared the Behar district of the mutinous sepoys of the 32nd N.I., whom he encountered and defeated at Gopalgunge; commanded the 53rd Regiment at the action of Khocagunge and entry into Futtelghur, and the affair of Shumshabad. Commanded the right column of attack at the storm and capture of Meerangunge; commanded the 53rd throughout the siege and capture of Lucknow, also at the passage of the Gogra at Fyzabad on the 23rd November, the action at Toolsepoor (horse wounded), and minor affairs (medal with clasp). Major Gen. English retired on full pay in April, 1864.

GENERAL SHUTE ON INDIA.—This hon. and gallant gentleman, who is one of the members for Brighton, addressed his constituents at the Mayor's banquet on the 9th. He said the depression of trade was not confined to England, but was great throughout Europe and in America. He remembered that a great Indian authority had spoken of the harm the electric telegraph would do to India. He was satisfied that home interference with the Indian Government would do little good. They had a Governor General there, with a council composed of men who had the deepest knowledge of everything Eastern—who had spent a life in India, had been governors and deputy governors, and been employed in Indian departments. The Governor General was thus not only a Viceroy, but he had an Indian Government that acted with regard to India. He was satisfied that Indian affairs had better be left in the hands of that Government. (Cheers.) He had heard more nonsense talked about India in the House of Commons than about anything else. He was not an authority; he had been only eight years in India, and he believed it required a life in India to understand it. If ever a man ventured to talk about anything which he did not understand it was about India. He was rather surprised to hear men get up in the House and say, "Here you have postponed this Indian Budget to the last moment; do you not think the people of India will be insulted?" Well, every one in India knew perfectly well that out of 200 millions of people there was not, he supposed, one in 25 millions who had ever heard of a Budget in his life. (Cheers and laughter.)

The Poonah takes out 120 passengers, and 55 proceed by the corresponding steamer from Venice and Brindisi, making a total of 175. Mr. R. D. Walker (Middlesex) and Mr. F. Penn (Kent) go out in the Poonah on their way to Melbourne, to join the party of English cricketers, under the captaincy of Lord Harris, who left Southampton on the 17th of October in the steamship Australia, to engage in a series of cricket matches in the Australian colonies. The following military officers also leave in the Poonah:—Major J. P. White, for Malta; Sub-Lieutenant W. H. Arnold, for Aden; Captain S. G. Smyth, Lieutenant W. H. S. Bunbury, and Lieutenant W. J. Brocke, for Bombay; Captain E. G. Ryder, for King George's Sound. The Poonah will go through the canal to Calcutta, passengers for Bombay changing steamers at Suez.

APPEAL CASES FROM INDIA.—The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council were occupied the whole of last week in hearing the arguments in two appeals from the High Court at Calcutta in cases which had come originally before the local tribunals at Gya, in the Bengal Presidency. In the first case, that of "Mussumat Bebee Zohrun and others v. Dooli Chand," the suit was instituted to ascertain which of two auction purchases of certain property was to hold good—namely, that of the appellants, who were the three widows of Khorsheid Ali, to whom the property originally belonged, an execution of their own decrees for a share of the estate and for their unpaid dower, or the prior purchase of the respondent by virtue of a decree obtained against the son of Khorsheid Ali on a bond which the latter had executed. The original court decided in favour of the appellants, but the two courts of appeal in India against them. On Saturday, 9th inst., their lordships affirmed the decision of the latter tribunals, and dismissed the appeal, with costs. In the second case the appellant was Moulvie Mahomed Wajid and the respondents were Mussumat Bebee Zohrun and others, who, as will be seen, were the appellants in the former suit. The same question arose, though the property was different. The appellant was a purchaser under a mortgage effected by the son of Khorsheid Ali. At the same time, however, that that mortgage was created, suits were pending between the respondents and the son as to the payment of dower, and the property was being held by the son under a decree to account for it, and in order to meet the claims of the respondents and other creditors. The High Court, on appeal, decided that the respondents had a title to the property in suit prior to that of the appellant, presuming that he had any at all, and that they were entitled to recover. In this opinion their lordships concurred, and rejected the appeal, with costs.—On Thursday the case of "Suraj Bunsu Koer v. Sheo Prosad Singh and others" was heard. This was an appeal preferred from a decision of the High Court of Calcutta of the 21st of July, 1875, reversing a prior judgment of the local tribunal at Tirhoot, in the Bengal Presidency. The suit was brought by the appellant as guardian of her two sons, who are minors, against the respondents, by whom a village, belonging to the late Adit Sahai, the husband of the appellant, was bought at a judicial sale in execution of a decree on a mortgage bond given by the latter. The object of the suit was to set aside such sale on the ground that the village thus disposed of was part of the ancestral family property, and could not be alienated by, or be liable for, the debts of the father, Adit Sahai; that the debts were incurred for personal and immoral purposes with the mortgagee's knowledge; and that the respondents had purchased with knowledge of the claim and objections of the appellant. Their lordships, at the conclusion of the arguments, reserved judgment.

A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

A RIDE TO KHIVA.

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 18:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS,

HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
 LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,
 Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1/4d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 38, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

PRESIDENT.
 HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The "German" System teaches spoken and written language to the "Deaf and Dumb." It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablet.

The Training College and School of the Society is situated at The Elm, Castlebar-hill, Ealing, Middlesex. Applications for the admission of Students and Pupils should be addressed to the Secretary, No. 1, Nottingham-place, York-gate, Regent's-park.

Donations and Subscriptions are solicited for the purpose of extending the System throughout the United Kingdom, by promoting Schools for the Poor; and for the gratuitous or assisted training of Students, not in a position to pay the ordinary College fees.

The want of well qualified Teachers is one of the most serious drawbacks to the proper instruction of the Deaf, and to supply this want in the best manner is a main object of this Society.

Subscriptions may be paid to the Treasurer, Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., at Messrs. Roberts, Lubbock, and Co., 15, Lombard-street, E.C.; or to the Vice-Chairman, E. Symes Thompson, Esq., M.D., at Sir Samuel Scott, Bart., and Co., 1, Cavendish-square, W.; or to the other Bankers of the Society, Messrs. Fraed and Co., 139, Fleet-street, E.C.; and Messrs. Hopkinson and Sons, 3, Regent-street, St. James's, S.W.

DAVID BUXTON, Secretary.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay to November 4; Allahabad and Madras, November 2; Calcutta, November 1.

THE general remarks on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending October 22, 1878, state that in Madras general prospects are satisfactory as heretofore; in Kurnool the weather has again become unfavourable to the standing crops, and in parts of Tinnevely rain is required immediately; slight damage also continues in Coimbatore, but in Malabar the second crop is now reviving. The number—64,955—on relief works has again decreased by 5,981, and that—37,438—gratuitously relieved by 3,716. Prospects in Mysore are excellent, and prices continue to fall. The diminution in the numbers on relief works and in receipt of gratuitous relief amounts to 3,213 and 779 respectively, the totals now standing at 20,191 and 9,936 as against 23,404 and 10,715 in the previous report. In Bombay prospects on the whole remain favourable. Kharif reaping is in progress in Sind, Guzerat, North Deccan, Kanara, and the Konkan, and sowings for the rabi are in progress; damage by locusts in places is again reported. Prospects of the kharif in the Central Provinces are in general favourable, and the rabi is being sown; good rain has fallen in some districts, and there have been light falls in others; rain is required in Bilaspur and Raipur; cholera is disappearing and prices are stationary. In Berar the kharif crops are good as before, and rabi sowings have commenced. Rain is much needed in Central India. From Rajputana no report has been received. In Bengal where rain has fallen the crops have greatly benefited; rain is much wanted in Shahabad, Sarun, and Lohardugga, and in others more would do good. Complaints of injury by insects come from Jessore, Noakholly, Hill Tipperah, Shahabad, and Manbhoom. Prospects in Assam are still good. The report from British Burma shows no material change. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh rain is wanted for the rabi sowings; the heat is unusually great. In the Punjab prospects remain generally favourable; fever, as noted last week, is still very general.

THE reports of the public health for the week ending October 22 record fever as prevalent in Sind, Shikarpur, Upper Sind frontier, and Guzerat, also in thirteen talukas of Kandesh, but health good in Nasik. Cholera decreased in Deccan. The Kattywar and Gackwar territory, fever prevalent. In Bengal: Public health good in Noakholly, Backergunge, Furreedpore, except a few cases of cholera, Pubna, Rajshaye, Rungpore, and Cooch Behar. In Jessore ordinary fever. In Bogra, Maldah, Hooghly, Bankoor, Bhagalpur, Sarun, Shahabad, and Singbhoom fever prevalent. Cholera in Monghyr, Gya, and Cuttack. North West Provinces and Oudh: Fever prevalent in Benares, Agra, and Lucknow. The heat excessive for time of year. In Punjab fever still very general. In Central Provinces cholera disappearing; fever prevalent in Nimar, Bhandara, Balaghat, and Bilaspur. In British Burma: Fever in Akyab district; general health good in Pegu; a few cases of cholera in Rangoon, Bassein, and Myanong; health good in Tenasserim. In Central India fever still very prevalent.

THE time allowed for the Ameer's submission to the terms of the ultimatum having expired without any reply being received, the columns were ordered to cross the frontier. The Viceroy issued a proclamation to the Ameer and people of Afghanistan, recapitulating the conduct of the British Government to the Ameer and his requital of it with insult and injury, but declaring that the independence of Afghanistan would be respected, and that the war was not with the sirdars and people, but with the Ameer alone. The following despatches from the Viceroy summarise the first events of the campaign, and up to our going to press no further intelligence has arrived:—

"FROM VICEROY, NOVEMBER 22, 1878.

"Roberts advanced Kuram Valley yesterday; no resistance; two small forts evacuated at approach. People friendly. Browne advanced on Ali Musjid yesterday; one column direct by Pass, one making a long detour to right to turn Ali Musjid and intercept retreat. Difficulties of roads delayed advance. Browne occupied Shaghai ridge without resistance. Shelled fort and skirmished with Ameer's troops occupying Pass, but deterred attack, other columns not having reached points assigned. During night Ameer's troops abandoned Ali Musjid, which was occupied by us this morning, capturing Ameer's guns and tents. Casualties few; details not yet received.

"FROM VICEROY, NOVEMBER 23, 1878.

"Second Brigade cut off retreat of Ameer's troops in Khyber, and have captured many prisoners. Force moves to Lundi-khana to-day. Casualties on 21st, Major Birch and Lieut. Fitzgerald, 27th Native Infantry, killed; Capt. McLean, 14th Sikhs, wounded; thirty or forty men killed and wounded."

Hart's "Army List" gives the dates of commission of the two officers who were killed at Ali Musjid as follows:—Major Henry Holwell Birch, B.S.C., in command of the regiment. Second lieutenant, Aug. 4, 1858; lieutenant, April 26, 1860; captain, Aug. 20, 1870. Major Birch served as a civilian volunteer throughout the defence of the Residency at Lucknow, and as assistant field engineer during the subsequent occupation of the Alumbagh, and at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and received a medal with two clasps. For his gallantry he received also a commission in the 27th N.I., when formed as the 19th Punjabs. Lieut. Thomas Otho Fitzgerald, B.S.C., wing officer and adjutant of the 27th N.I., obtained his commission as second lieutenant on Nov. 10, 1869, and his lieutenancy on Oct. 28, 1871.

"LAHORE, Nov. 23.—General Browne's report upon the capture of Ali Musjid states that ten guns and many mules were taken. Major Birch and Lieut. Fitzgerald, of the 27th Native Infantry, were killed, and Capt. McLean, of the 14th Sikhs, wounded. Among the rank and file, thirty to forty men were killed and wounded. The Second Brigade, under Col. Tytler, cut off the enemy's retreat, and captured many prisoners before the fall of Ali Musjid. The artillery engagement on Thursday lasted from noon until 4 p.m., the enemy's guns being well served. At four o'clock, the Third Brigade, under Colonel Appleyard, advanced close to the enemy's batteries, which were soon silenced. General Browne's force moves forward to-day to Lundi-khana. The Civil and Military Gazette of this morning announces that Sibi, a place situated due east of Dadur, in the Ameer's territory, has been occupied, without resistance, by the Sind Horse and the Sikhs. General Biddulph's force with the troops under Major Sandeman has advanced close to Peshin. No resistance is expected at this place.

"NOV. 24.—Major Cavagnari telegraphs that the Afridis have intercepted 500 men of the Afghan army, taking from them their arms and clothing. It is officially announced that a further report respecting the fall of Ali Musjid, received through Jamrud, gives the number of guns captured in the place as 22. It is believed that the greater portion of the Afghan garrison of Ali Musjid, including a general and several officers, have been taken prisoners."

The most recent accounts of the disposition of the three advanced columns is as follows:—The Northernmost or Khyber Division numbers about 8,000 men, with 42 guns; the Central or Kuram Field Force, about 4,500 men, with 24 guns; the Southern or Quetta Division, 4,000 men, with 18 guns.

This last division will be strongly reinforced on the arrival of General Donald Stewart's troops. It will then number no less than one British and seven Native cavalry regiments, six British and sixteen Native infantry battalions, with eleven batteries of artillery.

THE native chiefs on the line of march from Multan to Quetta are all displaying most friendly feelings towards the British. Imam Baksh, the principal chief near Loti, and Retchie Khan, the chief of the Chambaries, accompanied General Biddulph on his line of march, and on the arrival of the general at Loti, Shamzan Khan, the chief of the Bugtis, came in to pay his respects and offer his services.

A SAD case of suicide is reported from Mhow. Capt. Henry Fitzhardinge Berkeley, 3rd Hussars, shot himself through the head and died immediately. Capt. Berkeley was the youngest captain in his regiment, and had been adjutant for some time before his promotion.

CAPTAIN PRINGLE, of H.M.S. Vulture, has reported the capture of eighteen piratical dhaoas, and other boats, off Katif, on the southern side of the Persian Gulf.

ACCORDING to the Indian papers the expedition of General Lomakin against the Turcomans along the river Atrek, on the northern borders of Persia, appears to have failed. His troops are said to have suffered some reverses in action against the tribes, and to have been put to some distress for want of supplies. It is certain that General Lomakin has retreated from the advanced positions formerly occupied. He winters at places much nearer the Caspian.

In an account drawn from "various" sources the Indian papers state that the present condition of Eastern Turkistan is very unsettled. The Chinese have comparatively few troops; these are badly armed, and no reinforcements have arrived since they first entered the country. They came because they were invited, not by virtue of a conquest, as they were scarcely required to fire a shot; they remain by force of their old name and prestige, but they could be crushed and turned out of the country to-morrow if the natives had ready a ruler to up set in their place. There is no one, however, thought to be fit for the post except Turras and Andjanis, and of these the people will have none. The number of troops at Kashgar is estimated at 4,000; at Aksu, 3,000; at Yarkund and Kuchardach, 1,000; and at Khotan and some smaller towns each 200 or 300. The men are armed chiefly with spears; but few have muskets or rifles, and there are no guns except those formerly belonging to the Amir, and which were found in store at Kashgar. On the Russian frontier there are no Chinese troops, the native Kirghiz being employed to watch the roads and passes; and this in spite of expectations of a war with Russia in Ili. The roads to Ladakh also are guarded entirely by local Kirghiz. The chief ruler of the country is Niaz Hakim Beg, late Hakim of Khotan, who resides almost exclusively at Yarkund. Through him the Chinese ambans carry on the whole of the administration. But the one great object of their administration is, in the opinion of the Yarkundis, to extort money from all classes of the people. Bribes are required on every trifling occasion, and these are shared by Niaz Beg and the Ambans. Of bloodshed there has been but little exception at Kashgar, where some two hundred Sunganis were executed during the winter; at Yarkund about forty persons in all were either executed or tortured, and at Khotan about thirty persons. In spite of this comparative leniency, the discontent caused by extortion, restrictions on trade and personal liberty, and the destruction of mosques is great, and plans for rising against the Chinese and displacing Niaz Beg are being matured in all the large towns. Whether these will be carried out or not depends entirely on whether the Chinese receive reinforcements from the East. If no reinforcements arrive within a month or six weeks it was thought that a rising will certainly take place, and the Chinese soldiery will become easy victims to the Mussulman population, for not only are the former few and divided into detachments, but the army in their rear is threatened by Tungunis and Parsuchis, it not by the Russians, and they are dispirited and alarmed at not receiving the reinforcement they expected. In view of this contingency many Chinese have made preparations for their escape eastwards, and Niaz Hakim has concluded arrangements with the people of Kugiar, and with the Kirghiz behind that place, to assist him in flying to Ladakh whenever it may be necessary. The fear on the part of the Chinese is shown, moreover, by their constantly moving the troops and officials from one place to another, and in their desire to collect all the horses in the country and to mount the whole of their men—circumstances which the Yarkunds regard as indications of a readiness to take flight at a moment's notice.

The above quotation from the Indian journals, which claims to represent the existing condition of things in Eastern Turkistan, must be taken for what it is worth; and a little consideration will show that its value is not very great. The story bears internal evidence of having been brought from Kashgar by a Mahomedan trader, either through Wakhan and Cabul, or through Cashmere, and it is scarcely necessary to point out that all rumours coming through such a channel must be greatly influenced by the antagonism of all Mussulmans to the Chinese. But, when we come to consider the few facts which are detailed, we find no proof whatever of the weakness of China's position in Kashgar, but rather the contrary. The authority in this case admits that there are 4,000 Chinese troops in Kashgar, 3,000 in Aksu, and 1,000 in Yarkund, and there is, probably, a strong force at Maralbashi, Ush Turfan, and other places. We are not aware that it has ever been asserted that the Chinese army in Kashgar itself exceeded 15,000 men; what has always been contended is, that the main army is at Manas, whence the real attack will be made on Kuldja, when the time comes, via Karakuru. The Mahomedan merchant substantially confirms the accuracy of that view. Niaz Hakim Beg is supposed to be ruling Khotan in a state of independence, and we have no information of the Chinese having advanced south of Yarkund. The Turras mentioned are, in all probability, the Torahs, princes or nobles created by the late Athalik Ghazi. There is every reason to place this report in the same category as those which were received at such frequent intervals after the death of Yakoob Beg, and before the Chinese began their onward movement in the early winter of last year.

ACCORDING to the Madras Times it is said that, in consequence of the present state of affairs on the frontier, the Viceroy has written to the Portuguese Government at Goa intimating his inability to be present at the opening of the tomb of St. Francis Xavier in December next. It is, however, supposed that His Excellency will depute one of his suite to represent him at the festival.

THE two Burmese princes who took refuge in the British Residency at Mandalay have asked and received permission to proceed to British India. The protection afforded to them is reported to have excited the resentment of some of the Burmese nobles. It is hoped that the new King, who is said to intend to visit India and England, will be humane and wise enough to spare the twenty or thirty other princes who have been kept fettered in prison since the late King's death, though they were released for a few hours to do obeisance to his corpse. Among other reforms of the new regime 400 Phomygees have been expelled from Mandalay, some arrears have been paid to the troops, the jewels of the late Queen are being sold to defray the overdue salaries, and, while wasteful expenditure on canals, &c., is stopped, a Public Works Department is being organised to make good roads throughout the country.

THE Madras Times informs us that the Wynaad gold mines were started in the early part of this month by his Grace the Governor of Madras, "who broke with his own hand a large block of quartz from a level in the Alpha mine, one portion of which contained a large piece of gold, and the remainder was gold throughout. His Grace complimented Mr. Brough Smythe on the successful results attained, and expressed his opinion that the numerous samples exhibited hitherto unbounded wealth, which requires only to be developed."

THE report on the operations of the revenue surveys of India during 1876-77, lately submitted to the Secretary of State, shows that the total outturn of work was greater, although the number of parties engaged in actual survey was less by one than that of the previous year. The Secretary of State remarks that he is "glad to perceive that the important question of carrying out lines of levels in connection with revenue surveys in districts likely to be irrigated continues to occupy the attention of the Indian Government. In a country where contouring is frequently not feasible, it appears desirable that the lines of levels laid out by the revenue surveyors should, when practicable, show both the highest and the lowest lines of the surface so as to throw light on the natural drainage."

THE new Arms Act bears very hardly upon military officers, who have still to pay an ad valorem duty of 10 per cent., instead of a lump sum, of Rs. 50 on every gun or rifle imported. A correspondent writes to the Pioneer to say that on a rifle he lately received from England he was charged Rs. 71-8, whereas a merchant or private person would have had to pay only Rs. 50. If the correspondent and the customs authorities between them have not strangely misinterpreted the law it clearly contains a provision that can only have been allowed to exist by a mistake.

THE Bombay Gazette declares its entire dissent from Mr. Fawcett's theory that India is a very poor country, that her resources are exhausted, and that England must either abandon her or support her as a poor relation. The country is rich enough, and taxation is light enough—though it may be badly adjusted. No impartial observer who knows India can have any doubts as to the increasing prosperity of the country; and the principle, therefore, which Mr. Gladstone affirmed at the time of the Abyssinian war, that India, as an integral part of the Empire, should bear her fair share of Imperial expenditure, ought still to be observed. As for Mr. Fawcett's technical objection, that the Indian army must not be used out of India except to prevent or repel an invasion, these words permit of great elasticity of construction. It may, for instance, be reasonably argued that the Afghan war is to be undertaken to prevent the invasion of India by the Russians.

A RESOLUTION by the Chief Commissioner of British Burma, on the working of the scheme for introducing labourers from the Madras Presidency into British Burma, gives information as to the reasons of the failure of that scheme and the consequent closing of the Coconada depot.

It appears that in 1877 and the beginning of 1878 some six or seven hundred emigrants—men, women, and children—sailed for Burma, under contract with the Government to obtain wages at certain rates. But it was found that the amount of regular employ open was insufficient, and that by the contract the Government was bound to pay wages whether employment was found or not. The labour law appears to have been introduced in the belief that there were large employers of labour in British Burma who would gladly avail themselves of the services of the coolies in the depot, and who might induce the immigrant families to settle down on farms in the country. As a matter of fact, however, such employers exist almost exclusively in the seaport towns, and their wants are readily supplied from Madras (or from Chittagong in the case of Akyab) without the necessity for any interference on the part of Government. The Chief Commissioner points out that a labour law may be required and may work well under two conditions:—(1), when labour cannot be had by voluntary contract, except at great cost and with great difficulty; or (2) when, from local circumstances, special precautions are needed for the protection of immigrants. Neither of these conditions exist in British Burma at present. The true want of Burma is a settled agricultural population of Burmans or Shans to cultivate the extensive tracts of waste land in the interior. There is little, if any, real difficulty as to labour in the seaport towns. The province is in direct and constant steam communication with the Madras coast, whence hordes of labourers flock over to the Burma rice-ports annually for the busy season, returning home with their savings at its close. The result is that private employers secure the services of men who come over in crowds at their own expense and make their own terms. Government, on the other hand, imports coolies at enormous cost, and has to feed and house them, while the coolies themselves, by way of return for this, desert as soon as they can get a chance, Government being obliged to engage special police to watch them as if they were criminals. Under these circumstances, the Chief Commissioner has directed that the depot at Coconada should be closed, and his action has received the approval of the Government of India. Endeavour is being made to find employment for the coolies now in Rangoon on the railway in the Public Works Department, or on municipal works.

A GROWING difficulty is becoming visible, in the resolutions on the Divisional Reports, which has been gradually more and more acutely felt by the middle classes of Bengal. The pressure of want of employment, not only for the English speaking, but even more so for those who can only speak Bengali, is said to be producing actual distress. The Friend of India finds the explanation of this in the excessive numbers of those who are supposed to be above labour. In Bengal proper, exclusive of Behar, there are, according to the census, eleven hundred thousand Brahmins and eleven hundred and sixty thousand Kyusths. All these are taught to look for a maintenance to the liberal professions, Government service, employment as clerks, the collection of rent, or some occupation connected with religion or writing, and which does not call for manual labour. The total population of Bengal being thirty-six millions, we find that one man in fourteen considers that he has a hereditary right to live as a gentleman. It is true that the members of these superior castes are by no means unwilling to engage in trade, but as there are three hundred thousand Gondhabaniks and other such men whose peculiar vocation it is to buy and sell, and as a vast number from the lower classes have taken to commerce, there is not much room to be found in that walk of life. Moreover, the Brahmins and Kyusths have no monopoly of their favourite occupations, except those connected with religion. They have to compete on equal terms with Mahomedans and with the lower castes, who secure a certain proportion, perhaps a third, of the good things of the country. Thus we have two millions and a-quarter of persons in a single province dependent on a fractional part of the more gentlemanly occupations. In Behar the case is much the same as in Bengal. The Brahmins and Kyusths there count twelve hundred thousand out of nineteen millions and three-quarters, and there are, moreover, a million of the high military caste of Rajputs. We grant that a vast number of these men have some share in the rent fund of the country. But the fund is not sufficient to support so many. The whole rent of Bengal, after the revenue has been paid, is only some six millions sterling, of which about one million is taken by a dozen great families of names very well known. There are others who possess from a lakh to five thousand rupees a-year, and must be counted in the upper ranks. What remains for the smaller men, the middle classes, may be two millions sterling a-year. This is a substantial sum, but as a contribution towards the support of over three millions it is not large. Let us add all that can be made by native servants of Government, lawyers, priests, clerks, and mohurrirs, and we find that the means at the disposal of the middle classes are not enough for their maintenance.

THE letter of Mr. A. Rogers, late member of the Bombay Council, on the subject of factory legislation in India, which appears in the Times of Sept. 24, is declared by the Times of India to contain a number of inaccuracies:—First, with regard to the Commission which sat under the orders of Sir Philip Wodehouse's Government, Mr. Rogers says that the Commission came to the conclusion that interference on the part of the Legislature in favour of the factory operatives was uncalled for. This is contrary to the fact. The Commission, as originally formed, was composed of the following members—viz., Mr. F. F. Arbuthnot, the Collector of Bombay; Mr. I. K. Bythell, Sir Munguldass Nuthobhoy, Dr. T. Blaney, Rao Saheb V. N. Mandlik, Mr. H. Maxwell, Mr. G. A. Kittredge, Mr. Morarjee Goculdass, and Mr. Dinshaw Manockjee Petit. Out of this number two of the independent members, Messrs. Bythell and Kittredge, were unable to act, leaving on the Commission three independent members (Arbuthnot, Blaney, and Mandlik) and four millowners. Mr. Arbuthnot and Dr. Blaney in their report expressed a decided opinion that "a simple legislative enactment would be beneficial both to the factory owners and operatives." Of the remaining members the four millowners naturally opposed legislation in any shape, and with them Mr. Mandlik concurred. We do not know how the members of Sir P. Wodehouse's Government were divided on the subject; but as regards Sir Philip Wodehouse himself we understand that he had not formed any opinion about it one way or the other. Mr. Rogers is again in error in stating that "children at all events, if not even men and women, work in the mills in pairs, one off and the other on, so that the hours of labour are really only one-half of their nominal length." No such system prevails, but all the women work the same number of hours as the men, and there is no arrangement of working by reliefs in either case.

THE acting commander of the forces, in reviewing the returns of annual musketry practice in the Madras Presidency, says that the results may be considered as generally satisfactory. The best shooting European regiment is the 89th Foot, and of the Native Infantry the 23rd Regiment N.L.I., but the figure of merit of the Native Army is 21.52 lower than that of the Bengal Presidency.

WE understand that Mr. D. C. Boulger, author of the "Life of Yakoo Beg," is engaged on a new work entitled "England and Russia in Central Asia." The author's object will be to place the events which have occurred during the last three years in a clear light before the English reader, so that the present crisis may be the better appreciated. Special attention will be given to the condition of the Turcomans and to the recent Russian explorations in Central Asia. This opportune volume will be published by W. H. Allen and Co. before the end of this year.

COTTON PROSPECTS.—The Dhollera agent of a Bombay firm states the result of his visit to the districts to be: Plantings small comparatively; crop, condition good; probable out-turn, a three-quarter crop, or 260,000 bales for the whole of Guzerah and the peninsula of Kattywar. —Times of India.

CYPRUS.

THE visit of the Lords of the Admiralty, Col. Stanley and others, made quite a stir in our quiet capital; albeit their stay was not a long one, they made the most of it. One outcome of their consultations with officials here is the departure of the 42nd Regiment, which takes place on the 17th of this month. Col. Stanley resolved upon this after his visit to Matthiadi. Two other subjects which were earnestly discussed were the harbour question and the construction of railways. As regards the harbour at Famagusta, the best scheme is that of Mr. Hamilton Fulton, C.E., of Westminster, which was, I believe, forwarded by the Foreign Office for the consideration of his Excellency. But it was understood that the question would be deferred until the official visit. In the future development of Cyprus the Messaria plain, which may practically be looked upon as extending from the eastern to the western seaboard, will play a great part. There lies the rich agricultural district, and a reference to the map at once shows the importance of connecting Famagusta by rail with the capital, as well as of constructing a line between Nicosia and Larnaca. These matters are believed to have been entered into, and the opinion of Sir George Elliott and others cannot but prove valuable to the Government. But it must necessarily be some time before anything is done. Mr. Kellner has gone to England on a month's leave of absence. I regret to say that his health is far from good, and this, I fear, is in some measure attributable to the climate, though to a great extent to overwork. Few officials have devoted themselves to their task so unremittingly as our Financial Commissioner, and we trust to see him back again with renewed health and vigour after a well-earned holiday. The wonder is that his health has stood the strain so long. All through the excessive heat he was at work from morning to night without a day's cessation. Col. Biddulph is Acting Financial Commissioner in his absence. I have just been reading Forbes's article on Cyprus. Like everything from his pen, it is well written, though hardly up to his mark, and sadly lacking that impartiality with which he has hitherto been credited. I can only explain its bitter, jaundiced tone by the fact that he wrote it whilst still under the influence of Cyprus fever. There are strange inaccuracies in it, especially as regards the climate, which he calls "pestilential," and again where he speaks of the winter cold rendering Cyprus temporarily habitable by Englishmen. Winter has not yet come round, and we have experienced two months of the most delightful weather. After winter comes we have spring to look forward to, about which there can be no question. Whilst on this subject I may as well give you an extract which may interest your readers. It is from a book of travels in Egypt, Nubia, Holy Land, Mount Libanus, and Cyprus in the year 1814, by Henry Light (afterwards Sir Henry Light), Capt. R.A. The passage, which is almost prophetic, is as follows:—

"The possession of Cyprus might easily be acquired by any Government having a navy. If it were wrested from the Turks with a certainty of not being given up at a peace it would soon become a flourishing country. The population would be increased by swarms of Greek emigrants from Asia Minor, who would gladly fly to an asylum from the tyranny of their oppressors, and, if their industry were encouraged, would soon fertilise the barren waste over running one-half of the island. The unwholesomeness of the air may be remedied by draining the marshes that cause it. In the time of the Venetians this was done, and the malaria was not felt. Circumstances may hereafter oblige Great Britain to strengthen herself in the Mediterranean, and, for the richness of soil and general advantages to be derived from it, Cyprus may be considered of more value to her than either Syria or Egypt."

I rode over to Matthiadi the other day to see how they were getting on with the erection of the new huts, and was very pleased to see what material progress had been made. The huts are roomy and serviceable, good roads are already made and wells sunk, and the new colony is in a flourishing condition. The situation is charming, being high and well wooded, and close to the hills and mountains. I was sorry not to find a military police established as there used to be at Dali. I was personally witness of the necessity of such in the village, for something very like unauthorised requisitions was the order of the day amongst the soldiers. I heard complaints of a very grave character on all sides. Indeed, collisions between the natives and the soldiers have in several instances been with difficulty avoided. The future care of forests is to be undertaken by some one learned in the craft, who is coming from Calcutta for the purpose. The wholesale destruction of timber which has hitherto taken place leaves a wide field, and will require more than one to remedy the loss to the island. Mr. Brassey and family have arrived in their yacht, the Sunbeam. Rumour, of course, connects his visit with various schemes, beginning with Cyprus and ending with the Euphrates Valley Railway. But then rumour tells us also that his Excellency the Governor has been recalled, and that would be a piece of news that we should be very loth to believe true.

I understand on the best authority that Budget prospects stand high. If the Cypriotes share, in common with the rest of humanity, a dislike to taxation, they surpass them in the ingenuity with which they seek to evade it. But the firm front shown by officials has overcome all difficulties, and where the natives threatened to be refractory the presence of a zaptich has invariably solved the question.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

BRITISH INDIA IN OLDEN DAYS.

"Early Records of British India: A History of the English Settlements in India." By J. TALBOYS WHEELER. Trübner and Co., 1878.

THESE "Early Records of British India" appear to form one in the series of volumes in which their able and industrious author has proposed to set before us the history of India from the earliest ages. His former volumes have already won for him a place of mark among contemporary historians. In the present volume, which is published separately, Mr. Wheeler has drawn up from Government records, the works of old travellers, and other contemporary documents, a lively and instructive account of our connection with India from the beginning of the seventeenth century to the departure of Verelst from Bengal in 1770. The book abounds in extracts from the works of old travellers like Mandelslo, Fryer, Hamilton, and from heaps of old official documents, which throw a curious light on the rise and growth of our rule in India. For the early history of the English in Bengal few materials were to be found in the public offices of an earlier date than 1757; but with the help of Tavernier, Stewart, Holwell, of the native historians, and of records preserved in Madras, the author has pieced together a detailed and trustworthy narrative of events in that Presidency before Clive's appearance on the scene. After that date the Calcutta records furnish the main sources of the chapters devoted to Bengal. In dealing with Madras Mr. Wheeler had only to select from and condense the rich fruits of his former researches among the records which Sir C. Trevelyan had first enabled him to explore in 1860. With the further help of extracts from Fryer and Hamilton, he has produced in three chapters a full and lifelike picture of the Southern Presidency from its first beginnings down to 1754, when an English Nawab ruled the Carnatic, and Dupleix had "returned to France a broken-hearted man."

The story of English life and energy in Bombay is brought down only to 1700, and the bulk of this chapter consists of long extracts from Mandelslo, a young Holsteiner, who visited Bombay and Surat in 1638; and from Dr. Fryer, who visited those places in 1674, when Sivaji invited the English envoy to witness his coronation at the hill fortress of Rairi. In those days the future capital of Western India was a mile long, a town noted for its unhealthiness, "in which confusedly live the English, Portuguese, Topazes, Hindoos, Moors, Cooly Christians, most fishermen." The people, then reckoned at 60,000, "were a mixture of most of the neighbouring countries, most of them fugitives and vagabonds, no account being here taken of them; others, perhaps, invited hither by the liberty granted them in their several religions." There was already a president, with his council, his body-guard, his "chaplains, physician, surgeons, and domesticks; his linguist and mint master. At meals he has his trumpets usher in his courses, and soft music at the table. If he move out of his chamber, the silver staves wait on him; if down stairs, the guard receive him; if he go abroad, the Bandarines and Moors, under two standards, march before him. He goes sometimes in the coach, drawn by large milkwhite oxen, sometimes on horseback, other times in palankeens . . . always having a sumbrero of State carried over him." For all their "gallantry," however, the English, says the doctor, "walk in charnel houses, the climate being extremely unhealthy," and he gives a terrible list of the diseases to which they are liable through "an infecundity of the earth and putridness in the air." Things had altered for the better before Grose, a Company's "writer," landed at Bombay in 1750. He found the climate "no longer so fatal to the English inhabitants as it used to be, and incomparably more healthy than many other of our settlements in India."

In the chapters on Bombay we find no reference to Anderson's work on the early history of that settlement, compiled from old records, and published, if we mistake not, some years before Mr. Wheeler entered on the researches which have issued in the present volume. Neither does Mr. Wheeler give any extracts from that part of Grose's narrative which deals with the affairs of Bengal before and during the government of Clive.

When Fryer visited Madras about 1674 he found Fort St. George already furnished with defences strong enough to defy any attack from a native force. Its governor then ruled not only over the factories on the Coromandel coast, but over those in Bengal as far up as Patna. A timely peace with Holland saved Fort St. George from capture by the Dutch. The author gives some amusing glimpses of life at Madras under the governor, Sir W. Langhorn. No one was allowed to drink more than half-a-pint of arrack or brandy at one time, under penalty of a fine. Drunkards were set in the stocks and prostitution sternly discouraged. Fines were exacted for lying, for absence from morning or evening prayers, for cursing and swearing, and other such offences. Anyone guilty of climbing over the walls of the White Town was to be put in irons and shipped off to England. Duelling was punished by imprisonment on rice and water. In spite of these rules, however, "the times were as lawless in Fort St. George as they were in Covent Garden or the Strand." The Company's servants all dined together at an early hour, married men not excepted. In the Black Town the "customer," or collector of customs, acted as magistrate, but over white men the governor and council sat as judges, aided by a jury of twelve whites. The low salaries of that time were eked out by the profits of private trade, and the presents received from native merchants and brokers. The little settlement was often worried by internal squabbles, and raids or threats of attack from without. Its subsequent fortunes under Governor Pitt and his successors, to the middle of the eighteenth century, will be followed by the reader with an interest due in part to the author's light, quick-moving, compressed style, in part to the quaint freshness of the extracts from contemporary documents.

More than half the volume is necessarily taken up with the wondrous tale of English progress in Bengal. We have to go over a good deal of old ground, but new details brought out as we pass along, and the author's skill in putting something of a new face on old facts helps to enliven the journey. Life in Calcutta about 1720, as described by Hamilton, seems to differ but little from the life led there many years afterwards by the contemporaries of Clive and Hastings. The story of the Black Hole is taken bodily from Holwell's simply powerful narrative of that awful event. There are scores of passages that might be quoted as fair samples of the whole volume; but selection is difficult and conditions of space unfavourable. The more thoughtful class of readers will derive much food for reflection from certain State papers of Clive and Verelst, which are here given in full, or nearly so. Among the new points made by the author is the grant from Shah Alam of a blank firman to Verelst for the subahdarship of the Dekhan in 1767. It allowed the English at Madras to depose the hostile Nizam and set up another in his stead. The grant was cancelled by order of the Court of Directors, much to the disappointment of Verelst himself, who proposed to use it in a statesmanlike and generous spirit.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE NEW INDIA.

OUR Indian Empire has, for many years, enjoyed one of the greatest political advantages which a nation can possess. It has been free from the neighbourhood of a Power of any strength. In this respect it has resembled England and the United States, which, being inaccessible to rivals, are able to dispense with many onerous precautions found necessary elsewhere. The advance of Russia in Central Asia is fast depriving us of this fortunate position. Had our repudiation of the Treaty of San Stefano led to war, as most politicians supposed it would have done, Sepoys and Cossacks would now be facing each other at Herat, or Merv, or on the Indus. In fact, a Russian expedition had started on the mere chance of hostilities commencing, and it may almost be said that, in occupying Quetta, we despatched troops with a similar purpose. There remains but the barrier of Afghanistan between the two great Empires, and we are, at this moment, engaged in levelling it to the ground, or, more strictly speaking, in occupying it as a rampart of defence. Russia will probably meet us half way by annexing to the dominions of the vassal Ameer of Bokhara the territory he has so long claimed. While we seize the more important parts of Afghanistan she will take possession of the outskirts, and then our outposts will be face to face. Our sentries may salute each other on their rounds, as do those of France and Prussia. Even should some intervening territory be left, it will be narrower than that which a few months ago would have proved too confined to keep us from crossing bayonets. It is perfectly certain that India will have to take part in the next Russian war, whenever it may break out. We do not mean in the sense of resisting invasion. Many years must pass before such an attempt is possible, but sooner or later our rivals are sure to send an expedition against some place beyond the frontier which we shall think it politic to defend, Herat for instance; and we shall probably retaliate by more than one return blow. We cannot as yet get to close quarters; there can be no death grapple in this generation, but we have come within range almost. It is not easy to realise at once the complete revolution in Indian politics which must be the result of this change. The position of England would not be more altered were an earthquake to throw up dry land where the Channel is now than is that of our Empire by the approach of another European Power. Our organisation has been made to resist native attack; it must be remodelled when exposed to more serious danger. In the first place, we may notice that the precautions which, since 1857, have been taken to prevent the recurrence of mutiny interfere with our military strength. The Madras army is kept up as a separate force, although it is agreed that for the same money a much larger and more efficient body could be raised in the north of India, on the ground that, in case of another sepoy war, it would be advantageous to have some check on the Bengal regiments. It was for this reason only that the Duke of Argyll refused, when Secretary of State, to sanction Lord Mayo's proposal for the unification of our armies. There is no native artillery, so that any future insurgents may want gunners. The weapons of the sepoys are not the best procurable. All this was very well as long as we had to deal only with internal dangers; it may have to be changed when our most formidable enemies are to be sought beyond our borders. Muzzles for dogs are not used when the pack has to hunt. The chance of another mutiny is not the smaller because of the approach of Russia, but it is infinitely less than that of foreign war, in which we shall require our whole strength, free from the trammels which, in dread of its exuberance, we have imposed on it. We must risk something, and there can now be no doubt as to which is the most formidable of the two sources of danger. Still most important and delicate is the problem of organising the military power of that portion of the Empire which is under the rule of native chiefs. Besides the 200,000 British soldiers who defend India, there are 300,000 men in uniform kept on foot by native princes, who are of no use to us or to any one. The only reason given for the existence of this force is that the chiefs have treaty rights to maintain it. But surely rulers are not bound to commit every folly from which they are not restrained by the obligation of a treaty. To waste the resources of a province upon useless objects is a crime in itself, irrespective of all engagements. The treaties in question were very reasonable at the time when they were signed, when the native States really required to be ready to defend themselves against each other, and when India, as a whole, was not threatened by any foreign Power. But they do not meet the present necessities of the country. If Germany had to unify her armies in order to encounter France, India is under even more pressing necessity to adopt the same policy when brought face to face with Russia. All natives must unite against a general enemy. We can understand that there may be a difficulty in obtaining the immediate assent of some of the chiefs to this maxim, however incontrovertible it may be. But there are provinces in which our own Government holds the reins for a minor chief, and the question should be in these settled at once. Mysore, Hyderabad, and Baroda, three of the five great Indian feudatories, are now in our own hands, and we could at once proceed to incorporate their armies with our own, taking for the expenses a fair portion of the revenue of each State. If we put off the settlement of the question much longer, the minorities will come to an end and the opportunity be lost.—Indian Daily News.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

FUNERAL OF THE KING OF BURMA.

THE grand funeral of his late Majesty, Mine-done-Min, took place on Oct. 7. The foreigners being invited to attend, and due preparations being made for their reception, almost all of them went to witness a sight so rare and interesting in this Golden City. Our Resident and Assistant Resident went on elephants, the former in his uniform and with his sword. The Italian Consul, who attempted to go in similarly habited, was stopped at the city gate, until orders were issued from the palace to admit him with his sword on. These three officers, with the Rev. Mr. Colbeck and Dr. Williams, who were the only persons permitted to look on without taking off their boots, had a separate shed erected for them. The other foreigners were ushered in by their respective heads—the Armenians by the ex-Kullawoon, Mr. Manook; the Frenchmen by the Setwoon; the Suratees by Moolah Ebrahim; the Chinese by the managing proprietor of the Mandalay Gazette; the Moguls by a gentleman whom the Burmese Judge of the Mixed Court styled "the rich man who had no money," &c. All these, after being unshod, were thrust into one box whence they could get a splendid view of the whole ceremony. The women's quarter was on the west, extending northwards from the now deserted house of the present King, where, beside the wives of officials, were to be seen several Armenian ladies who had managed to procure passes of admittance for the occasion. The spot where the Maidaw-hpyah-gyee's (mother of the Paghan Ming) bones were burnt was the place selected, which, with the pagoda erected to receive the remains of the late King, was enclosed by a fence of bamboo work covered with long-cloth. Within this enclosure were sheds put up for all the officials as well as the places for the burning and burying ceremonies. At about eleven o'clock the Paghan Ming, with his head queen, made his appearance under four golden umbrellas, and followed by his body-guard. There was then a pause until at noon, when the grand funeral procession left the palace gates. According to custom, this was the first funeral of the day, and, the city gates being shut and well guarded, all other funerals had to be postponed till the whole ceremony was over. From the palace to the place of interment the ground was covered with red cloth for the remains of his Majesty to pass over. All the officials and palace people had white bongs, or hats, on their heads for the occasion. First came the three Mingyees and a Woondouk, the old Loung Shway Mingyee being too much of an invalid to stir from his bed. Each official held a long fan in his hand. Kinwoon Mingyee, on seeing Mr. Shaw, crossed over immediately to the shed where he was, and shook hands, while the others passed on. Next came the musicians, who were followed by other officials, among whom was the faithful magistrate Oo That Oh, ever and anon looking around and calling out for order. Then were brought the valuables of the deceased King, such as his crown, court dress, gold betel box, spittoon, and other very costly things, too numerous to mention. An empty coffin, overlaid with red velvet and plates of gold, was then carried, after which passed, with great solemnity, a whole host of widowed queens, princesses, and very young princes, all holding the rope which was attached to the tanyin, a sort of hammock, which contained the body of the old King. The most important personages in this crowd were her Majesty the Tsin Byoo Mai, the chief mourner, under three white umbrellas, and her three daughters, the lovely Soopyahs, each with a yellow umbrella, ranking even above gold ones, over her. Eight white umbrellas were held over the Royal body. As the procession moved by, and as a mark of respect to the late friend of the British, all those who were with the Resident rose and uncovered their heads. The ladies all accompanied the body into the white enclosure, whence the head queen and her daughters retired to a shed prepared for them. After some time silence was demanded, when it was announced that his Majesty the new King, the Thee Baw Ming, was coming out. Having undergone the necessary bathait administered by the Brahmins, the youthful ruler of Burma, the noble descendant of Alonghpyah, the worthy son of a not unworthy father, came forth in the court dress which the late King had used only once, and that at the consecration of his inimitable kyounng. Seated in the centre of a woh, a sort of gilded palankeen, at each corner of which was a maiden standing with bowed head and clasped hands, not daring to stir or look up to the face of their royal master, was this young Monarch carried by some forty men. Preceded by his body-guard, some dozen young men, with each a fine silk turban and a double-barrelled gun, and passing between ranks of invincibles, the Shway Nan Yin Hpayah (the possessor of the golden throne) was borne slowly by his Youkkyah Bah-thah slaves till he reached the entrance of the enclosure.—Rangoon Times.

THE KING OF BURMA.—The personal allowance of the new King of Burma is said to have been fixed at four lakhs of rupees only per annum. With this sum he is expected to maintain proper royal state, as well as five wives and an unlimited number of concubines. The ladies of the royal palace will not be able to indulge in many jewels or other extravagances under the new régime.—Englishman.

APPLICATION FOR PENSIONS.—The Government of India is said to have recently passed a rule, directing the submission, with the application for pension, &c., to the family of a Government servant killed in the execution of duty, of a list of the names, &c., of the surviving kindred of the deceased officer.—Indian Daily News.

THE R. C. BISHOP OF BENGAL.—Among the passengers who have arrived by the mail steamer Kaiser-i-Hind was Dr. Paulo Goethales, the new Bishop and Vicar Apostolic of Bengal. He is staying with Bishop Meurin, and we hear that he will not proceed to Calcutta for some time yet.

MARRIAGE OF PRINCE HASSAIN OF TALIFU.—The Rangoon Times describes the preparations for the marriage of Prince Hassain, son of the late Sooltan Sooliman, ruler of Yunan after it asserted its independence of the Chinese Government and attempted to establish a Mahomedan State, with Rownack Zemanne, the daughter of Prince Jewan Bukht, son of Shah Bahadur Shah, the last of the Great Moguls. "Invitations have been issued to a number of officials and to European and native gentlemen to meet at the Guest House, opposite Government House, where an entertainment for the gentlemen guests is to be given. Invitations to Prince Jewan Bukht's house have also been issued to a large number of European and native ladies, in order to be introduced to the bride. A very handsome and expensive trousseau has been provided by Government, who also bear the expenses of the marriage ceremonies and entertainments; over Rs. 10,000, we believe, have been expended. A house has been hired by Government for Prince Hassain at Rs. 100 per month, and has been furnished. An annual stipend has been also settled on the young lady, which we have no doubt will be increased hereafter. We are glad to see that Government is acting liberally in this matter. Taking everything into consideration, it is only right and proper that they should do so. In fact, we are strongly of opinion that the stipend at present allowed to Prince Jewan Bukht is far from being sufficient for his position, although he is only a State prisoner." Our Rangoon contemporary doubtless expresses in this topic the opinions of the community among whom the Prince has been residing since the downfall of his father.

We regret to announce the death of the only son and heir of the Maharaja of Jodhpore.

DR. ARCHIBALD ADAMS, of the Madras Medical Service, at present serving in the 2nd Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent, at Jaulna, has been nominated for the appointment of medical officer to the Kotu and Jhalra Patan political agencies.

MURDER OF A HEAD CONSTABLE.—A head constable at Rajpore has been murdered by a subordinate to whom he had refused a share in a bribe given to the police by a party of gamblers who had been arrested.—Pioneer.

DEPUTY POSTMASTER OF CALCUTTA.—On the recommendation of the Government of India, the pay and allowances of the deputy postmaster of Calcutta have been raised from Rs. 300 (rising to Rs. 350), with a house rent of Rs. 50, to Rs. 300, rising to Rs. 400, with an allowance of Rs. 100 a-month for house rent.

OFFICIATING SANITARY COMMISSIONERS.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned the grant of an allowance of 250 rupees a month to Dr. Harvey, officiating sanitary commissioner, Bengal, for the period during which he may be employed as a member of, and secretary to, the committee appointed to report on the management of the medical institutions of Calcutta and its suburbs, and on medical expenditure generally in Bengal.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR GENERAL OF THE POST OFFICE.—The Secretary of State has approved of the sanction accorded by the Government of India to the conversion of the temporary office of the assistant director-general of the post-office in India into a permanent one, with a pay attached to it of Rs. 1,000, rising eventually by small monthly increments to Rs. 1,400 a-month. This increase of expenditure will be more than covered by diminished travelling and contingent charges.—Times of India.

THE MHAIRWARA OF AJMERE BATTALION.—The Mhairwara Battalion arrived at Delhi from Ajmere on the 27th, and left by special train for Lahore en route to the front. The battalion comprises 725 in all, 95 per cent. of whom are big and powerful men. They were all delighted at the prospects in store for them. As the train steamed out of the station there were reiterated shouts of "Victoria Maharani-ji-ki-jai!" (victory to her Majesty the Queen).—Indian Daily News.

FIRE AT THE KOSSIPORE GUN FACTORY.—A fire occurred on November 2 at the Kossipore Gun Factory, Calcutta, by which damage to the amount of Rs. 20,000 was occasioned. A large shed was burned down and a number of lathes for turning conical shot were destroyed. Thus states the Bombay Gazette; but the Indian Daily News is of opinion that the damage done was of much less importance.

SEIZURE OF ARMS.—The Rangoon Times of October 16 says:—"A seizure of two hundred fan daggers was made a few days ago on board the Shoay-Dagone steamer from the Straits by a custom-house preventive officer. The sheath of this description of weapon resembles an ordinary Chinese fan when it is closed; hence its name. It is a very dangerous weapon, and every attempt to import it should be severely punished."—Pioneer.

KANGRA VALLEY.—Complaints reach the Lahore papers from the Kangra Valley of hardships in the imposition of the license tax. It is said that many men, such as slate excavators, are taxed, though their income is much under Rs. 100 per annum. It is also reported that payment of the tax will not be received in currency notes, rupees being required.—Pioneer.

REVOLT OF THE SHAN TSAWBWAS.—There was a rumour in Rangoon, just before the last mail left, that several of the Shan chiefs, tributary to Upper Burma, were in a state of revolt. This is by no means unlikely, as they revolted or refused to pay tribute more than once during the late King's life, and have now seized the opportunity of his death to do so again. United, the Shans would be quite strong enough to resist the Burmese troops, but they are continually quarrelling, and each chief is jealous of the other.—Pioneer.

MUSKETRY PRIZES.—His Excellency Sir F. P. Haines has announced his intention of giving as prizes for rifle competition by regiments of British and Native Cavalry, batteries of Royal Artillery, and regiments of British and Native Infantry serving in the Bengal Presidency, for the competition which will take place during the season 1878-79, the following prizes:—For the Royal Artillery and British Cavalry—a sword, regulation pattern; for the Native Cavalry, including the Madras regiment at Saugor, the Punjab Frontier Force, and regiments under the Government of India serving within the limits of the Bengal Presidency—a sword; for the British Infantry, for the aggregate prize, a cup; and for the individual prize, a watch; and for the Native Infantry, "the Magdala medal," with inscription.—Times of India.

PROPOSED DEPARTMENTAL CHANGES.—We are informed that the officiating senior member of the board has recommended to Government the dissolution of the collector of stamp, land revenue, and excise departments. The first he recommends to amalgamate with the board, the second with the collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, and the third to go direct under the commissioner of the presidency division. Whether this proposition will effect any saving remains to be seen.—Indian Daily News.

OPERATIONS IN THE NAGA HILLS.—With reference to the late cold-weather operations in the Naga Hills, Captain Brydon, 42nd Native Infantry, who commanded the troops throughout the expedition, and Lieutenant Macgregor, 44th Native Infantry, have received the commendations of the Commander in Chief, and the thanks of the Governor General in Council for their services on that occasion.—Indian Daily News.

THE INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—We have received official intimation that the opening of the Indus Valley State Railway on Oct. 1, from Sukkur to Radhan, was followed on the 8th by the opening of the other end of the line from Kotri to Laki, a distance of seventy-five miles. The remaining portion of the line between Laki and Radhan was to be opened on Oct. 27, on and after which date the Indus Valley State Railway will be open for passenger and goods traffic between Mooltan and Kotri. We thus get, commencing from Oct. 27, communication by railway from Lahore to Kurrachee, the only break in the line being between Rohri and Sukkur, where the River Indus intervenes, and over which at some time, not yet known, a bridge of one great span, 658ft., will be thrown. At present the Indus is crossed by means of a steamer hired or, we believe, purchased for the purpose, which is employed in carrying passengers and goods across the river, and this is done without much loss of time. The mails should be conveyed, now that the line is open throughout, in about three days from Kurrachee to Lahore; but our English letters will still come by way of Bombay, we presume; for the recent postal arrangement with the British India Steam Navigation Company, for their steamers to meet the P. and O. steamers at Aden once a fortnight, is confined to the Kurrachee and Sind mails, and does not include any other; indeed, until the direct communication between Kurrachee and Aden is made once a week, we could depend on the Bombay route with greater reliance than on any other. Nothing is mentioned officially about the rolling-stock of the Indus Valley State Railway; but for present purposes borrowing from other lines must be resorted to. The recent breaks on the line have been repaired by means of diversions without much loss of time, and we may indulge in a hope that the future of the Indus Valley State Railway will be prosperous, but there are many difficulties yet to be overcome.—C. and M. Gazette.

DISTRESS IN JULLUNDER.—Over fifty deaths a day have been registered amongst the native population of the town and suburb of Jullunder during the past month. The total population is about 50,000, and the distress caused by the heavy floods from the low hills beyond Hoshiarpur has been very great. Local committees for relief have been organised, and are spending one or two hundred rupees a-day, and the sanitary committee has been ordered to inspect and report on the state of affairs.—Times of India.

THE KURRUM COLUMN.—The correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette, writing from Camp Thul, October 17, says that it is evident that Shere Ali finds his forces are much weaker than he imagined, and, giving up Khushit, Kurrum, and Candahar, will commence by disputing the passage of the Khyber and Shukr Gurdan Passes, and then, concentrating all his forces round Cabul itself, hopes to be able to make a fight for it on his own ground. A Kafilah of 50 camels came in the day before yesterday with the usual loads of grapes, pistachio nuts, &c. They came from Logur beyond the Shukr Gurdan in eleven days, and this, combined with the excellent condition the camels were in, does not say much for the much-talked-of difficulties of the route. Their story is that the garrison at Ali Kheyl, between Shukr Gurdan and Peiwar, consists of one battery of artillery, one regiment of cavalry, and three regiments of infantry, and that the garrison of the Kurrum Fort consists of 16 guns and three regiments of infantry. They say that beyond these there are no troops in the valley, but that we will not be able to trust to the supplies of the country, as all the grain has been taken over the pass, leaving scarcely sufficient for the inhabitants. They also say that the feeling of the tribes bordering on the Kurrum—viz., the Zymicks, Turis, and Jajis—are entirely on our side, that they are all ready to welcome our "Raj" and help us in clearing out the Duranis. The Waziris also, whose country runs down along the right bank of the Kurrum, are declaring in our favour, for they not only have offered to convey our supplies from Bunnoo through their country, but also, when ordered by the Governor of Kurrum to send their principal men to consult with him as to what ought to be done in the present crisis, refused to do so without our permission. They consequently sent in to Osman Khan, the son of an influential Khan at Hungoo, who is in civil employ here, to ask if they might go. From all this it is very evident that the tributary tribes of Cabul see that the Ameer's day is over and are very unwilling to join the losing side.

MADRAS.

The death, at Bangalore, is announced of Col. G. C. Finlay, M.S.C., commandant 26th M.N.I.

It has been decided to have Major Bird, late cantonment magistrate of Trichinopoly, tried by a general court-martial, which is shortly to sit at Bangalore, in connection with the matters which lately formed the subject of a court of inquiry at Trichinopoly.—Times of India.

Mr. Tupp, C.S., North West Provinces, has been appointed to officiate as deputy accountant general, Madras, with the view of his officiating as accountant general of the Madras Presidency, in February next, when Mr. Probyn, the accountant general, intends to take furlough. Mr. Tupp's appointment is in accordance with the instructions of the Secretary of State, to fill the office of accountant general, as a rule, from the Covenanted Civil Service, as required by statute.—Times of India.

GAS LIGHTS FOR MADRAS.—Certain gentlemen in Madras, four in number, have communicated with Government relative to entering into a contract to supply Madras with 2,000 gas lights at Rs. 160,000 per annum.—Madras Athenæum.

CALICUT.—The Second Rajah of Calicut Veeragan is dead; he was very generous to all who surrounded him.—Madras Athenæum.

ANOTHER REGIMENT FOR BENGAL.—We hear that the 19th Regiment N.I., under command of Col. Dickey, now stationed at Trichinopoly, has received orders to proceed to Calcutta.—Madras Athenæum.

MADRAS REVENUE.—The deficit in the Madras revenue for the years 1876-77 was 172 lakhs, and in the year 1877-78 89 lakhs, or a total of 261 lakhs. This year the collections are expected to be about up to the average. The Secretary of State, in a despatch on the subject of the deficit, says:—"I have read with great interest your correspondence with the Government of Madras on the subject of the collection of the revenue of the present and the two past years. That Government appears to be fully alive to the importance of the punctual realisation of the public revenue, and, as I am glad to observe, to the danger of such pressure as may result in the ruin of the ryots, and so to the decrease of cultivation and further loss to the State. It is hoped that, if the present season be moderately favourable, the collections of 1878-79 will be equal to the average of ordinary years. The deficit during the last two years is estimated at 261 lakhs. I do not offer any opinion as to the portion of this amount which may be recoverable. I confidently leave this question to the discretion of your Excellency in Council and to that of the Madras Government."

MYSORE ESTABLISHMENTS.—The reductions in the Mysore Administrative Establishment and expenses are being carried out vigorously in view of the approaching transfer of the State to native rule. The terms upon which the European officers of the commission will receive some indemnity for the cessation of their civil employ have been settled and will shortly be announced.

BAMBOO SCALING LADDERS.—The Conservator of Forests, Madras, having offered to supply suitable bamboos for making escalating ladders, the local Government have sanctioned the issue of eighteen such to each of the following stations for the practice of infantry regiments:—Bangalore, Secunderabad, Bellary, Kamptee, Madras, Vellore, Cannanore, Trichinopoly, Rangoon, Thayetmyo, and Tonghoo.—Pioneer.

THE WYNAAD GOLD FIELD.—Mr. Brough Smythe, who is now preparing his report on the Wynaad gold district, has, according to the Ooty paper, suggested a new theory as to the formation of quartz reefs and the run of gold in them. Instead of the generally accepted idea that the veins of quartz are to be attributed to fissures formed in the original rocky crust of the earth, which were subsequently filled up by silicious deposit, Mr. Brough Smythe is of opinion that the quartz veins are in constant course concretion from the adjoining rocks, the silicious and metallic particles being extracted and collected by molecular or other action, and he thinks that the payable gold in the reefs will be found in more or less defined runs, in accordance with some principle of electro-magnetic attraction.—Pioneer.

FEMALE STUDENTS.—At the forthcoming matriculation examination of the Madras University two young ladies are to be examined. They have both been trained under Dr. Pope at Bangalore. Application has also been received from a Tamil young lady at Jaffna, who expects to be ready for examination next year.—Madras Times.

THE COFFEE-STEALING ACT.—A Wynaad correspondent rejoices over the notice of the Coffee-Stealing Act having been actually passed on Sept. 28, and in working order. But there seems to be some mistake in the wording of the Gazette, which would lead one to suppose that the Act is only available in Wynaad in the Malabar district, so that the cartmen, when they were actually out of Wynaad, would be exempt from its penalties, and it is along the, Calicut road and about Tambercherry that very many of the robberies occur. This is a matter which is important enough to require immediate attention, as it otherwise would prevent, in a great measure, the favourable effects of the new law. The Mysore Gazette, however, announces that the Act has been extended to Worg.—Madras Times.

RETURN OF THE GOVERNMENT.—The following notification appeared in the Gazette of Nov. 1:—"Adverting to the notification in the Fort St. George Gazette dated March 19 last, the Governor in Council directs it to be notified that the Council of the Governor in Fort St. George will assemble at Fort St. George on and after November 12, 1878."—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

We understand that Mr. D. Macfadyen, late of W. Nicol and Co., has been appointed joint agent at Bombay for the British India Steam Navigation Company with Mr. Mackie, who is now acting here for Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie, and Co. The Karachi paper states that Mr. D. M'Iver will act as the B.I.S.N. agent at that port.—Bombay Gazette.

During a recent storm over 2,000 tons of timber, belonging to native dealers and Marwarrees, were washed away from Tank Bunder. The value of the property thus washed away amounts to about Rs. 1,20,000.

ARREST OF A MAHOMEDAN MURDERER.—A Mahomedan fanatic who murdered the leader of the Persian Zoroastrians four years ago has been arrested at Bushire.—Times of India.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—The march of the 1st Light Cavalry from Puna to Neemuch has been postponed until the 11th November. This will consequently throw the moves of the other native cavalry regiments eleven days later. We believe that the move of the Marine Battalion to Puna next month for exercise has been postponed.—Times of India.

PENSION.—The Secretary of State has sanctioned to Mr. Framjee Bhikajee, late assistant political agent in Bunswarpa and Petabgurrh, a retiring pension of Rs. 250 a month in lieu of the pension of Rs. 2,000 per annum, for which he is eligible under the rules.

THE NERIAD MURDER.—The native fanatic who committed the murder of a boy at Neriad some time ago, adding to the crime the horrible atrocity of disembowelling his victim and gnawing the entrails, was executed at Ahmedabad on the 22nd Oct., Government having reversed the decision of the native judge who sentenced the convict to transportation for life.—Bombay Gazette.

THE RECENT SURAT TRIAL.—A correspondent of the Bombay Sammachar says that Mr. Branson's bill for fees as counsel for Government in the recent case against the Surat editors, amounting to Rs. 10,400, about the payment of which some difficulty had arisen, will be paid in a day or two. Government have, it is said, asked for an explanation from the Surat authorities for proceeding with a case that was so weak, when the reply was: that they acted upon information which appeared to be reliable, and which was given by some vakils and other respectable citizens of Surat. The correspondence on this subject has not yet closed. The total cost of the prosecution is said to amount to Rs. 20,000, and that of the defence to Rs. 45,000. The Jam-r-Jamshed publishes a somewhat contradictory report, saying that Government have declined to sanction the payment of Mr. Branson's bill, with some severe notice of the action of the Surat authorities; and that the bill is therefore to be paid out of the Surat municipal fund, which will be in defiance of right and equity in doing so.—Bombay Gazette.

EUROPEAN TROOPS.—All reliefs of European Infantry in the Bombay Presidency are stopped for the present. The 11th remain at Puna and the 7th at Belgaum, and the 66th and 83rd also stand last.—Bombay Gazette.

BROACH MILLS COMPANY (LIMITED).—At a recent meeting of the shareholders of the Broach Mills Company it was resolved to wind up the company in order to form a new one with larger capital.

COTTON SHIPMENTS.—The quantity of cotton shipped from the port of Bombay to foreign external ports and foreign Indian ports during the month of September was 13,553½ bales, or 5,313,924lb., valued at Rs. 12,46,585.

DEPARTURES OF HOMEWARD TROOPSHIPS.—Her Majesty's Indian troopship Euphrates, 4,173 tons, Captain C. L. Brown, sailed on October 30, for England, with 41 officers, 9 ladies, 30 children, 930 men, 70 women, and 178 children. The following are the names of officers and their families:—Lieut. P. Majesty's Indian troopship Fumna, 4,173 tons, Capt. G. Parsons, sailed for England, on Nov. 3, with 17 officers, 5 ladies, 11 children, 344 men, 34 women, and 87 children. U. S. FAMILY PENSION FUND.—We hear that the Supreme Government have sanctioned the grant of interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the balances of the proposed Children's Branch of the Bombay Uncovenanted Service Family Pension Fund, as recommended by the Local Government.—Indian Daily News.

STRIKE OF THE BARBERS.—The Bombay barbers recently treated the citizens to a strike week. They are dissatisfied with the amount they have to pay as license tax, and, by way of compelling the authorities to reduce it, they struck for a few days. Finding that this had not the desired effect, they have returned to duty, though still protesting against the unfairness of the tax. From another account the picketing system was resorted to, but promptly put down by the imprisonment of sixteen tansors, who threatened to beat and outcast one of their trade who pursued his usual vocation.—Times of India.

THE PROPOSED KHOJA COMMISSION.—Our readers are aware that last month some of the friends of H.H. Aga Khan forwarded a petition to H. E. the Governor, praying that the proposed commission to inquire into and report upon the Khoja customs as to intestate succession should not be issued, inasmuch as for the last 135 years all matters in relation to the customs and usages of the Khojas have been decided by the respective Khoja leaders, and never been before a law court. The members of the Khoja Jamat recently presented a counter-petition, in which they say that they have been separate from Aga Khan's party for several years past, and feel confident that the petition of his party will not be allowed to prevent the carrying out of a much needed reform, the necessity of which has been declared to exist by such a competent and eminent authority as Sir M. R. Westropp, the chief justice, and recognised by Government as of imperative moment to prevent the frittering away of property in uncertain litigation through want of proper, well-defined, and fixed rules of succession amongst the Khojas.—Times of India.

LOCUSTS.—The collector of Belgaum reports, under date Oct. 19, that "four days ago a flight of locusts, said to be three miles in extent in breadth and length, alighted in the Belgaum taluka (main division). It is said that during the hour of their stay they devoured one-half the crops in the villages of Ganepbail, Idelhonda, and one-quarter those in the villages of Kudgali, Kitur, and Shingankop. The crops destroyed are nachnee, jowaree, sawe, and rice. The villagers drove them away by making a great smoke and shouting. They are said to have gone to the Bide taluka. I am told the locusts are peculiar, as they have red heads and green bodies, whereas locusts are usually all green. I presume this is the flight of locusts which the political superintendent of Sawant Waree reported a few days ago to have visited Waree and to have flown in the direction of the Belgaum taluka."—Times of India.

CEYLON.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—C. E. Dunlop, Esq., to be acting district judge, &c., for the district of Badulla, commissioner of requests and police magistrate, &c., Haldumulla, and visitor of the prison at Badulla. R. H. Pyemont, Esq., to be acting office assistant at Jaffna to the Government agent, Northern Province.—Date, Oct. 21. It is also notified that an extension of leave of absence for fourteen days from the 18th Oct. having been granted to Mr. J. W. Gibson, Mr. N. Cooke has been appointed to act during that period as district judge, &c., Chilaw, superintendent of the prison at Chilaw, and visitor of the prison at Puttalam.—Gazette.

NICOL AND CO.—The Ceylon Times, remarking on the explanations given by one of the partners of the insolvent firm of W. Nicol and Co., of Bombay, at a meeting of the creditors of that house, says that these remarks as reported were calculated to lead to a belief that there had been rather large transactions between Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. and their Colombo correspondents, whereas, in point of fact, the latter have no knowledge of any such bill transactions as those mentioned as "drawn on Colombo account at the request of Smith, Fleming, and Co." These transactions were, our contemporary suggests, of a nature similar to many which some firms are too often in the habit of drawing, in order to keep the wheel moving, as it is called, and as such paper must specify some account on which it is alleged to be drawn, the "Colombo account" was given, for which no doubt should be read "Ceylon account," as the firm possess no property in Colombo.

From the same journal we cull the following items of interest:—LAND SALES.—At the land sale in Kandy, held on Oct. 23, there were 3,067 acres disposed of for Rs. 323,580, giving an average of Rs. 105.50 per acre. This amount, added to previous sales, brings up the total for the ten months of this year to the amount originally estimated for the whole twelve months—viz., a million of rupees, leaving two months' land sales yet to be received.

COFFEE CROPS.—The prospects of crop are fairly good, and picking on all but the highest estates is well begun; one and a-half to two boxes have already been gathered off some fields, and crop operations are in full swing. The sample from second picking is all that can be desired. Being about three weeks late in commencing, the beans have had time to develop, and the result is confidently expected to equal in quality any previous year's shipment. From Ouvah the news of blossom is decidedly better, and the spring will not be far below an ordinary average on some places. Crop is now finding its way rapidly into Colombo, and most mills are tolerably well employed.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS.—The report of the Inspector General of Prisons for the year 1877 states that, deducting women and road ordinance defaulters, and those under sentences of simple imprisonment, the average daily number of convicted male prisoners in gaol during 1877 was 1,893, or 69 less than in 1876, and 198 less than in 1875. The daily average of convicted prisoners during the first half of 1877 was as low as 1,974, and that for July was 1,910; but from August it rose steadily, till in December it stood as high as 2,165. The statistics of the past three years coincide in this respect, and all show a higher daily average from August to November than during the rest of the year. I have been unable to trace the cause of this in former years, but during 1877 the increase is entirely due to a large excess of convictions for short periods (under three months), chiefly at Colombo, Matara, and Jaffna. During the first half of the present year the daily average of all classes, road ordinance defaulters included, has been as under:—January, 1,980; February, 2,034; March, 1,932; April, 1,872; May, 1,830; June, 1,886; average for first half of 1878, 1,931; average for corresponding first half of 1877, 1,974. The large number of capital convictions is a painful feature in the statistics. No less than twenty persons were sentenced to death during the year, of whom eleven were actually hanged, against three in the previous year, two in 1875, and three in 1874.

THE CASE OF THE "CHANDA" COLLISION.—This was a case in which the owners of the schooner called the Amoya Soon-dram sought to recover compensation from the British India Steam Navigation Company, as owners of the s.s. Chanda, for the loss of the schooner through being sunk after collision with the steamer, owing, it was alleged, to the negligence of the latter. The case was argued in the Vice-Admiralty Court before Chief Justice Sir J. B. Phear, who adjudged that the schooner was materially in fault, but no fault was attributable to the steamer, and dismissed the suit with costs.

THE MAHARAJA OF JOHORE.—The visit of the Maharaja of Johore to Colombo was a very brief one. Arriving on Sunday, 13th inst., the distinguished passenger was received by the Colonial Secretary and the aide-de-camp and private secretary to his Excellency the Governor, and was taken to Queen's House, where he was welcomed by Sir James and Lady Longden. The next day, owing to the unfavourable weather, he did not proceed to Kandy, as had been arranged, but visited Messrs. George Wall and Co.'s coffee mills, in which the Rajah was apparently deeply interested. The same evening, escorted by a guard of honour, the Rajah went to the station and travelled by rail to Kalutara, where a special coach was in readiness to convey him to Galle, at which port he joined his steamer en route for his own dominions. The Rajah has taken with him a large quantity of Liberian coffee plants with which he hopes to make successful experiments.

DISTRESS IN THE RAYIGAM KORALE.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council, Oct. 23, the most important business was a question from the Hon. J. Van Langenberg as to whether the Government had received any reports from the Government agent, Western Province, as to the existence of distress in the Rayigam Korale. The Government contended that the rumours were exaggerated. There had been a certain amount of distress in the Rayigam Korale arising from successive floods, but no actual want. The Government officers had taken the usual measures for the relief of distress, but these had not been availed of by the people alleged to be suffering. No man in the district who was willing to work need go without food. A similar assurance was given by the Colonial Secretary.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1878.

LORD CRANBROOK'S DESPATCH.

THE advance of our troops into the territory of the Ameer has been heralded by a Proclamation from the Viceroy of India declaring that the quarrel is with Shere Ali alone, not with the sirdars and people, and that the independence of the country shall be respected. Upon the Ameer alone rests the responsibility of having exchanged the friendship for the hostility of the Empress of India. The statement of reasons justifying the commencement of hostilities, which thus concludes, will assure the princes and people of India that the Government of the Empress have yielded reluctantly to the necessity of departing from the peaceful principles of their rule. It is hardly possible for any one who carefully studies the immense anxieties attendant on the administration of India, the complicated problems arising out of "the old order changing, giving place to new," to imagine it possible for the Government to embark wantonly in a war of conquest or annexation. The appeal of the Proclamation to the public opinion of India will be responded to with renewed offers of loyal service. Simultaneously with this appeal, by the unusual but well-timed publication of Lord Cranbrook's despatch the Home Government have enabled the people of England to judge for themselves as to the real causes of the war. Laying aside all regard to party politics, the unprejudiced reader of that masterly review will perforce come to the conclusion that the shortcomings and errors of previous administrations have caused the danger that pacific remedies have failed to cure. The open hostility and insulting demeanour of the Ameer, the avowed presence on our frontier of a disturbing hostile influence, cannot be now attributed to unwise measures recently adopted. They were the legacy of the policy of neglect and indifference which some would persuade us to perpetuate. The proofs of this are fully and convincingly set forth in the appeal to English common sense in the despatch to the Viceroy. Two months ago we desired our readers to remember that it was not the fault of the Government of India, but the direct interference of the English Ministry, that threw away the opportunity of securing all that was needed when Shere Ali met Lord Mayo at Umbala. It is quite possible that the Ameer was reluctant to receive the irksome presence of a British Resident, but had it been permitted to Lord Mayo to press it as a sine qua non that British Residents should thenceforward, by their presence, assure the Ameer of the good offices of England, and watch the movements in Central Asia, we cannot doubt that the Afghan ruler would have yielded. The feeling that found utterance in the words "Now, indeed, I feel I am a king," may indeed have been no more than the sense that the conduct of Lord Mayo "had rendered His Highness's position more assured at Cabul than any other ruler." But it is not too much to assume that the words expressed also that he had, to his own astonishment, found that his refusal was enough to nullify the wishes of the Governor-General of India. His overweening conceit was thus fostered by an unwise policy, which, whether attributed by him to weakness or indifference, was equally sure to provoke a sullen hostility. As time rolled on events rapidly developed important changes in Central Asia, and, although the Government were contented to rest assured that the Russian advances would be as innocuous as they were declared to be inoffensive, the Ameer, who had a keen eye to his interests, felt alarmed by the conquest of Khiva. The ruler who, when Yakoob Beg had consolidated his power in Kashgar, found, or thought he had found, good reason to dread his ambition in Badakshan, and, to quote the words of the able historian of Kashgar, "regarded him with scarcely concealed suspicion and dislike," felt a terrible insecurity against the onward advance of the Russian power. We are inclined to believe that the presence of the Kashgarian factor in the Afghan problem has not been sufficiently allowed for. But let that pass for a little. We are told how, fear overcoming conceit, and it may be dislike, the Ameer appealed to the Imperial Government of India to give him some assurance of their support against encroachment from the North. He seems to have entertained a considerable mistrust of the pacific promises of the Russians, and to have had small confidence in the maintenance of a neutral zone.

Again the Government of India "was prepared to assure him that, under certain conditions, he would be assisted to repel unprovoked aggression." Again the opportunity was offered of fully securing the interposition of a friendly Afghanistan between our immediate empire and the possible impact of a hostile neighbour. And again our statesmen at home interposed; they did not share His Highness's apprehension, and the Viceroy ultimately informed the Ameer that the "discussion of the question would be best postponed to a more convenient season." It is hardly possible to conceive an utterance more calculated to totally alienate the Ameer, albeit "conveyed in conciliatory language." The security not only of his succession, but of his tenure of the wide inheritance he had secured, was treated as a matter of no consequence; postponed, as his suspicious nature might opine, to a future day, when more pressing danger might enable the Indian Government to drive a harder bargain. From that moment it appears certain that he determined to make himself safe, if needs be, by neglecting, nay, repudiating, the contemptuous friendship of England in favour of the overtures of the growing power of the Russians in Central Asia. We have said that the jealous suspicions felt by the Ameer of Yakob Beg must not be forgotten. The fact adverted to as a sign of his hostility to England—that he refused a safe conduct to Sir D. Forsyth on his return to Kashgar—has a deeper meaning. He saw that the Athalik Ghazi was courted by the Government of India, and that commercial treaties were entered into with that self-made potentate. He made it a subject of complaint that his own feudatory of Wakhan was treated as if he were an independent prince. He found his own friendship and alliance treated as a thing of insignificance by the same Government that did all this. It is impossible for any one who recognises that there are Central Asian Powers, small and great, and Central Asian political relations and agencies which affect the ruler of Balkh and Badakshan, to doubt that there was a feeling of jealous resentment engendered in the mind of the Ameer—not only by our apparent neglect of himself, but also by our pains to cultivate the friendship of the ruler of Yarkund.

We do not allude to this in order to swell an indictment against the promoters of the past policy towards Afghanistan, but because the bearing of the whole course of events in Central Asia during the past ten years upon the Afghan question must not be lost sight of. Throughout the years referred to there was no overt act of which the Ameer could complain, save the misunderstood acknowledgment of the services rendered by the chief of Wakhan; his subjects profited by unrestricted trade with India; he accepted or left untouched presents proffered to him by the Government of India; but, for all that, the policy which existed up to 1874 resulted in making him an almost unconcealed "friend of the enemies and enemy of the friends of the Empress of India." Therefore he has permitted himself to be influenced by the counsels and to reciprocate the overtures from which he in vain besought the English to deliver him. The Viceroy of India up to 1874 extended to him a supercilious patronage, and put off the question that vitally concerned him to a more convenient season. The Viceroy of Turkistan dubs him "the friend and ally of the Czar, the noble and chivalrous ruler of the Afghans and Beloochees," and arms him with a sword wherewith to win victory over the infidels, "as a pledge of friendship and unchanging affection." It is true that he possesses a sword given to and accepted by him to be drawn on the side of England, and accompanied by an assurance of protection. That he has mistrusted the donor of the latter and espoused, to his own undoing, the cause of the more specious bidder for his friendship, is owing to his own misconception of the power and purposes of the rivals in Asia. That it has become necessary for the present Government of India, after exhausting proffers of friendship and dignified remonstrances against his deliberate and insulting refusal of friendly overtures, to make him feel the weight of justly-incurred resentment, will be charged against the authors of the policy which made him scout the friendship of England as barren and her grip as worthless. Supported, as he believes, by the unseen serried hosts of Russia, the Ameer has elected to defy the power of England and compel us to engage in an Afghan war. Throughout India the popular feeling approves the action of the Government, and the advance of our troops to Jellalabad and Candahar is confidently predicted and eagerly expected. At home we venture to believe that when, as announced, Parliament meets next month to decide upon the merits of the case, the voice of the country will approve the necessity of the measures taken to secure the future peace of India. The burden of the blame which must attach to the want of foresight in State policy, that, by neglecting precautions, compelled the adoption of violent remedies, will be laid upon the shoulders of those who neglected to secure as a friend the ruler that we now must chastise as a foe.

TEA PLANTING.—A young man who is appointed to a post on a tea plantation ought, if possible, before he leaves England, to obtain some slight knowledge of the language, conversational Hindustani or Assamese (or both), tea-tasting, the peculiarity of each description of tea, its position on the bush as green leaf, the cause of degrees of colour, sourness, &c., in the infusion; a general idea as to tea-cultivation, growth, manufacture, sieving, and packing. Also information as to weights, measures, quantities, land measurements, coolie labour tasks, the work of each season, and a slight acquaintance with the various duties of the planter, so far as can be given, taking into consideration the impossibility of practice. As regards the language, by the use of a small vocabulary sufficient knowledge of it could be obtained to prevent the first hardship one experiences in a new country in making oneself understood, and enough learned to enable the student to ask for further information on arrival.—Field.

OFFICIAL PAPER.

THE "VALUE PAYABLE" SYSTEM.

SEPARATE REVENUE, POST OFFICE, OCT. 8.

The following resolution is published for general information:—

RESOLUTION.—Under the "value payable" system, the Post Office recovers the declared value of a parcel from the addressee for the sender, charging for this service a commission of about 2 per cent. This system has recently been introduced into the inland parcel service of India, without objection being raised; but the Calcutta Trades' Association objects to the extension of the system to parcels booked in London for transmission to India.

2. The main grounds of objection are:—(1) that the measure is not required in the interests of the public; (2) that it is not the proper duty of the Post Office to perform such a service; and (3) that the facilities thus afforded to foreign traders would cause serious injury to traders resident in India.

3. With special reference to the first of these grounds, inquiry was made from other representative bodies—"whether, in their opinion, the extension of the 'value payable' system to overland parcels, would, or would not, be a boon to the public, especially to European residents in the interior of the country."

4. The results of this inquiry are now before the Government. The representative bodies and authorities have, with the exception of three, supported the measure as calculated to confer a real benefit upon the public. And, as regards the British army in India, the reports from the commanding officers contain unanimous opinions that the measure would be a great boon to the army.

5. The Governor General in Council cannot, therefore, doubt that the proposed measure would be appreciated as a public convenience.

6. As regards the next argument—viz., that it is not the duty of the Post Office to provide such a convenience, the Governor General in Council observes that this is not the view taken by some of the most enlightened postal administrations in Europe, and notably by that of Germany, which has taken a prominent part in the recent improvement of international postal relations. The German Post Office has not only a large inland service of this kind, but also considerable exchanges, under the "value payable" system, with the principal countries of Europe. Even when the post office of the foreign country has no parcel post (as in the case of Great Britain and some other of the countries mentioned), the German Post Office has arranged with private carrying agencies for the exchange of parcels upon the "value payable" system.

7. The Austrian service of "value payable" articles, though smaller in numbers than the German service, is greater in aggregate value.

8. No statistics of the operations of the Swiss Post Office in this respect are at hand, but that country has not only an inland "value payable" service, but also similar services with Germany, Austria, and France.

9. The delivery of parcels, excepting books and samples, has never been admitted into the British postal system, not, as is believed, from any objection on principle, but only on account of the large development of private agencies for this purpose. It has, hence, been necessary for the Indian Post Office to make arrangements with a private agency for this branch of its business in Great Britain. The reasons which deter the British Post Office from following the example of Foreign Post Offices in this respect do not apply to India, and no opposition has been offered to the intervention of the Indian Post Office by the carrying agencies, one of the largest of which is, in fact, the London correspondent of the Indian Post Office.

10. The Governor General in Council cannot admit that the extension of the "value payable" system beyond Indian limits would involve a transgression of the legitimate functions of the Post Office.

11. As to the last argument, on which the greatest stress is laid, the Governor General in Council observes that the Trades' Associations at the three Presidency towns have united in strongly deprecating the measure, on the ground of anticipated interference with their trade; and that the Madras Chamber of Commerce supports them. It is not merely injury, but "serious injury," that is anticipated by these bodies to the interest of traders settled in India. The Madras Chamber of Commerce goes so far as to look forward to the London tradesmen, under the operation of the proposed measure, beating "their local rivals out of the Indian market."

12. The Director General of the Post Office recorded his opinion upon the original protest that Indian tradesmen outside the limits of the Presidency towns did not probably share the views of the Calcutta Trades' Association, and that the estimate made by this body of the effect of the measure was exaggerated. In support of this opinion Mr. Monteath pointed to the petty character of the overland parcel traffic, as evidenced by the small average weight (6lb.) of the parcels, and to the proposed limitation of the value realisable to £10.

13. The Governor-General in Council is inclined to agree with the Director-General, and to think that the anticipations of serious injury to Indian tradesmen are founded on an exaggerated estimate of the practical operation of the measure.

14. The Governor General in Council hopes that further consideration and discussion may result in a change of the views of those who now oppose the measure, and notes especially that the Bombay Trades' Association, while fully sharing the objections made by the Calcutta Association to the measure as it now stands, would be inclined to look with favour on the proposal "if reciprocity in the offered facilities could be secured." The views of the Bombay Trades' Association are expressed in the following terms, viz.:—

"Under these circumstances, it appears to the committee that any new arrangement of the kind proposed should offer an exchange of advantages to the trade of each country; that, if new facilities for trading with India are offered to English traders, similar facilities for trading with England should be secured for the traders of this country, European and native alike. If reciprocity of this kind were secured in the proposed extension of the 'value payable' system, the committee and the association would be inclined to look with favour on the proposal, inasmuch as the injury which it would inflict on them as importers would be counterbalanced by the facilities they would acquire for pushing industrial products of this country in England. In the proposed extension, however, the committee do not find that any idea of this kind has been entertained. The system is to operate with parcels booked in London, but not with goods sent from this country."

15. There would be no difficulty in meeting the wishes of the Bombay Association by arranging for full reciprocity in the facilities offered; and, in that case, that association would not, as the Governor-General in Council understands, any longer oppose the proposal. It is possible, also, that the opinions of the other bodies who object to the measure in its present form might then also be modified. His Excellency in Council, therefore, thinks it well, before pressing the introduction of the revised arrangements, to allow time for a fuller consideration of the matter by those whose interests are supposed to be affected adversely.—R. B. CHAPMAN, Secretary to the Government of India.

HOME NEWS.

CHURCH DEGREES.—The Archbishop of Canterbury has conferred the degree of Doctor in Divinity on the Rev. Samuel Dyson, Principal of the Cathedral Mission College, Calcutta, in consideration of his distinguished services in the missionary cause.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION.—The dividend to be recommended by the directors of this company, at the annual meeting on the 3rd proximo, will be at the rate of 2½ per cent. for the half-year ended September 30 last, with a payment from insurance account of 1 per cent. (in all 3½ per cent.), making, with the interim dividend paid in June, 5½ per cent. for the year. The total payment for the year 1877 was 4½ per cent.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The report for the half-year ending June 30 last states that the gross earnings for that period amounted to £194,739, against £176,147 in the corresponding period of last year. The working expenses were £95,575, against £88,323, leaving net earnings at £99,164. This sum is larger than that of the corresponding half of any previous year, and it appears that the profits in excess of guaranteed interest, calculated at 1s. 10d. per rupee (the rate of the contract with the Government), amount to £26,157, the company's moiety of which is £13,078. From this moiety a deduction of £1,516 has to be made on account of the loss by the rate of exchange at which the board have been able to arrange for the payment in London of the surplus profits which are received in India in rupees. On the other hand, an addition has to be made of £1,190, the balance retained on the distribution of the last surplus. This works out as follows:—Company's moiety of surplus, £13,073; deduct loss by exchange, £1,516; to which add balance from last surplus, £1,190, leaving a total of £12,753. This sum will allow of a dividend being paid to the shareholders (on December 31 next) at the rate of 10s. per £100 of ordinary stock, in addition to the guaranteed interest of £2 10s., and making with it a total of £3 per cent. for the half-year, and making, with the amount paid on June 30 last, a total of £7 10s. per cent. for the year.

RUSSIA AND KHIVA.—A letter to 'the Times' notes a mistake in the letter signed "C. E. Trevelyan" in the same journal, in which it is stated "of the three columns" (Russian) "which were to converge from Tashkend, Orenburg, and the Caspian, the last never reached its destination." Such a mistake, it allowed to pass, might lead some of your readers to undervalue the importance of the Caspian as a base for Russian operations in Central Asia. In reality, there were four columns started for Khiva—the principal one, under General Kauffmann, from Tashkend; one from Orenburg, under Colonel Veretkin; and two from the Caspian, one of which, under Colonel Lomakin, was signally successful; the other, under Colonel Markosoff, failed to reach its destination; and this was said to be in a great measure owing to the rascality of an Armenian contractor, who had supplied bad provisions to the soldiers. He had got his contract by favour. As the letter I now refer to quotes official correspondence of the 8th of January, 1873, for the purpose, as it would appear, of invalidating the general opinion regarding Russian bad faith towards us in the matter of Khiva, it may be permitted me to refer to the same correspondence as bearing out this opinion, and I would call attention to the declaration therein of the Russian Ambassador to our Minister of Foreign Affairs to the effect that no more than four battalions and a-half were to go to Khiva, whereas, in fact, so far as we may judge from Schuyler's narrative, not less than 14,000 men of all arms took part in the expedition. I do not here want to impute bad faith to the Ambassador, but I do mean to say such a statement, however fully believed by the maker of it, would naturally have the effect of misleading our Foreign Minister, and through him the British public, as to the importance of the expedition meditated against Khiva.

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—On Saturday, the 16th inst., the case of Prince Morza Jehan Kadi Bahadur v. Nawab Assur Baha Begum was before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. This was a suit from Lucknow, and involved a question as to property which belonged to the Queen of Oudh, and which had been confiscated by the Government in the rebellion, and a part restored. The appellant who appealed had lost two suits in India, and the Statute of Limitations, it was stated, had barred his claim. He now appealed, and one of the points on his behalf was that the time of limitation ought not to count against him during the period the Government held possession. On the part of the respondent the contrary was insisted upon. Sir Barnes Peacock gave judgment. The decisions of the other Courts on the question of limitation were reversed, and the case would be remitted to Lucknow for trial on the merits, on issues to be settled by their lordships. The costs of the appeal to abide the result.—On Tuesday, Nov. 19, the same Committee had before them the case of the Maharaja of Bulrampur v. Uman Pal Singh and another, which was an appeal from a decree of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh of Feb. 12, 1875, affirming a judgment of the Court of the Fyzabad Division. The appellant was his Highness Drij Bijai Singh, K.C.S.I., Maharaja of Bulrampur, and the respondents belonged to the same clan, and originally to the same family as the Maharaja. They claimed a title to the sub-settlement under him of certain villages in Bulrampur by right of kinship, and they asserted that they held as independent proprietors up to a certain date, paying their revenue to the Government official of the day. The Maharaja denied their alleged right and their relationship to him. The settlement officer at Gonda decreed a sub-settlement in their favour at an annual rent of Rs. 4,219, which sum was reduced, on appeal, to Rs. 3,516. The Judicial Commissioner of Oudh confirmed that decision. Their Lordships affirmed the decrees of the Courts below, and dismissed the Maharaja's appeal.—On Thursday the case of Gouri Shunker v. the Maharaja of Bulrampur was before the Committee. This was an appeal from a decision of the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh of December 5, 1874, reversing a decree of the Commissioner of the Fyzabad division of the same province. The main question at issue was as to the right of the appellant to certain lands mortgaged to him shortly after the annexation of Oudh by the Rajah of Tulsipur, whose property was subsequently confiscated for rebellion, and settled with the respondent, the Maharaja of Bulrampur, K.C.S.I., whose loyalty during the Mutiny had been conspicuous. The appellant sought to assert, as against the Maharaja, his rights as mortgagee in possession up to the time of the settlement with him. Their Lordships, in the end, allowed the appeal, with costs.

THE GOLD DISCOVERIES IN INDIA.—The report of the directors of the Moyer Coffee Company (Limited), issued in anticipation of the annual meeting, called for Tuesday next, contains some interesting matter relative to the gold discoveries in the Wynaad district. The directors commence their reference to the subject by saying—"In the last report the directors did their best to dispel illusory hopes regarding the 'gold prospects' in the Wynaad, for at that time no results of a satisfactory nature had been accomplished by the Alpha and the other companies formed for the purpose of working the reefs. It appears, however, that towards the end of 1877 the Prince of Wales Quartz Reef Gold Prospecting Company acquired a lease of a few months, to work and test the capabilities of the Alpha Company's properties, and the results are of so important a character, and may affect so materially the interests of this company, that the directors deem it their duty to print the extracts from the reports of the Prince of Wales Company, dated January 16 and March 14, 1878." It appears from the reports referred to that, in one instance, from fifty tons of quartz crushed there were obtained upwards of forty-one ounces of gold. Hereupon it was remarked that—"capital, skilled labour, and proper management are the three requirements to make the Wynaad goldfields one of the safest investments ever started in India." In another instance, from 104 tons of quartz crushed, upwards of seventy-seven ounces of gold were derived. The directors go on to say:—"On the 28th September last Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., on behalf of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co., of Bombay, of which firm they were partners, made overtures to the directors for the exclusive right of mining for gold on the company's property, and 'engaging to make such an examination, by prospecting or experimental working, as shall determine them either to commence workings on an extensive scale, or to restore to the former the exclusive privileges so granted.' Thereupon a board meeting was convened, with the object of considering and then submitting to the shareholders the proposals made. Unfortunately, on the day of the meeting, an announcement appeared in the papers of the failure of both firms, which necessarily brought the negotiations to a close. It may be remarked that Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. have already acquired the right of working the reefs on the properties belonging to the Alpha, Wynaad Prospecting, and Prince of Wales Companies. The board know that the company possesses a large area of reefs, and it is a significant fact, and shows the importance of the subject, that Mr. Brough Smythe, late Minister of Mines in the Government of Victoria, has been deputed by the Supreme Government to thoroughly inspect the country." Mr. Lonsdale, the company's manager, writes on the 2nd Oct.:—"Mr. Brough Smythe, the mining engineer sent here by the Supreme Government, has made a preliminary examination of the quartz reefs running through the company's lands. I was with him when he did so, and I observed that, from the pans of earth and pulverised quartz which his miner washed, gold was produced in small but perfectly visible quantities."

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £200,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £60,000, at an average rate of rs. 7.364d., and to Bombay, £50,000, at an average rate of rs. 7.375d. Tenders on Calcutta at rs. 7.5-16d. and above, and on Bombay at rs. 7.36d., will receive in full. No allotment was made below these prices. Compared with last week the prices obtained show scarcely any change, but, as the Council was unable to sell the whole of the advertised amount by 9 lacs of rupees, the result is in that respect rather unsatisfactory. Next Wednesday a further £200,000 is to be offered, but the unsold balance is not to be taken into account.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY.—At the half-yearly meeting, held on Thursday last, the report presented to the shareholders stated that up to June 30 a profit of £8,644 had been made, and, after paying the usual interim dividend of 3½ per cent. for the past half-year, there would remain a balance of £244 to the credit of the current half-year. The chairman said they had experienced considerable loss by the depression in the value of the rupee. They charged Rs. 6, or 10s., per 1,000ft. for their gas, and found that, practically having reduced the price Rs. 2 previously, they could not increase the sale by any further reduction, although they were anxious to encourage a demand for cheaper gas by getting it more extensively adopted; but they had gone the full length of prudence, as there was only a population of 12,000 white people resident in Bombay. The company had paid off their debentures, and they had made a safe profit by becoming their own underwriters, by degrees, now taking a risk at £500 at a time in the shipment of their cargoes of machinery and what not. It had been thought advisable to increase the staff of their auditors in Bombay to three, selecting some gentleman from the railway companies or the P. and O. Steam Company, as a coadjutor to Mr. Bradley and Mr. King, and he proposed that they should receive £150, or £50 a-piece as their remuneration.

SAILING OF THE "MALWA."—The P. and O. Co.'s steamship Malwa, Capt. P. S. Tomlin, sailed from Southampton on Thursday for Bombay, via the Suez Canal, with the heavy Indian mails, £30,000 in bar silver for Bombay, gold thread and jewellery valued at £432, and a general cargo. She took out ninety-six passengers, and forty-five proceed by the corresponding steamer from Venice and Brindisi, making a total of 141. The following officers sailed in the Malwa:—Lieut. and Adjutant S. G. Bird, for Gibraltar; Major Simpson, Major E. A. Berger, Lieut. Col. Blackett, Lieut. T. J. Oswell, Sub-Lieuts. H. C. Kingsford, J. W. Little, C. H. H. Moore, R. H. L. Risk, E. G. Shortland, and F. A. Warden, for Malta; Capt. T. S. Clark, Lieut. G. C. Dobbs, Capt. C. F. Hughes, Major Keays, 2nd Lieut. M. V. Little, Major Swinhoe, and Major Webster, for Bombay. Lord and Lady Conyngham proceed in the corresponding Brindisi steamer to Alexandria, and the Hon. T. C. and Mrs. Hope, Major A. Murray, Capt. Smyth, and Capt. G. W. Willock, for Bombay.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The proposal by the Government to purchase this line was submitted to one of the most crowded and influential meetings of shareholders which has probably ever been held in the city of London. Mr. R. W. Crawford, who occupied the chair, made a clear and lucid explanation of the whole matter, and answered the various questions put to him in a most frank and candid manner. On the main points of the Government proposal little remained to be explained beyond the clear and concise statement of terms set forth in the correspondence between the Government of India and the directors. As to the policy of adopting the Government proposal, any doubt which might remain on that point in the minds of any of the shareholders would be set at rest by the reply of the chairman to one of the questions put to him, which was to the effect that, under the terms of the proposed agreement, the line would revert to the Government at the expiration of seventy-four years, when the whole of the capital would necessarily be lost to the shareholders; whereas, by the proposed scheme, the redemption of the capital would be provided for, and a liberal interest provided by the Government during the whole period of redemption. A question as to the position of the shareholders in the event of the Government declining to pay the annuity was an event which the chairman said had not been considered, and was a contingency so remote that it was wholly unnecessary to enter into its discussion. A suggestion which had been made that the Government should give India Stock instead of the annuity to those of the shareholders who would be disposed to accept it had been, the chairman said, submitted to the Government; but was not accepted, and the directors very properly considered that it was undesirable to clog the negotiations with proposals that were not palatable. As to the position of trustees, it was pointed out that it was by no means clear that they could not legally hold annuities; but, as a period of more than twelve months would elapse before trustees would have to decide upon the course they would adopt, they would be able during that interval to take such professional advice as they might consider necessary for their guidance. The scheme was agreed to unanimously, subject to confirmation at a special meeting to be held next Friday.

THE "VALUE PAYABLE" SYSTEM.—In another column will be found the resolution published for general information by the Indian Post Office. On Tuesday week a meeting of the members of the National Chamber of Trade was held at the offices, 446, Strand, to consider correspondence which had been carried on with the Director General of the Indian Post Office respecting the "value payable" parcels system—an arrangement added to the Indian parcels post "whereby the value of a parcel may be declared by the sender, in view to the amount of value, less about 2 per cent. commission, being paid by the post-office after realisation from the addressee. Mr. Debac presided. The following are the proposed rules as given in reply to questions from the National Chamber of Trade addressed to the Governor General by Mr. F. Morrison, the secretary:—"The limit of value would have been £10, of weight, 50lb., and of size, 2ft. by 1ft. by 1ft. The articles forbidden in an ordinary parcel are 'jewellery, watches, precious stones, liquids, or articles of a dangerous or damaging nature;' and the same prohibition would have been applied to value payable parcels. Secure packing and fastening, as provided for an ordinary parcel, would have been required for a value payable parcel; a covering of cloth or waterproof, sewn at the edges, being also (as in the case of an ordinary parcel) recommended. Seals along the lines of sewing would also have been recommended for value payable parcels of a kind likely to afford temptation to robbery. The rates of postage would have been the same as for ordinary parcels—viz., when paid in England, 6d. per lb. for books and 1s. per lb. for other articles, and when paid on delivery in India 4 annas and 8 annas respectively. The present practice in the case of an ordinary parcel is to communicate with the sender in the first instance, and, if desired by him, to return the parcel without any charge for return postage to London. This practice would have been followed in respect of value payable parcels. The ordinary Indian Customs duties are charged on all parcels by a Customs officer, who attends at the Bombay post-office and examines the declarations. He has the right also of opening a parcel if he deems it proper for examination. The amount so charged is levied on delivery from the addressee. If an undelivered parcel is returned to England, the charge for Customs duty is cancelled. This practice would have been applied also to value payable parcels. There is no particular form of declaration or letter of advice required, as stated in the rules for ordinary parcels. It must contain "name and address on parcel, contents and value for Custom-house clearance, with legible signature and address of sender." The members discussed the proposals in detail, and it was regarded as unnecessary to limit the value of a parcel to £10. Eventually, on the motion of Mr. Oliver, representing Messrs. Marshall and Snelgrove, seconded by Mr. Ashburne, representing Messrs. Whiteley, it was agreed that the "value payable" parcels system would be a valuable supplement to the Indian parcels post, the limits of weights and value to remain the same—viz., £20 in value and 50lb. in weight. The meeting also expressed the opinion "that the two systems might be made reciprocal with great advantage to both countries," and strongly "recommended the committee of the National Chamber of Trade to promote by all the means in their power the speedy adoption of a system so calculated to develop trade between the United Kingdom and its great dependencies." The meeting came to the conclusion likewise to suggest that the system should be extended to Ceylon. A memorial to the Director General of the Indian Post Office was adopted, and in this it was prayed that facilities for posting parcels should be given at other places than in Leadenhall-street and Cockspur-street. In the course of the remarks which were made some of the members expressed the wish that the Indian Post Office could be made the means of collecting debts due from British subjects in India to London traders, one saying that men in first-rate positions in the service of the Government had not transmitted the value of goods sent many years ago.

supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay up to November 11; Allahabad and Madras, November 9; Calcutta, November 8.

REPORTS on the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Oct. 29, 1878, state that in Madras general prospects continue good; in Kurnool the weather has been more favourable, and prospects are brighter in Tinnevely, where rain has fallen; in Coimbatore some damage continues. The number—55,891—on relief works shows a further decrease of 9,064, and that—33,127—gratuitously relieved of 4,311. In Mysore, the crops, which have been harvested in places, are as good as before and prices are still falling. The numbers on relief works and in receipt of gratuitous relief have further diminished by 1,964 and 3,220 respectively, the present totals in each case being 18,227 and 6,716. In the Bombay Presidency the kharif harvest is progressing generally with a good outturn, and the sowings for the rabi are going on everywhere; in parts of Sind locusts are causing much damage. In the Central Provinces the kharif harvest and sowings for the rabi are in progress, and prospects are generally good; prices are stationary, but have begun to exhibit a downward tendency. There is no change in Berar. In Central India rain is still needed. The report from Rajputana is for the week ending the 22nd of October, and shows no material change; rain is much wanted in Ulwar. In Bengal little or no rain has fallen, and more is much wanted in Shahabad, Sarun, Gya, Patna, Chumparun, Lohardugga, Manbhoom, and Bankoora. Reports from other places are generally favourable; injury by insects to rice crop in parts of Noakhally continues. In Assam prospects remain good, except that in Sylhet injury by insects is apprehended. Prospects are generally favourable in British Burma; the crops lately planted out in parts of the Prome and Thayetmyo districts will, however, suffer, as the rains may now be said to have ceased. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh prospects continue generally good; rain is, however, now wanted in places for the rabi. In the Punjab prospects remain generally good; fever is abating, except in the Jullundur district, where it is still severe.

THE public health reports for the week ending October 29 state:—Fever prevalent in Sind, Guzerat, and Khandesh, but decreasing in Konkan and Kattywar. In Bengal, improvement in many districts, but fever still prevalent in 24-Pergunnahs, Maldah, Hooghly, Monghyr, Bankoora, Shahabad, and Singhbhoom. N.W.P. and Oudh: health better in Allahabad; in Agra fever continues. In Punjab, fever still prevalent, but decreasing in Amritsar; very severe in Jullundur district. Fever prevalent in Central Provinces; cholera in Jubbulpur and Nagpur. British Burma: Some cholera in Rangoon and Bassein; elsewhere health normal. In Central India, fever still severe; and prevalent in Rajputana.

THE advance of our troops has, according to the Viceroy's telegrams furnished by the India Office, been hitherto unchecked, no opposition having been offered since the attempted defence of Ali Musjid. The correspondent of the Daily News, however, reports that the hill tribes have been harassing our communications, and made an ineffective night attack on the detached force at Ali Musjid. These movements are simply those of marauders. The Pall Mall Gazette justly observes that the officers in command are too well versed in frontier work not to effect a speedy clearance of the plundering mountaineers, and we may expect to hear shortly that the road from Jumrood to Dakha is as safe as that from Peshawur to Rawul Pindi. The Russian papers state that the Ameer is concentrating his troops near Cabul, which has been strongly fortified. The subjoined telegrams from the Viceroy continue the record of the operations of each force since our last issue:—

"FROM VICEROY, DATED NOV. 24.

"More detailed report from Cavagnari states 22 guns and most of Ameer's troops in Khyber captured. General and some officers believed to be among prisoners. Advance continues on Dakha."

"FROM VICEROY, NOV. 26.

"Cavagnari telegraphs Dakha occupied 23rd, without opposition. Mahomed Shah Khan Mohamed, chief of Lalpura, came in and paid respects. Supplies coming in from all parts. Head men of villages in Khurd Khyber have come in and offered services. Villages in Jellalabad district refuse to pay revenue to Mir Akhor since flight. He and General Ghulam Haidar escaped by Choor Pass. Khyberes plundered fugitives; only one regiment escaped intact. This telegram was delayed en route. No news from Kuram column. Biddulph's force has occupied Peshin without resistance. Inhabitants everywhere friendly. Jam of Lus Beyla has offered his army, of which a part has been accepted."

"FROM VICEROY, NOV. 27.

"First and part of Second Brigades reached Dakha 25th. Artillery delayed by difficult descent from Lundi Khana. Twelve regiments reported to have been sent from Cabul to Jellalabad before news of Khyber defeat had yet arrived; arrangements with Khyberes for permanent management of pass satisfactorily concluded. Roberts reaches Mahomed Azim's fort Kuram to-day. Biddulph and Sandeman in Pishin. People friendly. Supplies abundant. Reported that Ameer has recalled troops sent from Herat to Candahar in consequence of Persian movements on that frontier."

"FROM VICEROY, NOV. 28.

"Roberts reports Kuram fort occupied on 25th. Evacuated by enemy; one gun abandoned. Turi head men come in. People friendly. Will continue to advance to-day. Ameer's troops believed to have crossed Peiwar, retired to Hariab. Reinforcements from Khushi reported to have advanced across Shutargardan. No later news from Browne or Biddulph. Stewart's division crossing Cutchi. Stewart near Bgh."

No substantive addition is contributed by the most recent Reuter's telegrams, which are as follow:—

"LAHORE, NOV. 28.—The Maharaja Scindia has expressed a strong wish to come to Lahore to confer with Lord Lytton at the present juncture. It is believed the proposal will be accepted. The sick and wounded Afghans who were taken in the Kyber Pass will be dismissed to their homes upon their recovery. The prisoners of war at Peshawur number 300, mostly Ghilzais.

"ALLAHABAD, NOV. 28.—The Pioneer of this morning announces that the 1st and 2nd Brigades of the Thal column will form a junction to-day at the Kuram Fort, which has been evacuated by the enemy, who retire to Peiwar Kotal. The Afghans seemed inclined to make a stand there. It is rumoured that the Kuram Fort has been set on fire by the enemy.

"BOMBAY, NOV. 29.—The Times of India of this morning announces that General Roberts, with the 12th Bengal Cavalry, while reconnoitring yesterday, perceived the enemy near Peiwar Kotal. The Turis of the district promise to harass the enemy if an attack be made. The Afghans appear to carry away guns with them. They are expected to take up entrenched positions and make a stand. The British troops will advance to-morrow with provisions for six days."

THE reported abandonment of Kandahar by the Ameer may have been caused by the presence of typhus fever, which the Indian papers state to have been raging in the city, many houses having been deserted, and others only being tenanted by the dying or dead. The same journals say that the heavy autumn floods in Upper India have left behind them a deadly legacy of pestilence. From Delhi to the Khyber a worse enemy than the most sanguinary war is decimating the population. Walled fort and tented field, town and village, tell the same dismal tale of death and sickness. Ali Musjid, if accounts are true, is little better than a charnel-house. About Peshawur the ranks of the gathering forces are formed only to be broken up by the pestilence. In Jullundur, half the population is laid low; in Delhi city the deaths have reached a hundred a day, and a single half-battalion in the fort has a hundred sick from fever. We hear of regiments on the march with all their officers prostrated by the same disease, and the deadlock in the commissariat arrangements for the expedition has been largely caused by the state of the public health. Where life is spared, the energy and spirits of the people are sapped, and ready, willing work is scarcely to be obtained.

SIR THOMAS WADE, K.C.B., Her Majesty's Minister to Peking, who has left England for India, will proceed to Lahore, the Daily News understands, under special instructions from Lord Salisbury, in order to confer with Lord Lytton with respect to the attitude of Russia and China in relation to Kashgar.

IN connection with the above statement it is interesting to find that the Pioneer remarks that it will be strange if none of the English papers recommend an Anglo-Chinese alliance. There is plenty to go upon. The noise of a war between Russia and England may first be heard in Central Asia, or might be soon re-echoed there should the war break out in Europe; and in either case China is not far off. There is talk of the Czar's getting help from Persia; England might equally ally herself with the Chinese, who have already one or two quarrels to pick with the Russians. The Shen-pao, a Chinese journal, discusses the matter with considerable freedom. It blames Russia very severely for not giving up some of the fugitives from Kashgar, and for holding on to the province of Ili. Then, too, there are constant encroachments in Manchuria, whilst several statesmen in China look with great distrust on the establishment of Russian power in Khokan, and on the extension of Russian influence, mercantile and political, in Chinese Turkestan. Russia, says the Shen-pao, "is now retaining possession of Chinese criminals, and occupying Chinese territory to which she has no possible right."

THE Bombay papers announce the arrival of Mr. James Caird, C.B., whose appointment as a member of the Famine Commission seems to have given great satisfaction in India. The able agriculturist was to meet some of his colleagues at Cawnpore on the 12th inst. to commence a short tour. In order to obtain full information, Mr. Caird will visit and inspect certain typical villages, illustrating the varying conditions of agriculture in India, such as canal and well irrigation and dry cultivation in different kinds of soils, the tenure, and, in fact, the whole agricultural system.

A SINGULAR item of intelligence comes from Futtighur, which states that the judge of the district, Mr. Saunders, has been personally assaulted by his subordinate Hindu judge.

THE Civil and Military Gazette states that it has received official intimation that the opening of the Indus Valley State Railway on Oct. 1, from Sukkur to Radhan, was followed on the 8th by the opening of the other end of the line from Kotri to Laki, a distance of seventy-five miles. The remaining portion of the line between Laki and Radhan was to be opened on the 27th, on and after which date the Indus Valley State Railway was to be open for passenger and goods traffic between Mooltan and Kotri. We thus get, commencing from the 27th, communication by railway from Lahore to Karachi, the only break in the line being between Rohri and Sukkur, where the River Indus intervenes, and over which, at some time not yet known, a bridge of one great span of 658 feet will be thrown. At present the Indus is crossed by means of a steamer hired, or, we believe, purchased for the purpose, which is employed in carrying passengers and goods across the river; and this is done without much loss of time. The mails should be conveyed, now that the line is open throughout, in about three days from Karachi to Lahore; but our English letters will still come by way of Bombay, we presume, for the recent postal arrangement with the British India Steam Navigation Company, for their steamers to meet the Peninsular and Oriental steamers at Aden once a fortnight, is confined to the Karachi and Sind mails, and does not include any other; indeed until the direct communication between Karachi and Aden is made once a week, we could depend on the Bombay route with greater reliance than on any other. Nothing is mentioned officially about the rolling-stock of the Indus Valley State Railway; but for present purposes borrowing from other lines must be resorted to. The recent breaks on the line have been repaired by means of diversions without much loss of time, and we may indulge in a hope that the future of the Indus Valley State Railway will be prosperous, but there are many difficulties yet to be overcome.

THERE exists in England, and perhaps in India too, some diversity in the manner of spelling and pronouncing the name of the capital of Afghanistan. The accent should be placed on the first syllable, and the word pronounced "Kawbul," or, according to the Romanised system patronised by the Government of India, Kabul; according to the same system, the names of the other chief towns of Afghanistan would be written Kandahar, Ghazni, Harat, Jalalabad. The name of the Ameer Sher Ali means "the Lion of Ali," Sher in Persian signifying a lion, though the natives of India, where the lion is scarce and little known, always apply the word to the tiger, just as they misapply the Persian for nightingale, Bulbul to a common Indian bird, and the Persian for plum, Alu, to a potato. The Persians pronounce the name Shere, the Afghans and Indians pronounce the e broad, as Share. The Persian language has hitherto been the court and official language in Afghanistan. It is also generally spoken by the inhabitants of the cities in Afghanistan, the use of the vernacular Pashtu being confined to the clans and the countrymen. It is said that the present Ameer encourages the use of Pashtu to the prejudice of Persian, hoping, no doubt, to strengthen the national sentiment of the Afghans by rendering them independent of the necessity for using a foreign language; and the words of command in the Afghan army are now given in Pashtu. The Ameer's name of the "Lion of Ali" may have been given to him by his father to attach to him the Kizilbash (red heads), or Persian Turks, who are the descendants of the Persian garrisons who once held the country, and who form a powerful colony in Cabul. Being of different race and hostile creed to the Afghans, they always look favourably on the cause of an invader, and in the British occupation of 1838-42 they were generally friendly to us, and on more than one occasion fought under our banners.

IN discussing the rival schemes for the western coast railway, one of which proposes as its terminus the Portuguese port of Marmagao, and the other Carwar, the Bombay Gazette ridicules the idea of any possible diversion of trade from Bombay. The advantages of the selection of the Bellary and Marmagao scheme are the dense population, estimated at 330 to the square mile, of the Goa districts through which the line will pass, the supply of salt from the Goa works (the produce of which averages 30,000 tons a-year) for return traffic, and, finally, the unquestionable superiority of the harbour of Marmagao over that of Carwar, as shown in the report of Captain Taylor. The objection that the inland trade will be at the mercy of the Portuguese customs authorities is disposed of by the statement that the promoters are prepared to make Marmagao to all intents a British port, and this in effect has been already secured by a stipulation in the concession that all goods intended for British use shall pass free. It is believed that the Government also has made special arrangements regarding the salt produced in Goa which are likely to benefit the Indian Treasury.

A PARAGRAPH in the report of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce for 1877-78 will, the Gazette hopes, attract the attention of the Government of India. The committee of the Chamber refer to the "numerous complaints which have been made to them of the increasing and irritating obstructions to trade which are being experienced by the mercantile community from the manner in which the work of the custom-house is conducted." It appears that an illiberal and antagonistic spirit, and an unwillingness to exercise any discretionary power in order to facilitate the transaction of business, characterise the present management of the Custom-house at the port of Bombay; and the merchants attribute the annoyances to which they are exposed, and which are certainly inconsistent with the frequently expressed intentions of the Government of India, to the numerous changes that have occurred in the office of the Commissioner of Customs, the result of which has been to leave the real superintendence of the department in the hands of men of little experience.

THE proposed "Provident" and "Widows and Orphans" Fund of the upper subordinates of the Public Works Department is likely to be successful. Five hundred supporters have been secured in Bengal alone, and the list of voters is steadily increasing. The advantages are not confined to the married officers alone. There is a conjoint proposal to organise a system of retiring bonuses (similar to that ruling in the higher grades of the army and civil service), which should be attractive enough to fetch the bachelor element, besides finding many advocates in a department which is railing against slow promotion. According to the prospectus a 1st grade sub-engineer is called upon to pay a monthly subscription of Rs. 14, or Rs. 168 annually, and, supposing that at the age of thirty he required twenty-four years to complete his period of departmental service, his total subscription to the fund on his superannuation would amount to Rs. 4,032, exclusive of interest, and he would be allotted a retiring bonus of Rs. 10,000. To induce retirements the fund will undertake to provide a minimum of six yearly bonuses, thus:—Two deputy assistant commissaries at Rs. 10,000, three sub-engineers at Rs. 10,000, and one supervisor at Rs. 6,500; total, Rs. 56,000. This would leave a balance of about Rs. 26,000 from the total annual subscriptions to the fund, which will aggregate Rs. 83,000, which will be set aside to meet casualties.

THE Lahore paper says that "the alterations in the mail days at the beginning and the close of the monsoon seem to have become somewhat useless. The object in making these alterations was to allow the steamers time to contend against the monsoon wind in crossing from Bombay to Aden, three additional days being allowed for the purpose. Improved navigation, or perhaps the employment of steamers of greater power, has obviated in a great measure the necessity for allowing these three extra days; and the early arrivals in London of the mails during the monsoon proves that they could be delivered in London at the usual time as well during the monsoon as during the rest of the year, the delays being occasional only. The gain to residents in India would be considerable, inasmuch as mail day would be on the same day of the week throughout the year, whereas now in the beginning of the monsoon there are two mails within four days of each other, and an interval of ten days at the close of the monsoon. Any improvement in the working of the mail steamers that could be made should be introduced, and the time seems to have come for abolishing the old-fashioned arrangements regarding the monsoon mail days."

THE total strength of the police force in the North West Provinces and Oudh during 1877 was 32,696, which was maintained at a cost of Rs. 42,71,488. The number of cognisable offences was 233,812, showing a considerable increase, said to be due in a great measure to the failure of the rains and the consequent almost famine prices of food. The report of crime in Oudh was far in excess of the North West Provinces. There were 215 cases of kidnapping, which were mostly committed for the purpose of selling girls in marriage.

THE revival of the Bombay salt trade appears, from the returns of the Salt and Continental Customs Department for the past year, to have been very marked, and is welcome as a sign of the reviving prosperity of the cultivation. The revenue collected amounted to Rs. 1,22,13,941-8-5, which is almost eighteen lakhs more than in the previous year. The average annual amount of the collections for the five years ending 1876-77 was Rs. 94,55,798-2-3, which has been exceeded during the past year by no less than Rs. 27,58,143-6-2. The excise duty on salt for home and inland consumption is more than last year by Rs. 8,42,793-1-8; and exports to Calcutta and British Malabar are Rs. 4,98,545 and Rs. 3,86,530 respectively also in excess. It is noticeable that the increase in the amount of duty collected on salt exported to Calcutta and Madras is rather more than 87 per cent. greater than last year. This, it is stated, is owing to the enhancement of the duty on salt from Rs. 1-13-0 to Rs. 2-8-0 per Indian maund, effected last Christmas, which is certainly not a pleasant feature, and also the larger demand for salt in Calcutta and Madras, in consequence of smaller shipments in the year previous, and the lowness of freights and cheapness of salt, which was procurable at a fraction more than 14 pies per maund. The quantity of salt exported to Madras, which may be taken as the centre of the late famine, was more than in the previous year by 1,22,000 maunds, which is an increase of about 53 per cent. The gross expenditure was Rs. 1,28,281 more than in 1876-77, but the percentage of charges on receipts contrasts favourably—viz., Rs. 8-3-10 as compared with Rs. 8-8-11 in the previous year.

IN the Madras lunatic asylum 150 patients were admitted during 1877-78, among which were seventy-six cases of acute mania. The tendency to insanity is said to be most distinctly marked in the third and fourth decennia of life, less marked between the ages of forty and sixty, still less marked under twenty, and reaches its minimum as old age advances. A few cases were traceable to blows on the head, to falls, or to sunstroke; and regarding intemperance the Surgeon General, I.M.D., says: "As drinking habits become more general in India—and I fear that this is what we must expect as regards this Presidency—intemperance will gradually assume a more important position than it does at present among the physical causes of insanity."

THE Government resolution on the report of the Forest Administration in Bengal for 1877-78 gives a favourable account of the work done and the results obtained under the management of Dr. Schlick. Forty square miles of forest were added to the Government reserves during the year, bringing the total area up to 3,430 square miles. It is in contemplation, however, to take up an extensive tract in the Chittagong Hills, and to increase the area considerably in Darjeeling and Julpigoree; while, on the other hand, the forests in the Damin-i-Koh have been made over to the care of the local officers. At the close of 1878-79 it is expected that there will be 4,406 square miles of forest under the Bengal Government, of which 823 square miles lie in the Lower Himalayas and the adjoining Terai and Dooars, and the rest in Chittagong, the Soonderbunds, Chota Nagpore, and Shahabad. The open Soonderbund forests, which are Government waste, are also to be declared a protected forest, and to be managed by the Forest Department. 111 acres were added to the plantations, making the total area 524 acres. The chief plantations are those of oak, chestnut, magnolia, and walnut (144 acres) in Darjeeling; of teak, toon, sal, and sissu (406 acres) at Bamunpokri (in Kurseong), and Sitapahar (in Chittagong); and of sal (36 acres) in Buxa. Systematic planting for the maintenance of the firewood supply of Darjeeling will now be undertaken. "The revenue has been nearly doubled during the year under review, and the cash surplus has risen from Rs. 10,712 to Rs. 1,71,251. The value of stock on hand has fallen by Rs. 14,913; hence the value of the year's transactions amounts to Rs. 1,56,338, as compared with Rs. 87,468 in 1876-77, so that a great improvement has taken place in every respect. The conservator feels confident that the surplus in future years will be still greater, and that the Government forest estates in Bengal may now be said to have become a source of permanent and increasing returns to the State."

THE care bestowed upon the welfare of the European soldier in India has, according to the Madras Times, been extended to relieving him of possible conjugal difficulties, for it has pleased the "Viceroy and Governor General in Council to authorise commanding officers of European corps, at their discretion, to defray out of public funds the amount of court fees which a non-commissioned officer or soldier of her Majesty's forces serving in India may have to pay on judicial proceedings (instituted by the permission of the commanding officers) for securing a legal separation or divorce from his wife under the Indian Divorce Act IV. of 1869." But even this is not all, for the Viceroy has further decreed that, "when legal assistance may be deemed necessary, application should be made to Government in view to the services of the Government advocate being made available."

which are the lowest recorded since 1871, show a substantial decrease. At no time since 1871 was the strength of 60,000 exceeded, though in March, 1872, owing to the fresh arrival of troops ere the departures of others for England, the returns gave 60,163. During 1870-74, 10,041 invalids were sent home; of these one-half were considered fit for further service; and in the past five years about 5,000 men elected to remain in the country on their regiments leaving India. Cases of drunkenness in the Bengal army, taken on an average, number about one-third of its total strength; in Madras and Bombay, a little more than half. The admissions into hospitals and the daily sick-rates were largely contributed to by venereal diseases, in some form of which a fifth part of the whole army is annually affected. In five years, from 1871 to 1875, the admission-rate was equal to that of the whole army in India. For the last four years, deaths from climatic diseases have varied by only 1 per 1,000, and the ratio has been for some time past as small as anybody could have wished, while the ratio for 1876 is smaller than ever. Thus it is plain that sickness and mortality were being successfully contended with; and though epidemic seasons will undoubtedly recur at certain intervals, Dr. Bryden, the statistical officer attached to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, expresses a belief that the experience acquired on former occasions will now serve to reduce as much as possible the influence of an epidemic of fever or even of cholera. In six years 5,158 men died from various causes, including cholera; and in no month of the time mentioned did the daily sick-rate reach 7 per cent. Deaths from fevers, dysentery, and hepatitis occur mostly in September; they double in June from heat apoplexy; while the whole makes up an annual loss of 14.75 per 1,000. Madras gives the highest death-rate and daily sick-rate; but cases of intermittent fever are seven times in the army of Bengal and eight times in the army of Bombay more numerous than in the army of the former. One-half of the men composing the army of India have spent four seasons or less in the country; one-fifth of them serve over seven years, and four-fifths are removed within the latter period. During 1871-75, taking an average strength of 58,000, 31,650 were new soldiers, and out of every hundred men only fourteen were aged thirty-five and upwards. Thus it appears that a large portion of the army continues efficient for service in India up to the age of thirty-five; and, as Dr. Bryden shows, that since 50 per cent. of all invaliding takes place below thirty, the chances are that a man will not remain an efficient soldier up to thirty-four. Puna, Bellary, and Bangalore show lower death rates than any stations of Bengal, excepting Umballa in 1877. Out of forty-two regiments whose tour of Indian service had extended from eight to fourteen years, only 3,554 soldiers returned to England; and these were the survivors of twenty-three regiments; the rest having died, purchased their discharge, volunteered into other regiments, or removed otherwise. From 1860 to 1876 the women and children of the army of Bengal have been steadily on the increase. Three-fourths of the mortality of the native army in Bengal are made up of dysentery, fever, and pneumonia; while 60 per cent. of the two former occur between November and April; and 80 per cent. of all deaths from respiratory diseases are shown during the same period. 70 per cent. of all fever deaths occur from May to October in the European army, and 30 per cent. from November to April; and in the native army they are 60 per cent. in the cold months, and 40 in the hot months of the year. On comparing the statements of both for the ten years 1867 to 1876, the fever deaths of the latter show a slight increase over those of the former. The medical authority before cited asserts that the admission-rate and death-rate of the native army much exceed the average for the European army as a body. At the beginning of the hot weather 6,000 men of the native army are yearly sent to their homes, either on furlough or sick leave. In the ratio for cholera and violent deaths the excess against the European is at least 4 per 1,000; phthisis takes the highest place in the mortality of the Goorkha, while both he and the European are equally liable to cholera, and are attacked in an equal ratio. Owing to constant fluctuations in the native army of Bengal, within ten years, from 1867 to 1876, it was entirely renovated, for 58,000 men had in that time either died, been invalided, or had taken their discharge. The inference, therefore, to be drawn is that the native army—not unlike that of the European—is a young one; a large number of recruits are yearly drafted into the various corps; though those on the Bengal side, as shown in the statistics, have fallen off during the last few years.

THE AFGHANISTAN PAPERS.

THE important Blue Book which has been for several months in preparation on Central Asian and Afghan affairs has just been issued by the India Office. The Blue Book commences by giving the text of our treaties with the Barucksye Ameer, and the correspondence goes back to the death of Dost Mahomed fifteen years ago, and when, after capturing Herat from Ahmed Ali Barucksye, he died, full of honour and of years, within the walls of that famed fortress, he left his dominions to his younger son, Shere Ali. Dost Mahomed died on the 9th of June, and on the 12th of the same month Shere Ali notified the event by letter to the Viceroy, who was at the time the Earl of Elgin. The letter goes on to say—

“In accordance with the wishes of my father to give intimation to your Excellency of everything, whether trifling or important, I beg to apprise you that as long as I live I will, please God, follow the laudable example of my father in maintaining the strong ties of friendship and amity subsisting between the British and this State.”

Unaccountable delays ensued, and Shere Ali was not formally recognised until December 23, 1863, immediately after which he was engaged in hostilities with his brothers. That contest closed in 1866, with the defeat of Shere Ali at Khelat-i-Ghilzie. Lord Lawrence recognised Afzul Khan as Ameer in February, 1867; and his policy of neutrality between the brothers who were disputing the succession is still more clearly set forth in the words of his letter “to his Highness Ameer Mahomed Afzul Khan, Walee of Cabul and Candahar,” dated Fort William, February 25, 1867, acknowledging the letter announcing the capture of Candahar:—

“My friend! the British Government has hitherto maintained a strict neutrality between the contending parties in Afghanistan. Rumours, I am told, have reached the Cabul Durbar of assistance having been granted by me to Ameer Shere Ali Khan. I take this opportunity to request your Highness not to believe such idle tales. Neither men, nor arms, nor money, nor assistance of any kind have ever been supplied by my Government to Ameer Shere Ali Khan.

“My friend! as I told your Highness in my former letter, the relations of the British Government are with the actual rulers of Afghanistan. Therefore, so long as Ameer Shere Ali Khan holds Herat and maintains friendship with the British Government, I shall recognise him as ruler of Herat and shall reciprocate his amity.

“But upon the same principle I am prepared to recognise your Highness as Ameer of Cabul and Candahar, and I frankly offer your Highness, in that capacity, peace and the goodwill of the British Government.”

The policy of Lord Northbrook in 1873, also the action of the then Government, is proved to have been accurately described in Lord Cranbrook's recent despatch. The discussion commenced with the following telegrams:—

“Telegram from Viceroy to Secretary of State.—Simla, dated July 24, 1873.—Ameer of Cabul alarmed at Russian progress, dissatisfied with general assurance, and anxious to know definitely how far he may rely on our help if invaded. I propose assuring him that if he unreservedly accepts and acts on our advice in all external relations, we will help him with money, arms, and troops, if necessary, to expel unprovoked invasion. We to be the judge of the necessity. Answer by telegraph quickly.”

“Telegram from Secretary of State to the Viceroy.—India Office, dated 26th of July, 1873.—Cabinet thinks you should inform Ameer that we do not at all share his alarm, and consider there is no cause for it; but you may assure him we shall maintain our settled policy in favour of Afghanistan if he abides by our advice in external affairs.”

In a remarkable conversation with the British Vakeel at Cabul, the Ameer, after urging his apprehension of the approaching pressure of Russia, and his expectation that “the Russians would soon make communications for exercising some influence in his kingdom,” concluded by saying:—

“The British Government should take my views and reflections into most careful consideration, and be kind enough to sympathise with Afghanistan, otherwise I have not at all received any peace of mind whereon I can place perfect reliance and remain quiet or free from anxiety. Should the British Government intentionally overlook this matter with a view to temporising for a few days, it is their own affair; but I will represent my circumstances in a clear form in detail without time-serving hesitation.”

The conditional, but as it has proved unsatisfactory, promise of aid, which alone Lord Northbrook was permitted to offer in reply to the appeal, is summed up in the following:—

“The Russian Government had given positive and repeated assurances to the effect that they considered Afghanistan ‘completely outside the sphere within which Russia may be called upon to exercise her influence,’ and had stated that ‘no intervention or interference whatever, opposed to the independence of that State, enters into its intentions.’ These assurances, however, left the boundaries of the Ameer's possessions undefined, and so long as they remained so there was the possibility of differences as to the precise territories to which the assurances applied. Russia had now accepted the definition of the northern and western boundaries proposed by the British Government, who became thus a party to the settlement, and interested in maintaining the integrity of the frontier. The British Government would be prepared to use their best endeavours to maintain the frontier intact so long as the Ameer or the Ruler of Afghanistan follows their advice as regards his external relations, and abstains from encroachments and aggression on his neighbours. If, for example, troubles should arise, and the boundary in question were violated by neighbouring countries, or by any tribes under Russian influence, the natural course would be for the Ameer to refer to the British Government, and every effort would be made by that Government to bring about a satisfactory settlement. If, in the event of any aggression from without, British influence were invoked and failed by negotiation to effect a satisfactory settlement, it was probable that the British Government would, in that case, afford the Ruler of Afghanistan material assistance in repelling an invader. Such assistance would, of course, be conditional on the Ameer following the advice of the British Government, and having himself abstained from aggression."

The following is a summary of the chief points of the abortive Peshawur Conference. The Ameer's Minister reached Peshawur on Jan. 27, and Sir Lewis Pelly proceeded thither. The Afghan Envoy produced a statement of the Ameer's grievances against the British Government:—

"It assumes, as a matter of course, that the British Government is already bound in honour, and by written contract, to afford to the Ameer and his dynasty unconditional military support, both at home and abroad, whenever called upon to do so by his Highness. On this assumption it naturally questions the advantages to the Ameer of any treaty of alliance which, on our part, would merely reaffirm liabilities already contracted by us towards his Highness; while on his part it would involve the definition and acceptance of liabilities altogether novel towards ourselves. Furthermore, it refers indirectly to the Ameer's relations with Russia in terms which seem to imply an impression on the part of his Highness that the claim of the Russian Government upon his consideration is practically much the same as that of the British.

"In acknowledging the receipt of the Afghan Envoy's statement, the Viceroy instructed Sir Lewis Pelly to point out to the Envoy that the alleged grievances, over which the Ameer appeared to have been resentfully brooding for some years in unbroken silence, were mostly the result of mutual misunderstandings which could not possibly have occurred had the two Governments possessed the ordinary means of diplomatic intercourse with each other. With this remark Sir Lewis Pelly proceeded to correct the Ameer's interpretation of our existing engagements with his Highness, and explain the thoroughly conditional character of them. He demanded from the Envoy an explanation of the reported hostility of the Ameer's language and conduct at a time when the representative of his Highness was still engaged in friendly and pacific negotiation with the British Government; and, finally, he required from his Excellency an immediate and decisive answer on the agency condition, which we had declared to be our only recognised basis of negotiation.

"The Envoy replied that the reports which had reached us of the Ameer's utterances and proceedings were, he trusted, much exaggerated. He feared, nevertheless, that since his own absence from the Cabul Durbar his Highness had fallen under mischievous influences, which he himself deplored and condemned; he would lose no time in addressing to the Ameer's strong remonstrances on this subject. With regard to the agency condition, he regretted to say that he was still without instructions, for which, however, he would again make special reference to Cabul. He was reminded, in reply, that the condition of our assent to negotiation with the Ameer had been distinctly explained to his Highness many months before he had decided, after deliberately considering it, to open the conference at Peshawur.

"The Afghan Envoy, who had long been suffering from a mortal disease, expired shortly after his receipt of this communication. His surviving colleague, the Mir Akhor, declared that he had no authority to answer any question from the British Government, and Sir Lewis Pelly was consequently instructed to close the conference on the ground that there was no basis for negotiation."

Lord Lytton in the same despatch encloses reports of conversations, showing that in 1869 the Ameer was not unwilling that British agents should reside "at places like Candahar, or Balkh, or Herat," and that "such an arrangement would be advantageous to both the Governments." As to Cabul, he added, "although I am myself agreeable to such an arrangement, the people of Cabul are turbulent and mischievous, and should such European agent be injured in any way, which God forbid, I would be disgraced." This statement is thus explained by Lord Northbrook (despatch June 7, 1875):—

"On the whole, however, we think that either the Ameer himself or his Minister, Noor Mahomed Shah, did, in confidential communications with Captain Grey, express a readiness to accept at some future time not far distant the presence of British agents at places in Afghanistan, excepting Cabul itself. But our impression is that the intimation was intended to be contingent either upon the receipt of far more substantial assistance than was promised the Ameer at the Umballa Conference, or upon the conclusion of a dynastic treaty—that is, upon obtaining the recognition, in a treaty with the British Government, of his son Abdoolah Jan as his successor. Such a formal recognition his Highness was anxious to secure, but Lord Mayo, for obvious reasons, declined to entertain the proposal."

Lord Salisbury (Oct. 4, 1877) expresses full approval of the proceedings of Lord Lytton, and his entire satisfaction with the manner in which the discussions with the Afghan Envoy were conducted by Sir L. Pelly.

SPRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

NATIVE LEVIES.

A GREAT deal has been made of the offers of various chiefs to supply troops for service on the frontier. We do not wish to be considered as throwing cold water on any manifestation of loyalty, but it occurs to us that the Government in this matter could not do better than be governed by the treaty engagements it has entered into. Let it first call up the troops it is entitled to summon to the field, and thereafter it may avail itself of the loyalty of those chiefs who are not under obligation to send in contingents. With a small but well-armed army, such as that at the disposal of the Government of India, it must ever be an object to send every available man to the front, and to avoid, as far as may be, the frittering away of the best fighting matériel in escort duty and in keeping open a long line of communications. What native levies can do, when well commanded, was proved by Outram and his Rheels, just as much as by Edwardes and Revnell Taylor in their gallant advance against Moolraj. In the hands of officers who not only know the frontier, but are themselves known to the frontier tribes, selected posts, garrisoned by such levies, would hold and keep open the line from the Indus to Quetta, or even Candahar, not only without difficulty, but with advantage. And their employment on such work would set free a valuable force of cavalry—a matter to which the general advancing on Candahar must be in an especial manner sensitive. A strong force of highly trained cavalry will more than double the power of the Candahar force to strike decisive blows. In Afghanistan cavalry can still charge in those masses, and with that effect, which recent wars have shown to be imprudent on a European battle-ground. Judiciously used, there is, in the coming campaign, if it does come, an ample field for the employment of horse; and, this being so, we should like to see every mounted man in his proper place; that is to say, with the force actually engaged in field operations. The place of the cavalry can well be taken by levies, and these might at once be called up from various native States. The cis-Sutlej States are most of them bound to furnish small contingents; whilst Article 6 of the Treaty of 1838 with Bhawalpore runs thus:—"The Nawab of Bhawalpore will furnish troops at the requisition of the British Government, according to his means." Although fully appreciating the Nawab's offer, we do not lose sight of the fact that we have here a decided treaty claim on him for a contingent, and such a force could not be employed more usefully than in maintaining our posts along the lines of communication. In the North the case is somewhat different. There, the Government has to face a possible coalition of tribes, like the Yusufzais, Mohmands, and Atridis, a coalition which, if it were ever formed, could put not far short of 100,000 men into the field. But, fortunately, these tribes are not likely to combine. They are mutually antipathetic, and there is no common ground, since the death of the Akhoond of Swat, on which they might take action. Dissensions and weakness in Swat are likely to keep the northern frontier of the Peshawur Valley tolerably peaceful. Still, it would not be wise to move forward and leave this matter out of consideration or unsettled. We therefore deem it proper to draw attention to Article 6 of the Treaty of 1846 with the Maharaja Gholab Singh:—"Maharaja Gholab Singh engages for himself and heirs to join with the whole of his military force the British troops when employed within the hills, or in the territories adjoining his possessions." This, again, is clear enough and distinct enough. The Government has the right to avail itself of the full military strength of Cashmere. Why should it not do so? The Dogra, Sikh, and Pathan soldiers at the disposal of the Durbar are as good raw material as any Government could wish; only to be of real service they must be led and guided by English officers. The Government need not go far out of its way, then, for a reserve. A brigade of Cashmere levies stationed at Hoti Murdan, and another at Abbottabad, would answer all purposes, and would still leave the Maharaja more than men enough to hold his ground towards Chilas and Gilgit. In fact, in case of disturbances in that direction, his Highness would have an advantage in the leadership of English officers. Into the general question it is not now our purpose to enter. That is less a military than a political matter. What we desire now to consider is the fact that the Government of India has reduced the army to a point which, in a manner, compels it to renew its military conventions with native States. While, therefore, we give the chiefs full credit for their loyalty and devotion, we do not lose sight of the claims which the Government has upon their forces by virtue of treaties, which, on its part, it has faithfully and even jealously observed.—Indian Daily News.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

The 13th inst. was fixed as the day on which the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West and Oudh intended to present, at the Kaiser Bagh, the picture of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, sent out to the talukdars to testify his appreciation of the reception they gave him when he went to Lucknow. The opportunity will be taken to present khillats as a recognition to those talukdars who have shown themselves good landlords and have done well by their ryots in the recent distress.

THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR N.W.P.—Sir George Courtenay projected tour through the Jhansi division has been abandoned. Some difficulties arose in connection with the escort. The Lieutenant Governor is entitled to a military escort, consisting of a squadron of cavalry and a company of infantry. But, in consequence of the subordination of all military arrangements at present to the organization of the forces on the frontier, it is said to have been found inconvenient to supply even this little handful of soldiers.

However the embarrassment arose, the Lieutenant Governor has decided, it appears, to stay at Lucknow for the present, and probably till the end of January. The secretary to Government and the under secretary are already with him, and the junior secretary, one of the assistant secretaries, and the bulk of the camp office will go to Lucknow in the course of a few days. One assistant secretary only will remain in charge of the head office at Allahabad.—Pioneer.

ILLUSTRATIONS AND REALITIES.—The London illustrated papers have come out, this mail, all over Afghan pictures. There are views of Ali Musjid and of the Khyber Pass both in the Graphic and the Illustrated London News. The rival pictures do not correspond, but they are not so unlike each other as all are unlike the places they represent. The Khyber Pass introduced to Londoners is something like the gorge at Pfeffers, in Switzerland—an awful ravine with granite mountains rising in sheer walls on each side, for many thousand feet below a chaos of rocks and boulders, a "strait path" in which a thousand might well be stopped by three, even more conveniently than at the Tiber Bridge. The three who are in waiting to stop the British army, group themselves, in the picture, on massive rocks in a manner which would secure their instant engagement as operatic brigands with a special view to performances of Fra Diavolo, if they would only offer themselves at Covent Garden. These grand effects are all nonsense. You can drive a cart all the way from Peshawur to Jellalabad. There are savage defiles in the Khoord Cabul Pass, between Jellalabad and Cabul, as also on the Kuram route before getting to Kushki, but the Khyber has a popular reputation that it does not deserve. Ali Musjid, moreover, is certainly a fort on a hill, but it is not, as the illustrated papers represent it, something resembling an Ehrenbreitstein on the top of Mont Blanc.—Pioneer.

HINDOO LADIES AT THE THEATRE.—Two or three unsuccessful attempts have been made to emancipate Hindoo ladies from the zenana, but, the time being inopportune, these endeavours have failed. Only the other day a Hindoo gentleman accompanied a respectable lady to the Corinthian Theatre; the lady was evidently educated, and education in this instance gave her a fondness for the drama. She had scarcely taken her seat, when the Europeans vied with each other in raising their binoculars to their eyes, and literally exceeding all bounds of propriety and etiquette; they stared at her, they whispered, and even tittered, till the unfortunate couple could stand it no longer, and retired before the first act of the play had terminated. So much for English gallantry; the folly of native ladies being seen at a theatre in the present year of grace is due to education, and as the time has not yet arrived for this outburst of reform we would earnestly advise our friends to be a little more discreet and have patience. Emancipation must follow education, but there is a difference in public and private education in the zenana and in a large scholastic institution.—National Paper.

A LAHORE HOTEL.—This is almost too good to be true, but the Pioneer is responsible for it:—"A printed table of charges hung up in a hotel at Lahore has been forwarded to us by a delighted traveller. There are little peculiarities in its style beyond the special feature which has enchanted our correspondent. Thus, the 'lodger' is informed that he is 'in no way authorised to threaten or to abuse the hotel servants,' and also that 'spitting on carpets must be avoided;' but the real attractions of the establishment come to a focus in the list of meals attainable. We read:—'Tiffin hot, Rs. 1 2a.; dinner, Rs. 2; supper grilled after dinner, Rs. 1; young baby grilled with onion, 8a.' Is there another hotel in India where people who are fond of children could be thus regaled?"—Indian Daily News.

VERNACULAR LITERATURE.—To judge by the number of books, pamphlets, and periodicals published in Bengal during the third quarter of the current year—no less than 496—the Act for the better control of Oriental literature has not had that effect in suppressing vernacular literature which its opponents predicted.—Englishman.

PRIZES FOR HORSE SHOWS.—We learn that the Indian Government have sanctioned the grant of a sum of Rs. 16,500 for distribution in prizes at the several metropolitan horse fairs and district horse shows in the North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, and Rajputana during the official year 1878-79.—Indian Daily News.

A RED CROSS SOCIETY.—We learn that a German lady at Lahore, connected with the American mission at that station, is organising a Red Cross Society to accompany the Afghanistan expedition.—Times of India.

REGISTRATION.—The past year, 1877-78, has been one of unexampled prosperity for the registration department in Bengal, for the total registrations, compulsory and optional, numbered 550,269, while the receipts rose to 664,236.—Times of India.

RAILWAY TO KOHAT.—Capt. T. Gracey, R.E., has been appointed to survey the country between Rawul Pindee and Kohat, and report upon the practicability of a railway line towards the Koorum Valley instead of the one previously determined upon to Peshawur via Attock. Mr. Molesworth, consulting engineer to the Government of India, will inspect the country with the same object about the middle of this month.—Times of India.

CHOLERA IN NAINI TAL GIRLS' SCHOOL.—A serious outbreak of cholera has occurred at the Diocesan Girls' School, Naini Tal. On Thursday, the 31st, one pupil died, and on the following day five other cases were reported, of which two ended fatally. As no cause could be assigned for the appearance of the disease the pupils, to the number of between thirty and forty, were taken to the opposite end of the station and lodged in houses about 300 yards from the boys' school at Longview. On the 2nd instant another death took place, but after midday no further cases were reported. Eight or nine patients were still under treatment on the 4th, of whom three were said to be in a dangerous state. The school authorities, after the first deaths, sent a telegram to the parents of the scholars asking them to remove their children, and this advice has been at once acted upon in most cases. The boys' school escaped scot free. The military medical authorities, it appears, objected very strongly to the removal of the children to the east end of the station, as likely to endanger the health of the Depot, and the matter has been referred to Government.—Pioneer.

ADMINISTRATION OF REWA.—The native members of the Rewa community have presented an address to Col. P. W. Bannerman, political agent, Baghalkhand, and chief administrator of Rewa, as a token of gratitude for the good he has effected. Special reference is made to the Sutna and Belapucca-road, which has been bridged and connected with the Great Deccan-road, thus opening a most safe and convenient means of communication between Rewa and Sutna. "This not only affords the means of travelling in comfort to the public in general, but also effects a great improvement in the traffic of the country. Any one who might have seen the Sutna Bazaar prior to 1871 can now mark the vast change for the better which has taken place since then. The population during this interval has nearly doubled." Col. Bannerman is also thanked for the reforms he has carried out in the administration of the State, which is now enjoying unwonted prosperity.—Pioneer.

PRESENTATION TO 44TH REGIMENT.—A large and beautiful silver epergne has, we hear, just been presented by the planters of Upper Assam to Colonel Nuthall, C.B., and the officers of the 44th Regiment, S.L.I., in memory of their pleasant sojourn at Dibrugarh. The regiment left Upper Assam for Shillong last year.—Pioneer.

ARRESTS AT MANDALAY.—Our Thyetmyo correspondent telegraphed on Nov. 4:—"The former Viceroy of Pegu, who is the uncle of the Princes at the British Residency, was arrested on Tuesday, Oct. 29, along with some other ex-officials and military officers. Depositions were taken under torture, and the prisoner confessed to a conspiracy on behalf of the Wyoungyan Prince, but without his sanction. The torture confessions imply cognisance by a younger brother. Wyoungyan's popularity constitutes a danger for the new Government and for himself. Numbers of officers and soldiers of various regiments were involved in the conspiracy. Negotiations were progressing well for the retirement of Wyoungyan to British territory. This desirable solution still probable. There has been a serious dacoity in the suburb of the capital."—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

GARRISON GRIEVANCES.—A Madras correspondent writes that there are two points concerning which military men are just now talking a good deal. The one, municipal taxation; the other, the numerous guards furnished by the regiments here, the duties of which should be carried out by the civil power. Touching the first, one of the local journals has recently spoken out for the soldiers. In a leading article we have been informed that "early in the present month a number of officers were summoned to appear before the town magistrate—to show cause why they had not duly caused their names to be registered in the office of the Municipal Commissioners and taken out a certificate of such registration." In other words, a colonel commanding a regiment (amongst other officers) was hauled into a police-court because he had not taken out a license for the prerogative of commanding his battalion! This, of course, refers to that unheard-of assessment for military men called profession tax, which has always been a thorn in the sides of officers serving at Madras. The impost has been swept away by Act 5 of 1873, coming into force next year, but in the meantime the soldiers are pillaged. Instead of "profession tax," however, a new penalty, entitled salary tax, is to be instituted; this is described in the article I have quoted as a net with subtlety spread to catch the military fish, both great and small, who have burst through the meshes of the municipal trawler in the matter of their exemption from profession tax. All officers serving at Madras have, with the exception of those doing purely regimental duty, to pay a tax for their chargers and office carriages. Where in the world—save and except in this strange city—could such an assessment be imposed? "A duty might just as well be levied upon the sword as a man wears or the saddle in which he rides," says the defender of military rights; "an officer's charger is as essential a part of his equipment as his helmet, his tunic, or his boots." In these hard times presidency expenses are heavy enough for army men to bear without taxation. Incomes under a certain sum ought certainly to be taxed free, and in the case of "salary tax" the suggestion that "pay proper" should alone be assessed, as done in England, is surely one that should attract the attention of those who rule with sympathy the impoverished centurions on duty at Madras. The reduction of the heavy sentry work devolving on the garrison of Madras is a matter which should be carefully considered. There can be no doubt that by a judicious employment of the police for certain guards the strain now felt by regiments here would be greatly relaxed. When a corps has a company at Pallaveram going through its musketry course, guard duty falls with undue severity on the men at headquarters. This matter should be carefully inquired into.—Pioneer.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—A Madras contemporary says:—"We learn that the general committee of the Famine Relief Fund will shortly hold a meeting to decide how the balance of the famine fund is to be disposed of. There are sure to be plenty of applications for funds, and the committee will require to exercise all their discretion to ensure that the money may be distributed, as far as possible, in accordance with the wishes of the generous donors in England and elsewhere. It is worth consideration whether a portion of the money should not be invested, with the view of forming a permanent fund for meeting distress caused by future famines. A small portion of the fund raised in Madras for the relief of the Bengal famine in 1874 was invested in this way, and was useful in forming the nucleus of the famine fund of last year."

COLLECTION OF REVENUE ARREARS.—A correspondent has asked the Madras Times to draw attention to what he describes as the terribly harsh manner in which the arrears of taxes for the famine year are being collected. The writer dates his letter from one of the southern districts, and says the revenue officials there are not only putting up to auction the puttah lands of cultivators, but also the houses in which they live are sold over their heads. He continues:—"This course of proceeding is tending to undo much of the good feeling towards Government and the English people produced by the relief latterly rendered, and it is, in my opinion, a most shameful thing. It would have been far better for the people if the officials had collected the kist in the famine year. The ryots might then have managed, by the help they were receiving, and by selling some property which still remained to them, to have paid the tax. . . . I have just this moment received a letter from — saying that twenty houses of the Mahomedans and others in his village had been put to auction, and that the houses of several others were to be offered for sale to-day."

MADRAS ARMY.—It is stated that the following Madras regiments have been ordered for frontier service:—The 67th Foot, Colonel Knowles, stationed at Bangalore; 14th Hussars, Colonel Arbuthnot, stationed at Bangalore; 1st Madras Light Cavalry, Colonel Hooper, stationed at Secunderabad; 30th Native Infantry, Colonel Georges, stationed at the French Rocks; 36th Native Infantry, Colonel Hawks, stationed at Bangalore.—Times of India.

THE TAMIL COOLY MISSION.—The present committee are resolved to maintain the mission in a state of thorough efficiency; and the Ceylon Church Missionary Gleaner hopes to be in a position to announce in its next issue that an experienced missionary, well acquainted with Tamil, and in whom complete confidence will be felt, has been appointed to it. This is to be regarded only as a pledge of further help to be given next year. Before its close four European missionaries will be engaged in the work of the mission, vigorously carrying on its operations wherever Tamil coolies labouring on coffee estates are to be found.—Times of India.

THE PRINCESS OF TANJORE.—The following notification is published in the Madras Gazette:—"His Grace the Governor having signified his intention of delivering to her Highness the Princess of Tanjore the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, to which Order her Highness has been appointed by her Majesty the Queen and Empress of India, it is hereby notified that the ceremonial will take place at 4.30 p.m. on Thursday, the 14th inst., in public durbar, in the palace at Tanjore. All officers, civil and military, of her Majesty's service, on duty at Tanjore, are directed to attend at the place at the hour named."

BOMBAY.

PILGRIMS TO MECCA.—The Government of India are sending Assistant Surgeon Abdul Razzak on deputation for the special duty of reporting on the sanitary incidents and the arrangements connected with pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina.—Bombay Gazette.

AN ENGLISH NEWSPAPER IN SURAT.—In view of the provisions of the Vernacular Press Act, which fetter the free expression of opinion in the Vernacular language, an English newspaper under the title of the Weekly Reporter is to be started in Surat from January 1 next.—Bombay Gazette.

THE KHUNDWA MAHOMEDANS.—We are informed on good authority that the stones from the old masjid at Khundwa, the disposal of which was the occasion of the murder of Captain Pemberton, are about to be given over to the Mahomedan community of Khundwa out of regard to their religious scruples. This will be a questionable act, for it will appear to the badly disposed class that the object for which the murder was perpetrated has been attained; and it will be a practical admission that the first orders issued on the subject were unwise and impolitic.—Bombay Gazette.

FEMALE VOTERS.—At the recent elections for the Bombay Municipality Corporation a remarkable feature in the polling at one of the wards was that more than a dozen of the electors who came to vote were Hindoo and Parsee ladies.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—MUSCAT, OCT. 18.—We have news from Eb Hassa that the Arabs have revolted against the authority of the Turks and have leagued to drive the latter out. Some Turkish men-of-war with troops from Bussorah and Bagdad, it is reported, have been despatched by the Turkish authorities to the assistance of the small local militia in Eb Hassa. Eb Hassa is situated on the mainland opposite the island of Bahrein, and has been a bone of contention between the Arabs and Turks the past few years. Whenever the Turks found themselves sufficiently strong they occupied it, and this their superior arms and discipline always enabled them to do without serious opposition. The Arabs, on the other hand, jealous of the usurpation by foreigners of what they have hitherto looked upon as their birthright, have as frequently sought opportunities to regain their independence. Eb Hassa was last seized by the Turks just before their troubles in Europe, and was drained of troops to meet the demand for men during the late war. Turkish aggression in Arabia has always been a source of uneasiness to the Arabs, and though Eb Hassa forms no part of H.H. the Sultan of Muscat's dominions, the anxiety with which the approaching struggle is looked forward to, and the undisguised sympathy everywhere expressed for the Arabs, show unmistakably that the feeling against the Turk is widespread. Rumours are everywhere prevalent that the quasi-independent chiefs whose territories border on the Persian Gulf are becoming troublesome, and Colonel Miles, H.B.M.'s political agent and consul at Muscat, who is one of the lieutenants of the British Resident in the Gulf, left Muscat in the B.I.S.N. Co.'s s.s. Kilwa on the 16th for Bushire, summoned, it is said, by his chief to a conference on Gulf politics. We have the full number of vessels belonging to the Gulf squadron now in the Persian Gulf waters, and it is rumoured the squadron will be further strengthened by the addition of another and larger vessel. The Vulture and Arab are in the Gulf; the Teazer is in Muscat harbour, but leaves immediately for the Gulf.—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

SURAT.—We are glad to be able to state, on the authority of a correspondent who writes from Surat, that "the general aspect of Surat seems to have been wholly changed. The feelings of the people have been calmed. The former horrible and awe-inspiring features of the license-tax have now lost all their horribleness and awfulness, and have assumed bright and glaring colours. The people are now actually required to pay, and yet all seem satisfied. What was to them before a rugged, rough, and impassable mountain, has now become to them a small and smooth molehill, which they could easily cross without submitting themselves to any great hardship and annoyance."—Times of India.

THE BISHOP'S TOUR.—The Bishop of Bombay is expected by the mail which leaves Southampton on Oct. 31. After staying a week at Aden he will arrive in Bombay about December 3. He will leave Bombay on tour at the end of December. The dates cannot with certainty be fixed at present, but they may be stated approximately as follows:—His lordship will leave Bombay by the steamer of December 30 for Maudvie and spend Sunday, January 5, at Bhoj. Returning to the coast, he will cross over to Juria, and proceed to Rajcote, remaining over Sunday, the 12th. Thence via Wudhwan and Ahmedabad, he goes to Deesa, where he may be expected on January 26. He hopes to be at Abou on February 2, Odeypur February 9, Neemuch February 16, and at Nusseerabad about March 2. His lordship's movements after Nusseerabad are uncertain; he will probably make a journey into the Bengal Presidency to meet the Bishop of Calcutta, and make arrangements for admitting the Central Provinces into the diocese of Bombay. The bishop will spend the hot weather at Mahabeshwur.—Bombay Church Chronicle.

DURBAR AT SURAT.—A durbar was held at Surat on November 3 to invest Meer Gholam Baba with the title of Khan Bahadur, which, in the words of the collector, "has been conferred on him by the Government as a token of their appreciation of his conduct as a loyal subject of the British raj."—Times of India.

ROBBERY BY A JEMADAR OF POLICE.—A correspondent from Hyderabad states that a jemadar of the Nizam's police has been apprehended on a charge of committing highway robbery. It is alleged that the prisoner stole several thousands of rupees from the person of a sowar while travelling from Hyderabad to Nandgaum.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

THE SEASON.—The Ceylon Times of October 29 says that "the north-eastern monsoon is now fairly set in, but, judging from the first symptoms of it, there is a probability of it proving as unreliable as the last. The weather continues of the most variable type, and is still very unfavourable for the preparation of produce. Rain falls heavily almost daily, and we fear there is still a bad time in store for the native cultivators. The distress amongst the paddy-growers of the Raiygam and some other korales in the Western Province is still very great. Government are prepared to give employment to such able-bodied men amongst them as are competent to turn out for work on the roads; but there are very many who, without being sick, are still too ill-conditioned to take advantage of the proffered aid." To help some of the worst cases of this class, as well as women and children, a relief fund has been opened in the office of the Ceylon Times, to aid which contributions are solicited.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint J. D. Mason, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests and joint police magistrate, Colombo, and coroner for the district of Colombo, with effect from the 22nd Oct. Mr. G. S. Williams will continue to act from the 22nd Oct. till further notice as district judge, commissioner of requests, and police magistrate, Tangalla, and coroner for the district of Tangalla, and superintendent of the jail at Tangalla, in addition to his own duties at Hambantota. His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint C. L. Ferdinands, Esq., to be visitor of the prisons at Welikada, Slave Island, The Breakwater, Mahara, Hultadorp, Negombo, Kalutara, Kegalla, Katnapura, Panadure, Avisawella. Major R. Barton, R.E., to be a visitor of the prison at Trincomalee. Hugh Arthur Grant, Esq., to be a justice of the peace for the district of Hambantota.

STATUE OF SIR W. GREGORY.—A photograph has been received in Ceylon of the statue of the late Governor, Sir William Gregory, which is to be erected in front of the Colombo Museum. A local paper states that the subscriptions promised by the Kandyan Chiefs have not been paid, and there seems every likelihood of the promoters of the scheme having to pay the guarantee in full. The statue is a good likeness, and will be a suitable memorial of a Governor who did good work for the colony.—Times of India.

FURLOUGH EXCHANGE.—AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

WE learn, says the Madras Times, that the following decision of the Secretary of State on that vexata questio, furlough exchange, has recently been received. It finally disposes of the question:—

"Several memorials have been addressed against the action of her Majesty's Government in modifying the terms of the furlough regulations issued in 1868, and thereafter applying the modified terms to those who had not elected the rules prior to 1871. The gist of these memorials lies in the following two pleas:—

"a. That the restriction of election of the rules of 1868 to the time of first taking furlough is injurious to those who did not take furlough until after the modification of the rules, and who, therefore, were unable to elect those rules at a sufficiently early date to secure the rates of exchange granted and continued to those who had elected them prior to the orders which altered the rate fixed to the varying rate of exchange.

"b. That the rate of exchange had always been for furlough pay and family remittances 2s. the rupee—that when it was higher the officers of the Indian service never got the benefit of it, and that, consequently, it is unfair that they should suffer when the rate falls below 2s. the rupee. In reply to the first plea, the Secretary of State has observed that he is unable to admit that it has any validity. To take any other view would be to accept as a principle that the Government shall never, in the public interest, annul or modify any regulation it has once seen occasion to make. While these regulations were in force, it may be conceded that their terms should be adhered to without subsequent modifications in the case of those officers who, in accordance with the prescribed conditions, had elected them, but the pretension of many of the memorialists that the Government which put forward the rates might not withdraw them in whole or part from the option of election, is wholly inadmissible, nor does the fact on which stress is laid, that some few officers will continue to receive the exceptional rate of furlough pay, have any legitimate bearing on the question.

"The second plea could only have been urged under the erroneous belief that an invariable rate of exchange of 2s. per rupee had always prevailed until modified. The contrary is, however, the case. It was only in 1868, in promulgating the new furlough rules, that a fixed rate of exchange for furlough pay was laid down; until then the market value had always ruled the exchange, and some even of the memorialists who employ the argument had actually received furlough pay or sent home family remittances at rates varying from 2s. 0½d. to 2s. 1½d. in 1858 and 1859. There is, therefore, no ground whatever for imputing any want of good faith to the Government in this matter. When the exchange was favourable, the officers of the Indian Army, from the earliest years to the latest date, got the benefit of it, and, however much it may be regretted that of late years the exchange has been unfavourable, there is no injustice or legitimate grievance in the fact that the latter unfavourable rate now governs the exchange of furlough pay, as the earlier favourable rate had previously done.

"The memorialists should therefore be informed that while it is regretted that the lessened value of the rupee should affect them so materially, it is impracticable to accede to their application and to grant them furlough pay and family remittances at the fixed exchange of 2s. the rupee. No officer, therefore, who elected the rules of 1868 subsequently to the abolition of the clause which gave a fixed rate of exchange at 2s. the rupee will be allowed the benefit of that clause, and this decision is final."

OFFICIAL.—The Government of India, in the Military Department, has issued, under date October 30, certain explanations in reference to the Royal Warrant of Sept. 6, which will be interesting to officers of the late Indian Engineers. The inquiries of the Punjab Government in the Public Works Department were as follows:—I.—Whether furlough on private affairs, or on medical certificate, in excess of the periods allowed to count for pension, reckons towards the time specified in Article 117a as qualifying for the annuities described in article 1,170a. II.—If the furlough exceeds the limit for which an officer is eligible, viz., 2 years after 8 years' service, 3 after 14 years' service, and so on, does it reckon towards the extra annuity? III.—Can a major who has served 7 years from the date of his promotion to captain, and who has not less than 20 years' service (above the age of 20), retire on a captain's pension and extra annuity? IV.—Similarly with other ranks, and specially, can a general officer, who has served for 5 years since his promotion to colonel, retire on colonel's pension with the extra annuity after January 1, 1879? V.—Is time spent on furlough, on private affairs, or on medical certificate, "full-pay service"—(a) on Indian furlough allowances; (b) on English furlough pay. The Government of India replies:—I.—That all leave or furlough counts towards pension under Indian Regulations in the cases of officers of the Royal (late Indian) Artillery and Engineers, as notified in Government General Orders Nos. 933 of 1877, and 911 of 1878. II.—Vide preceding answer; service for the extra annuity is calculated, as laid down in Article 1,170a of the Warrant, from the date of first commission. III.—No. Retirements can only take place in the ranks and under the conditions specified in Article 117a. IV.—Vide preceding answer; the only provision for the retirement of general officers is that contained in Article 117b, and such officers can only retire on or before December 31, 1878. V.—All absence on furlough, irrespective of the allowance passed to an officer, is considered full-pay service.

JAINISM.—Mr. Edward Thomas writes to the Athenæum on this subject:—"Among other questions put down for consideration and discussion at the Congrès des Orientalistes at Lyons, on the 31st of August last, there was formulated a subdivision devoted to 'Les Djains sont-ils d'anciens Bouddhistes antérieurs à Sakia Mouni, ou des Bouddhistes modifiés depuis les persécutions brahmaniques?' As I have paid some attention to this subject, though unable to attend the congress, and therefore unaware of the course taken in the discussion, you will, perhaps, allow me to advert in your columns to a very important item, bearing upon the relative priority of the creeds of Jainism and Buddhism which has not hitherto been noticed—that is to say, how their reputed dates balance and adjust themselves inter se within the bounds of reasonable probability. The Jains have a fixed and definite date for the Nirvana of 'Mahavira,' their great saint, which is established by the concurrent testimony of their two sects, whose method of reckoning varies in itself, thereby securing, as it were, a double entry. The Svetambaras date in the era of Vikramaditya, 57 B.C.; the Digambaras reckon by the Saka samvat, 78 A.D., and both arrive at the same figures of B.C. 526-7 for the death of Mahavira. This calculation is equally supported by the dynastic lists, which satisfactorily fill in the period from the accession of 'Palaka, the lord of Avanti, [who] was anointed in that night in which . . . Mahavira entered Nirvana,' 'to the four years of Saka,' who immediately preceded Vikramaditya. On the other hand, Buddha's date varies, according to different authorities, from the extreme points of B.C. 2,420 to 453, and even is reduced so low as 370 B.C.; so that up to this time modern inquirers have been unable to concur in the determination of this epoch further than to suspect, as we are taught by the Chinese, that the period was antedated from time to time, with the direct purpose of arrogating priority over other saints. Now, if the ascertained Jain date will serve to determine the era of Buddha, under the theory that Buddha himself was a disciple of Mahavira, it will, in the fact, go far to establish the priority of the latter, and the pre-existence of the creed of which he was the twenty-fourth or last prophet. The date of Buddha most largely accepted has been adopted from the Ceylon annals, which supply the figures 543 B.C. But, as was remarked by Mr. Turnour, who first investigated the local traditions, that the acceptance of such a date involved an error, in default of the required period of sixty years (sixty-six); or, to use his own words, 'the discrepancy can only proceed from one of these two sources, viz., either it is an intentional perversion, adopted to answer some national or religious object, which is not readily discoverable, or Chandra Gupta is not identical with Sandracottus.' A partial reconciliation of the error was proposed by the method of restoring to the dynasty of the Vandas the full hundred years assigned to them by some Pauranik authorities, in lieu of the forty-four allowed for in the Ceylon lists; but if the local annals were so dependent for their accuracy upon extra-national corrections, their intrinsic merits could have stood but little above zero; and any such summary introduction of sixty-six years from outside sources could scarcely have been held to be satisfactory, unless the assumed total of 543 years B.C. were proved to have a fixed quantity by better external testimony than has hitherto been adduced. To General Cunningham belongs the merit of having first proposed, in 1854, the fixing of Buddha's Nirvana in '477 B.C.,' a result which he obtained from original figure calculations, while Max Muller, in 1859, independently arrived at the same conclusion, from a more extended critical review of the extant literary evidence. General Cunningham has lately enlarged the sphere of his observations, and in adopting Colebrooke's view in regard to the fact that Gautama Buddha was 'the disciple of Mahavira,' has materially fortified his early arguments in reasserting that the Nirvana of Buddha must be placed in '478 B.C.,' or 'forty-nine years' after the release of Mahavira, the last of the Jains. General Cunningham does not concern himself with the larger question of ancient religions, but confines himself to his favourite metier of working out sums with equal elaboration, but with less fanciful details than of old. The passages relied upon by Colebrooke in 1826 have since been confirmed by important contributions from other sources. None, however, bring the question home so distinctly and in so quaintly graphic a way as Professor Weber's translation of a passage from the 'Bhagavati,' wherein the Chela, 'the holy Mahavira's eldest pupil, Indrabhuti'—'houseless of Gautama's Gotra,'—begins to distrust the negative perfection of Jainism, in the terms of the text—'Thereupon that holy Gautama, in whom faith, doubt, and curiosity arose, grew and increased, rose up. Having arisen, he went to the place where the sacred Cramana Mahavira was. . . . After performing these [salutations] he praises him and bows to him. After so doing, not too close, not too distant, listening to him, bowing to him, with his face towards him, humbly waiting on him with folded hands, he thus spoke. . . . In conclusion, I may recapitulate certain deductions, which I have suggested elsewhere. The juxtaposition of the last representative of the one faith with the first exponent of the other, which took over so many traditions that it retained in common with the parent creed, is a point of marked importance. Eclipsed for a time by the energy of the reformers, whose missionaries carried the Buddhist doctrines over so large a section of the globe, non-proselytising Jainism has survived in its simplicity—as the natural outcome of the ideas and aspirations of a primitive race—still undisturbed in the land of their common birth; while Buddhism, with its fantastic elaborations, retains scant honour, and no place within the limits of its nidus in India proper."

THE WAR IN AFGHANISTAN.

EVENTS are occurring in such rapid succession in Afghanistan that it is difficult to write anything which shall not have become by the time it is in print a tale of the past. We may, however, briefly summarise the position as follows:—General Browne has occupied Dakha with an advanced guard, and the rest of his division is being closed up on its head. General Roberts has captured Mohamed Azim's Fort in the Koorum Valley, and is close to the Koorum Fort itself. General Biddulph is steadily advancing on Candahar, without meeting any opposition. The question is, What next? As to General Biddulph, as his supports under General Stewart will not reach Quetta for probably another ten days, it is probable that the advance on Candahar will be conducted deliberately and with caution. It may, however, be reasonably anticipated that the fifteen marches from Quetta to Candahar will be accomplished by the middle of December, if not sooner; for, as far as we can calculate, General Stewart's division ought to be all assembled at Quetta at the latest by December 10. Apparently the inhabitants of Southern Afghanistan are well disposed towards the invaders, and it is reported that no resistance will be offered this side of Candahar, and that the town itself will not be defended. The climate of Candahar is much milder than that of Quetta, and in every respect superior to that of Hindostan. During the winter of 1841-42 snow only fell on two days. There are abundant supplies to be obtained in the neighbourhood, but firewood is extremely scarce. The fortifications are weak, and incapable of offering any resistance to a British force, even if the latter is unprovided with heavy guns. Between Candahar and Cabul the passes are often blocked with snow quite early in the winter. It may, therefore, be considered certain that we shall establish ourselves at Candahar and remain there till the spring. Though no serious opposition to this measure will in all probability be made, it is very likely that we shall be exposed to constant desultory attacks. Passing northward to General

Roberts' force, we may assume that we will shortly be in possession of the Koorum Fort. That he will have to fight for it is possible, for it is tolerably strong, and has a substantial garrison. On the other hand, the Afghans are like all Orientals, so nervous about their means of retreat being cut off, that we should not be the least surprised if General Roberts, by threatening the north side, secured the evacuation of Fort Koorum without having to expend much ammunition on it. That he will proceed much further before the spring is not to be anticipated, though no doubt he will, by constant demonstrations, retain a large Afghan force in the Peiwar Pass. He will find plenty of occupation during his halt in bringing about amicable relations with the tribes of the valley, in collecting supplies for his advance in the spring, and in constructing roads back to Thull.

As regards the main column, i.e., that operating by the Khyber Pass, it may be considered certain that General Browne will not proceed further than Jellalabad for the present, and probable that he will go as far. He will be guided in his decision by circumstances, and by information which is not in our possession. According to the latest intelligence Jellalabad has been evacuated by its garrison, infected by the panic of those of their comrades who fled from Ali Musjid. If this is true, there is little likelihood that the Ameer's main army is anywhere nearer than Jugdulluck, where Pollock first encountered opposition, after marching from Jellalabad, in 1842. Indeed, it is possible that the Afghan forces are still nearer to Cabul. General Browne may therefore be induced to establish himself at Jellalabad for the winter. It is a healthy spot, provisions are obtainable, and it would be a good situation for an advanced depot of stores when next spring the army advances on Cabul. We should, moreover, gain great prestige by occupying it, for we may be sure that the memory of Sale's gallant defence is still fresh in the minds of the Afghans, and that the name of Jellalabad is always associated with British endurance, prowess, and victory. There are, however, disadvantages connected with its occupation. The distance between it and the Peshawur end of the Khyber is more than double that between the latter and Dakha; and though the valley of Jellalabad is capable of supplying a large amount of food and forage, we cannot rely upon being able to procure these necessities locally. The Ameer may regain his ascendancy over the neighbouring tribes, and cause all supplies to be either removed or destroyed; or he may, by a guerilla warfare, oblige us to fight for every sheep, handful of grain, or bundle of grass. Consequently we must take up no position where a constant stream of convoys from our own territories cannot be reckoned on. But the line of communication between Jellalabad and Peshawur is about ninety miles, some thirty miles of which passes through difficult defiles. Already, notwithstanding our arrangements with the Khyberees, attacks have been made in the Khyber on not only our followers, but our camps. The fact is that there is little subordination among these mountain clans. They are split up into numerous small subdivisions, full of jealousy and hostility towards each other, and an unequal division of our subsidies would be quite sufficient to cause those who were dissatisfied to seek for plunder to compensate themselves for any disappointment. Experience, too, shows us that even the headmen are not to be depended upon.

In short, the hill tribes are distinguished by a perfectly feminine fickleness and an unquenchable thirst for booty. The majority of each tribe may be true to their engagements, but they cannot prevent the black sheep among their number from carrying on predatory warfare on their own account. The longer the line of communication, therefore, the greater is the number of etappen troops needed, and it is just as essential to secure the road for the supply of a single battalion as for a whole division. Therefore, by occupying Jellalabad with a single brigade, as has been suggested, General Browne would not be able to diminish the number of his posts, but only to lessen the demands on the transport. Of course the latter is a great consideration; still there are other considerations which may outweigh it. It would hardly be prudent to garrison Jellalabad with less than a whole brigade, for our prestige must not be allowed to suffer by a retreat. A siege would be hardly less damaging to our reputation. Therefore, the force at Jellalabad should be strong enough to give battle in the open to any force that the Ameer is likely to bring against it. No doubt a single combined brigade would give a good account of, say, ten or fifteen thousand Afghans; but the Ameer, counselled by his Russian friends, might secretly concentrate the whole of his available forces, and try and crush our brigades in detail if we keep them separate. A very little notice would enable the troops at Dakha to arrive in time to give battle; two forced marches would suffice. Are we, however, sure that we should get so much notice? Again, the Ameer might, by making demonstrations, keep the main body of the division constantly on the march from Dakha to Jellalabad and back. It will no doubt be said that the Afghans are so panicstruck that there is little chance of their assuming the offensive. No doubt some of them have been panicstruck by the narrow escape they had of being captured in the Khyber; but the best troops are liable to occasional panics.

The panic soon ceases when it is seen that it was unreasonable, and there is no reason to suppose that the proverbially gallant Afghans are permanently cowed. The statements of universal panic may have been exaggerated. The natural bent of the Oriental mind is in the direction of exaggeration at all times; moreover, they are given to say, not what is the truth, but that which they think will be pleasing to their hearers. In the camp of every invading army since the world began stories have been rife of the demoralisation and discontent of the enemy's troops. We are, therefore, inclined to receive all such statements as are not verified by the personal observation of British officers with a certain amount of distrust. We really know next to nothing about the Ameer's resources, his plans, or the distribution of his troops. He may have made up his mind to keep his army concentrated in a central position. The force at Ali Musjid may have been composed of his least reliable troops, and their orders may have been merely to delay, not to attempt at stopping us. It is clear that they have signally failed in performing even the easiest task that could have been assigned them, but it does not follow that the Ameer ever intended to offer any real resistance in the early part of the campaign. His strategy may be injudicious, but it is foolish to suppose that with the assistance of the officers of the Russian Mission he has not formed a distinct plan of some sort. He is an experienced and dauntless soldier himself, and Yakoob Khan possesses, it is asserted, military talents of a high order. We shall be dangerously imprudent, therefore, if we base our arrangements on the theory that our first little success at Ali Musjid has so shattered Shere Ali's power that we have nothing to do but to make a military promenade to Cabul as soon as the weather is fine enough to admit of the trip.

THE DISCOVERY OF GOLD IN INDIA.—On Tuesday a meeting of the Moyar Coffee Company was held at the offices in Nicholas-lane. The report adopted by the meeting stated that last year the company leased a portion of their property to the Prince of Wales Quartz Reef Gold Prospecting Company for a short time, with the object of testing the gold prospects of the company, and the results were of a most important character as affecting the material interests of the company. The Prince of Wales Company reported that from twenty tons of quartz they had obtained and crushed 45oz. 6dwt. of gold. They had succeeded in proving the paying capabilities of Alpha reef. Messrs. Smith, Fleming, and Co., on behalf of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. (of Bombay), made overtures to the directors for the exclusive right of mining the gold on their property, but the failure of both firms had brought those negotiations to a close. The board knew that the company possessed a large area of reefs, and they stated that Mr. Brough Smythe (the Minister of Mines in the Government of Victoria) had been deputed to thoroughly inspect the country, and from the company's lands gold was produced in small but perfectly visible quantities. The chairman (Mr. A. Hall) congratulated the shareholders on the fact that large quantities of gold had been recently discovered on their property; and in reply to a shareholder, who asked whether the Government reserved the mineral rights of the land, Mr. Hall said that he consulted all the title-deeds, and there was no reservation whatever in that respect. He had also consulted gentlemen in the India Office, and the Government had not made, and were not likely to make, any claim to those rights. After some discussion with regard to suggestions as to the forming of a new company, or altering the present articles of association to enable the company to deal with and develop their gold prospects, it was resolved to form a committee of gentlemen possessed of mining knowledge to thoroughly investigate the subject. The following gentlemen were appointed on the committee:—General Gossett, Messrs. John Wilde, S. O. Honson, James Gordon, and John Brown.

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, on Saturday, the case of Chotay Lall v. Chunnool Lall and another was heard. This was an appeal from a judgment of the High Court of Calcutta of Sept. 1, 1874, affirming a prior decision of Mr. Justice Pontifex of that court. The question at issue was one of law, there being no facts in dispute—namely, whether, according to Mitachshara law, an only daughter of a sonless father takes his estate on his death, so that on her subsequent decease, without issue, it descended to her husband, who had married her in the Brahma form, to the exclusion of the next male heirs of her father. Both courts below held that such a daughter took but a qualified interest for her life in her father's estate, and that on her death without issue her father's heirs, and not her husband, were entitled to succeed. The person whose estate was in suit was Thakoordoss, who was one of the sect of Jains, and who died intestate in 1860, and in possession of considerable property in Calcutta. His only child, a daughter, married, at the age of ten years, the appellant, and died without issue seven years afterwards. Their lordships, without calling upon the counsel for the respondents, affirmed the decisions of the courts below, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION.—According to the annual report, to be submitted to the meeting on the 3rd proximo, it appears that the net profits for the year, including £3,801 brought forward from last year, amount to £133,625, which, after deducting the interim dividend of 1½ per cent., admit of a further dividend of 2¾ per cent., which the directors now recommend to be paid; a balance of £3,125 being carried over to next year. The amount charged on account of insurance and depreciation is the normal sum of £300,000, and as by the appropriations of last year the depreciation on the fleet has been placed on a satisfactory footing, and as no insurance losses of any importance have been incurred, the directors feel justified in reverting to the former practice of distributing a portion of the profits of underwriting in the form of a bonus at the end of the year. The directors therefore recommend the payment of a bonus of 1 per cent. from this account on the present occasion. The debentures which have become due during the last twelve months have all been paid, and the amount outstanding at the date of this report is £252,500. As stated in the report of last year, the directors hope to be able to pay off the whole of the remaining debentures as they fall due. The proprietors will, at the same time, observe that the saving in debenture interest already attained amounts to a relief in the working account of £20,000 per annum. In their annual report for the year 1876-7 the directors pointed out that the revenue had advanced about £100,000 beyond that of the year previous; but, unfortunately, in their subsequent half-yearly report issued in June last, they had to state that the revenue had receded to the same extent—viz., £100,000, in six months, and that the state of trade led them to expect at least an equal falling off during the remainder of the financial year. As far as the freight receipts are concerned, those prognostications have proved too correct, but fortunately certain circumstances, such as the charter money received from Government for the hire of the Bangalore, have afforded some compensation during the last six months, so that the revenue for the latter half of the financial year has not been diminished to the extent, which, judging by the rates of freight, the directors had good reason to expect. The gross receipts were £1,983,712. In the general balance-sheet the fleet, including the new vessel Kaiser-i-Hind, which stands for £114,292, is valued at £2,848,252. That, however, is after deducting the value of two vessels sold for together £13,980, and the £258,999 written off for depreciation. At this figure the "book value" of the fleet shows an average of over £24 per ton and an average per vessel of nearly £65,000. The Bombay and Nubia, which figure in the accounts as sold, appear to have realised between them only £13,980, or, taken by the tonnage, about £4 per ton; but this, perhaps, does not represent the whole price received. The sum received for the Orissa, which has also been sold, does not appear to be stated either in the report or in the accounts.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £200,000 were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England, the whole of which were allotted to Calcutta at an average rate of 18.7437d. Tenders on that Presidency at 18.77-16d. will receive about 95 per cent. An improvement of about 1 per cent. in the price obtained is thus shown. In the weekly advertisement issued by the Indian Council it is stated that the amount of drafts to be offered for tender next Wednesday will be 30 lakhs of rupees, or, nominally, £300,000, of which not more than Rs. 12,00,000 will be apportioned to Bombay.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on Monday at the company's office, Gresham-street. Mr. Leith, Q.C., M.P., the chairman, congratulated the meeting on the fact that that was the seventh division of surplus profits in successive years, and explained that the amount then to be dealt with exceeded that of the corresponding half-year, ending June 30, 1877, by a sum which enabled the directors to recommend a division of 10s. per £100 of ordinary stock, or double what was declared on the former occasion. He also reminded them that the first six months of the year were always the worse of the two, especially in regard to the passenger traffic. Adding the surplus profits mentioned to that for the second half-year of 1877 and the guaranteed interest of 5 per cent., the percentage for the whole year would come to £7 10s. A substantial benefit had accrued from the opening of the Northern Bengal State Railway. This company were working that line for the Indian Government, who had proposed to them the purchase of the short branch of thirteen miles from the south side of the Ganges at Damodea to the company's main line. The proposal was being considered by the board, but as yet it was in suspense, nothing having been done, though he looked forward to that branch eventually forming a part of the Eastern Bengal Company's system. Mr. Behrens having seconded the motion, Mr. Craike expressed himself strongly opposed to the contemplated outlay for this purpose, especially as the lease of the company would expire five years hence, when the Indian Government would be able to take over the Eastern Bengal Railway upon an estimate of the price of the company's stock during the preceding three years. The Chairman said the board deemed it important that this company should possess the branch referred to, as the present arrangement for their working it was of a purely temporary character, and at any time they might have Government officers put upon it and the thing taken out of their hands. Eventually the report was adopted, the division of surplus profits recommended was agreed to, Mr. Behrens and Sir Cecil Beadon were re-elected directors, and a resolution was passed authorising the company to borrow an amount not exceeding £250,000, in addition to any moneys already borrowed by the company and now owing, or which the company were already authorised to borrow and had not yet raised, and that the resolutions passed at the meeting of the company on November 24, 1865, for raising additional share capital, under the conditions therein expressed or referred to, be deemed to be extended to and to comprise the said sum of £250,000.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL.—The report states that in their last report the directors were unable to give the exact area to which the company's water had been supplied during the season 1877-78, but gave as an estimate by Mr. Wilks, the acting chief engineer, a total of 49,000 acres. The official settlement having been completed on the 25th of August last, under the superintendence of Mr. Lister, the officer deputed by the Government of Madras to take charge of irrigation under the company's canal, and to enforce the carrying out of the rules regulating the supply and use of the company's water, it appeared by his official report that 50,919 acres were irrigated. In regard to the current season, the directors were unable at present to afford information as to the extent to which irrigation had proceeded, being without definite returns. Referring to the intended navigation of the main canal, every effort appeared to have been made by the acting chief engineer to push on the required works on the existing canal, and to construct the channel for connecting the line of transport with the Madras Railway at Cuddapah. They hoped, therefore, that all these would be completed by the time at which the necessary boats would be available for beginning the passenger and goods traffic. The steel framework of these boats—twelve passenger and twenty cargo boats—had been constructed in England and sent out to Madras. The chief engineer had expressed his belief that he might be able to place at least some of these boats on the canal before the close of the present year. Copious extracts from the reports of the company's chief and conservancy engineers are appended.

Two distinguished-service rewards are at the disposal of the Indian Government by the succession of Lieutenant-Generals Donald M. Stewart, C.B., and J. L. Vaughan, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, to their colonels' allowances.

GENERAL SIR EDWARD JOHNSON, K.C.B., will, it is stated, leave England before Christmas, and embark at Suez on January 2, en route to India, in order to relieve General Sir Neville Chamberlain as military member of the Viceroy's Council.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL REGINALD WILLIAM SARTORIUS, V.C., C.M.G., Bengal Infantry—the Major Sartorius of Ashantee fame—has been appointed chief of the Transport Department of Lieutenant General Sir Samuel Browne's division. The services of Lieutenant Colonel Sartorius, who is second son of Sir George Sartorius, K.C.B., Senior Admiral of the Fleet, are not given in "Hart." He went out to India, as a cadet of seventeen, in January, 1858, and was shortly after attached to the 13th Light Infantry under Lord Mark Kerr. It was not long before he saw active service, for, on 6th April in the same year, he was at the siege of Azimghur. The company to which he belonged, and which was commanded by Captain W. H. Jones, was in charge of baggage ammunition when it was ordered to the rear to help the rearguard, which was hotly attacked. At the very outset Captain Jones was shot dead, and Sartorius led on the company and dislodged the enemy, killing several with his own hand, and amongst them the man who had shot his captain. After this he was entirely surrounded, when some cavalry came to his assistance. The major in command, seeing the danger of the situation, was at a loss for means of communication with the colonel, who was in front attacking a fortified village. Sartorius volunteered to carry any message if the major would lend him his horse, his own having been shot. The major did so, and Sartorius dashed through the enemy, who fired at him all the way along. One ball took off the top of his helmet, another bruised his ankle; but he succeeded in delivering his message to the colonel, and returned to the rearguard with another company, with the assistance of which the baggage and ammunition were safely brought up under a heavy fire. On the same day Sartorius volunteered to head a storming party against a number of rebels who were firing from a loopholed mosque; but this Lord Mark Kerr refused to sanction, as he considered it would be certain destruction. At the close of the day the young officer was publicly complimented upon the courage and coolness he had shown throughout the day. Lieut. Colonel Sartorius subsequently saw much fighting in Central India, and was afterwards in the Bhootan campaign. He also volunteered for the Abyssinian campaign, but was unsuccessful in his application. His subsequent service on the Gold Coast, as the hero of the march with twenty natives through the heart of Ashantee, earned him the Victoria Cross, the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and a brevet majority, and was spoken of as "the chef d'œuvre of the war." Colonel Sartorius has also received the Indian Mutiny, North-West Frontier, and Ashantee medals.

DEPARTURE OF THE "ZAMBESI."—The P. and O. steamship Zambesi, Captain A. Symons, sailed from Southampton on Thursday, with the heavy India and China mails, a general cargo, and specie, &c., value £321,241 16s. 3d., consigned as under:—For Bombay, bar silver, £185,000; for Galle, jewellery, £360; for Calcutta, bar silver, £70,000; watches and jewellery, £426; for Penang, dollars, £48,600; for Singapore, dollars, £15,527 16s. 3d.; jewellery, £220; for Hong Kong, watches and jewellery, £1,128. She takes out seventy passengers, and fifty-one proceed by the corresponding steamer from Venice and Brindisi, making a total of 121. Among the passengers by the Zambesi are Major Dugdale, Captain Pearce, Lieutenant Mowbray, and Captain Sackville, for Gibraltar; Lieutenant E. H. Currie for Aden, and Major J. W. Saunders, for Bombay. The following officers proceed for Bombay by the corresponding Brindisi steamer:—Captain Aislabie, Major H. G. M'Grath, Colonel Fraser, and Major D. Welsh; and also his Royal Highness Prince Hachisaka, for Yokohama. The Zambesi will go through the Suez Canal to Calcutta, passengers for Bombay changing steamers at Suez.

ARRIVAL OF THE "EUPHRATES."—This Indian troopship left Bombay on Oct. 30 and arrived at Spithead early on Wednesday morning, having left Port Said on the 13th and Malta on the 18th inst. She did not call at Gibraltar. There were one death and one birth during the passage. She brought Major de Montmorency, Lieuts. A. Burton and H. Burton, and Veterinary Surgeon Powell, 164 men, 14 women, and 26 children belonging to the F Battery of the 5th Brigade, Royal Artillery; and Major Bissett, Capt. Rigg; Lieuts. Leach, Acton, Prickett, Rundle, C. Blewitt, Pratt, and W.

Blewitt, Veterinary Surgeon Birne; 374 men, 33 women, and nine children belonging to the A, B, and C Batteries, Royal Artillery. These batteries are all for Woolwich. Besides these the Euphrates brought a number of officers, whose names have already appeared in our columns, 340 invalids and time-expired men for Netley, 10 women, 29 children, and eight convicts. Col. Wilkinson, R.A., Capt. Richardson, and Lieut. Turner, of the 25th Foot, and Lieut. Gall, 5th Foot, whose names have been given as among the list of passengers, were withdrawn at the last moment, and the names of Lieut. McCudde, of the Staff; Quartermaster Walsh, 72nd Foot; and Surgeon Major Hinde, A.M.D., substituted in their stead. The Euphrates will sail for India on Dec. 13.

According to an old Parliamentary paper which, though manifestly imperfect—as proved by the fact that the year 1814 is given as the first in which steam vessels were built, and only one in that year, with none previously—is the only official record of the subject, the following was the number of steamers built, respectively in England and Scotland, in each of the eleven years from 1814 to 1824, which may be called the period of infancy of British steam navigation:—

Years.	England.		Scotland.
	Number of vessels.	Tonn. ge.	Number of vessels.	Tonnage.
1814	...	...	1	69
1815	...	3	5	429
1816	...	5	7	632
1817	...	7	6	415
1818	...	10	8	683
1819	...	11	11	825
1820	...	17	14	1,127
1821	...	29	26	2,344
1822	...	52	28	2,701
1823	...	69	26	2,347
1824	...	80	29	2,682

It will be seen that Scotland, the cradle of steam navigation was overtaken by England within a few years in the building of steamers. In Ireland, twenty-seven steamers were built from 1817 to 1824—namely, one in 1817, one in 1818, and from two to five annually afterwards.

The following is a nominal list of the fifteen students who have passed their final examination at the Royal Engineering College this year, and who have elected to pursue their practical course of engineering in India:—To Calcutta—Messrs. H. W. Benson, E. C. Elliott, A. Greenless, F. Lepper, C. C. Martyr, A. H. Mason, A. Morse, and H. H. O'Connell. To Bombay—Messrs. F. J. Pope, J. R. Teckell, A. S. Trevor, R. W. Egerton, R. B. Yates, F. Harris, and J. A. Baird.

RUPSHU.—The Tagalung Pass (18,042 feet) which has to be crossed in ascending from Ladakh into Rupshu, is about fifty miles from Leh, and a few miles before this pass is reached the last village, Gya, in which there are houses or huts, is left behind. Beyond the Tangalung Pass is the highland country of the nomad Thibetan, who has no more substantial dwelling than a black cloth tent, and to whom a residence which could not easily be transported would be useless. For several days on his march through Rupshu, until the Baralacha Pass is crossed, the traveller follows the track high up along the sides of bleak mountains or through valleys sometimes covered with scant, coarse herbage, but, as a rule, stony and sandy; not a single tree, nor the smallest patch of cultivated ground is met with. Except for an encampment of a few tents pitched in some spot where the hills afford shelter from the biting wind, or for an occasional train of sheep laden with salt for Lahoul or merchandise for Ladakh, or beyond the Chinese frontier, one might leave Rupshu and fancy it a region too desolate for habitation. But the Champas, as the nomad Thibetans are called, contrive, as a pastoral people, to lead a tolerable existence. They drive their flocks wherever the pasture is least scanty, and when the season comes round for the passes to open they barter the wool—puttoo and pushmina—of their sheep and goats for the simplest necessities of life brought up annually during the summer season by traders from Lahoul. There is also a considerable traffic in salt, and their sheep are employed for its carriage and for the transport of other merchandise between Ladakh, Lahoul, and Chinese Tibet. The lowest valleys in Rupshu are over 14,000 feet above the sea; in midsummer mountain streamlets become frozen up between sunset and sunrise; and although the nights are intensely cold the heat and glare of the sun during the day are intolerable. Although his country is so inhospitable, and the conditions of his life apparently so hard, the Champa has a singularly cheerful disposition. Bleak hills and barren valleys, the rarity of the atmosphere, and the severe extremes of temperature at a great altitude; biting blasts which sweep through his tent as the sun goes down, snowstorm or parching heat, do not any of them seem to affect the equanimity of his temper. The travelled Champa has seen perhaps the wealth of vegetation, the cultivated fields and fruit trees of the lovely Kulu valley lying south of Lahoul; but though he regards such luxuriant fertility with interest, he associates it with what to him is the stifling heat of the lower valleys, and so does not particularly covet natural beauties or advantages of this kind for his own bleak region.—("A Trip Across the Frontier of Chinese Tibet.")—Englishman.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

THE very satisfactory half-yearly ordinary meeting of this company on Monday last goes far to confirm the high hopes entertained of the future of our Indian railways, and justify the Government in the sound policy displayed in exercising the right to take over the works of the East Indian Railway Company, whilst retaining the advantages of its hitherto excellent administration and control in the spirit of co-operative and mutual interest. Although showing a decrease in the tonnage conveyed over the road, which is accounted for by the abnormal demand for rice and grain transit during the famine period, the moneys earned showed a very notable increase, as will be seen by the report which appears in another portion of our paper. The damage caused to the jute crops by the floods, as well as the stagnation produced in trade by the war, which ever influences general business, each had their effect on the traffic returns of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company, whilst the vagaries of the mighty Ganges were not without influence on the works of the company at Goalundo, 152 miles from the terminal station at Calcutta, and, being as all powerful as they are unaccountable, the engineer has for once to accept the inevitable, and, by way of exception to prove the rule, for once he must allow of the word impossible being admitted into his vocabulary. The passenger traffic, however, shows a manifest and most encouraging increase, whilst the loss by exchange is one of those inflictions under which English shareholders in all Indian enterprise may groan, but must patiently submit. Prudently foreseeing future contingencies, advantage was taken of this meeting to ask for powers to raise capital to the extent of £250,000, in addition to that already possessed, so as to be prepared (at the discretion of the shareholders, to be specially convened for the purpose) to meet the views of the Government as to taking over the thirteen miles of line south of the Ganges belonging to the system of the Northern Bengal Railway, which joins the main line at Purdah, about 100 miles from Calcutta, and crosses the Ganges at Damodra on the opposite shore to Sara. Some little discussion was raised, perhaps prematurely, on this point, the speakers evidently having an eye to the reduction of capital account as far as possible, so that in five years' time, if the Government thought fit to follow up the policy so wisely adopted in the case of the East Indian Railway, as large an average price should be shown on the Eastern Bengal Stock as possible. The chairman briefly and satisfactorily explained the true position of the business, reminding the speakers that they were no less mindful of the future interest of the company than the shareholders themselves, in whose hands the ultimate appropriation of the capital powers of the company would be entirely left for their sanction and approval. A dividend of 10s. per £100 ordinary stock, in addition to the £2 10s. guaranteed interest, making a total of £3 per cent. for the half-year with that paid on June 30 last, was declared payable on December 31 next. Great satisfaction was expressed at the excellent management of the undertaking.—Railway Record.

A correspondent, in a letter dwelling on the financial position of New South Wales, mentions, among the other valuable assets of the colony, the Government railways, which, he says, could at once be sold to European capitalists for £11,000,000 on giving them certain concessions as to future extensions.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay up to November 18; Allahabad and Madras, November 16; Calcutta, November 15.

THE general remarks on the season and prospects for the week ending November 5 are as follows:—In Madras prospects remain generally good; in Tinnevely rain is again urgently wanted; but in Coimbatore the standing crops have not altogether recovered the effects of an excessive rainfall. The number—48,449—on relief works shows a further decrease of 7,422, and that—26,107—gratuitously relieved of 6,220. In Mysore prospects continue favourable, and, except at Bangalore, prices have fallen. The numbers on relief works and in the receipt of gratuitous relief now stand at 16,524 and 6,365, being a further decrease of 1,703 and 351 respectively. In the Bombay Presidency the kharif harvest still progresses; damage from locusts continues in Sindh; and in the Southern Mahratta country heavy rain has proved injurious. In the Central Provinces the kharif harvest and rabi sowings continue, and prospects remain good; rain is, however, wanted in places; prices are steady. Prospects are satisfactory in Berar. In Central India the want of rain is still felt. The report from Rajputana is up to October 31, and is not altogether promising; rain is needed in places, and in Meywar all agricultural operations have been stopped on account of fever; whilst in Ulwar the prospects of the rabi are gloomy. In Bengal the rain that has fallen has done much good, but rain is greatly wanted in the Patna division; in Sarun, Palamow, and East Bogra, the rice crops have suffered, and in Lohardugga the rabi prospects are indifferent. In Assam prospects are bright as before; in Sylhet damage has occurred from insects. In British Burma anticipations, as has been the case during the last five or six weeks, are not, as a rule, disheartening; but, as will have appeared from previous reports, in the districts of Frome and in Thayetmyo a good deal of land has been left uncultivated owing to insufficient rain. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh there is no substantial change, but much improvement would result if rain fell. From the Punjab the harvest reports are good; but rain is now wanted for the rabi sowings; fever is still prevalent in most districts.

THE health reports for the same week record fever increasing in Sindh. In Upper Sindh Frontier fever prevalent, also in part of Guzerat and Khandesh. Some deaths from cholera in Konkan. Fever continues in Kattywar. Bengal: Fever continues prevalent in Backergunge, 24-Pergunnahs, Pubna, Rungpore, Hooghly, Bankoora, Bhagalpur, Purnea, Sarun, Shahabad, and Singhbhoom. Health good in Rajshaye, Cooch Behar, Gya, and Pooree. N.W.P. and Oudh: Fever in Jhansi and Agra. Punjab: Fever prevalent in most districts. British Burma: Health generally good. Central India: Fever diminishing. Rajputana: Fever prevalent, but abating in Jeypore.

THE progress of the campaign in Afghanistan is succinctly detailed in the telegrams from the Viceroy which have been published by the India Office during the past week:—

"Nov. 30.—Ameer reported to have withdrawn treasure and ammunition from Jellalabad; reconnaissances accompanied by Mohmand Chief being sent out from Dakka; supplies coming into Dakka more plentifully, but grass and firewood scarce. Shots have been fired at Ali Musjid and camps in the pass, and a convoy stopped and signal party attacked. Two men of the latter wounded. Public reports of stoppage of pass much exaggerated. My aide-de-camp rode through and found all quiet. Cavagnari rode through from Dakka, and reached Jamrud last night. Reports as follows:—'All quiet at Dakka and upper part of pass. Hope soon to break up party which Abdullah Mir has collected; many have already left him. Incapacity of the Kuki Khel Maliks cause of trouble; other Maliks are said to behave well. There are no serious combinations. No news from Roberts. Stewart reaches Dadur to-day.'

"DEC. 1.—Cavagnari reports from Jamrud, Abdullah Mir reported to have left the malcontents. Party attempted to interrupt communications again in pass and were easily dispersed by our troops. Biddulph reconnoitring in the Pishin Valley and towards Khojock Pass; people everywhere friendly and supplies abundant. No news of Roberts."

"DEC. 1.—Roberts reached Habib Kala 28th, with two brigades infantry, four horse artillery guns, one elephant, one mountain battery. Found enemy on Peiwar; made strong reconnaissance with part of force, disclosing enemy's position. Loss, one man killed; Lieut. Reid, 29th, one native officer, eight men wounded. Encamped 29th at entrance to pass to rest men and animals; was to advance 29th or 30th. Commissioner, Peshawur, reports coalition against pass arrangements likely to be soon broken up by force at Jamrud. Ample convoy passed safe through pass, though fired at from a distance."

"DEC. 2.—Cavagnari reports.—Went out yesterday with two mountain guns to assist Kuki Khel Maliks in punishing malcontents concerned in recent outrages in pass. Some gave in at once, others opened fire on Maliks, but promptly dispersed; Maliks burnt towers and houses; this punishment purely tribal affair, executed by their own headmen; trusts pass arrangements will soon work satisfactorily. Hostile combination believed broken up, only bands of marauders remain. Jirga of Saugon-kheyl (? Sangu-kheyl) Shinwaris reached Dakka; this will secure road from Lundi-Khana to Dakka. General tone above Dakka much improved; confidence rapidly being inspired. Letter from Ameer to Cavagnari's address received at Dakka; contents not yet known. No later news Roberts or Biddulph; rumours of attacks in Khyber much exaggerated; large convoys daily proceed through. Colonel Browne, commanding brigade at Ali Musjid, recalled. Colonel M'Gregor sent up to organise traffic through pass and measures of protection; military will be gradually replaced by tribal levies."

"DEC. 3.—No disturbances reported from Khyber Pass to-day. Authentic intelligence received that Jellalabad is evacuated. No troops nearer than Cabul. Stewart at Kirta (? Kistah). Roberts encamped on December 1 two miles from Peiwar Kotal to give troops rest, and allow commissariat to come up, having outstripped supplies in attempt to catch retiring enemy before they reached pass. Enemy taken up strong position at top of pass; known to have one horse battery and one mule battery. Troops healthy and in excellent spirits. Weather fine, but cold. Reinforcements from Khushi reported to have been ordered back to Cabul."

"DEC. 4.—Browne reports brigade under Macpherson advanced to Bosawal, beyond Khurd Khyber, to reconnoitre, gives confidence in country, and get supplies. All quiet at Dakka; communications to Ali Musjid re-established; Abkhana road being explored and improved. Health of British troops very good; some fever among natives. Surg. Gen. Innes rode through pass yesterday; reports all quiet there and at Ali Musjid; rode most of the way without escort. Commissioner's report on affairs among Khyber tribes generally favourable. Gen. Maude, with part of division, arrived at Peshawur; takes command of troops there, Jamrud, and Ali Musjid. No news yet from Roberts."

"DEC. 5.—Roberts attacked Peiwar 2nd; turning movement during night of 1st successful; surprised and turned enemy, but attack of Kotal from that side found impossible. Roberts, therefore, continued turning movement, placing himself in enemy's rear, with flanking column, while General Cobbe engaged attention in front. Enemy reinforced by four regiments from Khushi made determined resistance, but were driven from Kotal, which was occupied at 4 p.m., 3rd. Enemy completely defeated, leaving 15 guns and large amount of ammunition in our hands; other guns abandoned, and will be secured. Loss supposed to be very heavy. Our loss, Captain Kelso, R.A., Major Anderson, 23rd Pioneers, killed; General Cobbe and Lieutenant Munro, 72nd Highlanders, wounded; about 50 men killed and wounded. Troops had to undergo great exertions and exposure at altitude of 8,000ft., but behaved admirably, and are in excellent spirits. Roberts continues pursuit towards Shutargardan to-day; wounded sent in to Kuram."

"DEC. 6.—Roberts reports number of guns captured on 2nd, 18; also large stores of ammunition and supplies. The Fajis seem friendly disposed. Cold severe, but troops in good health and spirits, employed improving the road. Proposed to reconnoitre Ali Khel 4th. Peiwar Kotal carried on afternoon of 2nd, not 3rd, as stated in last telegram. Maude reports all quiet in Khyber Pass; friendly tribes guarding it. Cavagnari reports all quiet at Dakka. Brigade still at Basawal. Rumours that Ameer has advanced some troops to Tezin, probably to tranquillize Cabulis."

The health of the British troops in the Khyber column is good. At this season of the year, in the finest climate in the world, living, as it were, in the open air, we should be surprised to learn that there was much sickness among the English. Doubtless the Sikhs and Poorbiahs of the native regiments feel the cold nights and suffer in consequence from fever. This will soon wear off, and if there is no more fighting before them the doctors will not have much to complain of. It will be satisfactory to hear equally good accounts of the health of the other columns, more especially of the one at Peshin, which was reported to be suffering severely from cold.

CAPT. JOHN GEORGE MACLEAN, wing commander, 14th N.I., who was wounded at Ali Musjid, has since succumbed to his wounds. His commission bore date Dec. 10, 1859; lieutenant, Nov. 2, 1861; and captain, June 29, 1869. Major Alexander Dunlop Anderson, second in command of the 23rd (Pioneer) Bengal N.I., had served in China, the Umbeyla Campaign, and Abyssinia; his commissions were dated—Sept. 4, 1858; lieutenant, July 15, 1859; and captain, Sept. 4, 1870. Capt. Andrew Kelso, R.A., received his commission as lieutenant Nov. 1, 1860; and captain, April 16, 1873.

THE following notification appears in the last received Gazette of India:—"The Governor General in Council hereby declares that it is expedient that the Governor General shall visit certain parts of India unaccompanied by his Council. And in the exercise of the powers conferred by the Indian Council's Act, Section 6, the Governor General in Council hereby nominates the Honourable Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, K.C.S.I., to be president of the said Council with effect from the 11th November, 1878, during the time of such visit; and the powers of the Governor General in assemblies of the said Council during the time of such visit shall be reposed in the said Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, except that of assenting to, or withholding his assent from, or reserving for the signification of her Majesty's pleasure, any law or regulation as provided in the 24th and 25th Vic., cap. 67. And the Governor General is authorised by this order made for that purpose alone to exercise all or any of the powers which may be exercised by the said Governor General in Council in every case in which the said Governor General may think it expedient to exercise the same, except the powers of making laws and regulations."

It is reported that the slave trade is still being stealthily carried on in the Red Sea, and that slaves are occasionally brought down from Efat in Abyssinia to the coast between Zaila and Tajourrah, whence they are taken across, as opportunity offers, to minor ports on the Arabian coast, and conveyed into the interior. The trade is strictly prohibited in the district of Yemen by the Turkish Government, and can only be carried on secretly and at great risk. The attention of the authorities has been called to the trade with a view to its prompt suppression.

ACCOUNTS from Muscat state that the country of Oman has been visited with heavy floods of rain this year, and the date crop, which is the chief production of the country and the staple food of the people, has been almost entirely destroyed. Although an absolute famine is not anticipated, there will certainly be much distress. At present the country is tranquil.

A BOMBAY paper states that the Reverend John K. Hyke, an American missionary in China, has reported an interesting conversation held in February last with a Chinaman from Yunnan, who professed to have been an eye-witness of the murder of Mr. Margary. How far the story may be relied upon, in the absence of all information regarding the character of the Chinaman, it is of course impossible to say. Mr. Hyke writes:—"In compliance with your request I beg to make the following statement of a conversation with a Chinaman claiming to be from Yunnan and calling himself Ti Nyan Tui, respecting the murder of Mr. Margary. I am sorry that I cannot give you a complete verbatim report of the dialogue. I have forgotten some unimportant details; still, you can depend upon the report of the conversation being correct in all essential points. Some time during February last, while walking outside the south gate of the city of Kin Kiung, I met a Chinaman, with whom I had the following conversation:—What is your name?—My name is Li. How old are you?—Sixteen years. Where are you from?—I am from the province of Hupeh. What part of the province?—Hankow. Why do you attempt to deceive me? I am somewhat familiar with the dialect of Hankow, and your dialect does not correspond with it. I do not believe you are a Hupeh man.—It is true I am not a native of Hupeh; although I have lived for some months in Hankow, my native province is Yunnan. From what place in Yunnan?—From

. . . . (I asked him to repeat the name, but owing to the difference in his pronunciation I did not recognise it as a place with which I was familiar, and so I said): I know of no such place in Yunnan. Evincing not a little surprise, he said:—You do not know . . . ? It is a place where one of your countrymen was killed in Yunnan. You are just telling me a big story for my amusement.—I assure you that what I tell is true. What was the foreigner's name?—Ma Kia Lieh (Margary). How do you know he was killed?—I saw the execution with my own eyes. Where was he killed?—In Li-tajen's Yamen. What is Li-tajen's name?—Li-sitai. How did you happen to witness the execution?—I was an underling in Li-tajen's Yamen. Was this Mr. Margary's first visit to the place?—No; he had been there before. Did the people of the city know that he was to be executed?—Yes; it was the common gossip of the place that he was to be killed on his return. Was he killed by the populace in a row?—No; he was executed in the Yamen. Who ordered his execution?—It is said that Li-tajen did. In what manner was he executed?—He was beheaded. Who beheaded him?—An executioner. In what part of the Yamen?—Inside?—No. In the outer court of the Yamen. Did Mr. Margary know that he was to be executed?—No; the executioner walked up behind him, and cut off his head; they also beheaded several natives who were with him. After some conversation of minor importance I asked him how he came to be in Hupeh. His reply was that he came in the retinue of Li Han-chang. What was Li Han-chang doing in Yamen?—He went to investigate the circumstances of Mr. Margary's death. Were there any foreigners with him?—Yes, there were two? Did they come back with Li Han-chang? No, they went on. Where?—I don't know what was done in the matter. I heard that an indemnity was to be paid. Was there any person executed for the murder?—I think not. I do not know how much credence is to be placed in the boy's word, but at the time I was very strongly impressed with the truth of his story."

IN the first nine months of the current year the value of gold imported to India was Rs.1,26,18,336, and of that exported Rs.63,76,144; whilst the value of silver imported was Rs.4,40,79,077, and of that exported Rs.83,63,982. This leaves a balance of both metals in favour of imports of Rs.4,19,57,287.

THE visit of his Grace the Governor of Madras to the Wynaad district seems to have been a great success. The Duke won golden opinions from all sorts of men, and carried off golden samples of the produce of the Wynaad reefs, "for the development of which, he doubted not, all the required capital would be forthcoming." He quoted his own experience of mining operations in Cornwall tin and copper, and urged on the planters the careful conservation and extension of firewood to supply charcoal on the spot. The dazzling visions of gold mining by no means caused forgetfulness of the coffee interests. On their side, the planters, through their spokesman, the President of the Nilgiri Planters' Association, declared that the planters felt that they had much for which they had specially to be thankful to the Duke of Buckingham, and this district in particular, as by his influence the annexation of S. E. Wynaad to the Nilgiri Commission had been effected, and which had resulted in the greatest advantage to the district; but the planters would never cease in their efforts until the planting districts of the Madras Presidency were amalgamated, and recognised as a European colony requiring special legislation. The planters had also to thank his Grace for the Coffee Stealing Act, which had lately become law. Although it was feared in its present form that it would not effect the object intended, yet it was a move in the right direction, and might be improved hereafter. In his reply the Duke said that, as regards this Act, he thought it was premature to offer an opinion as to its working. The Government had not only to consider the necessity for checking this special crime, which the exigencies of the cultivation had induced, but it was also necessary to see that no injustice resulted from the special legislation. He was sensible that the Act was not complete in the present form, but the experience of one or more seasons would show its deficiencies, and the representations of the planters would enable the Government to perfect it.

THE meagre reports as yet received of the operations conducted by Mr. Brough Smythe in the gold-bearing districts of the Wynaad are supplemented by a note contributed to the third part of the records of the geological survey by Mr. W. King on the history of the gold industry in the Wynaad. Hitherto the quantity raised in Southern India has only averaged 4.5 dwts. of gold to the ton. The total quantity raised and crushed by the Alpha Company was 769.5 tons, and the outturn only yielded 2.27 dwts. to the ton. The Wynaad Prospecting Company from 100 tons of quartz obtained an average of 3.02 dwts. per ton, and the latest company, the Prince of Wales Tribute, which leased machinery of the Alpha Company, recently obtained 323 tons of quartz, yielding 10.5 dwts. gold per ton, as the Australian machinery seems to fail in effecting the amalgamation of the Wynaad gold, which is more finely divided, and more mixed with pyrites. Mr. King recommends the use of the Mexican arrastra, or vertical mill. Mr. King thinks that in the Wynaad neither at high nor at low levels, but in the position of the reefs which are in same level as the adjacent bottoms of valleys, is the gold most likely to be abundant. The number of auriferous quartz veins in the crystalline rocks of the Wynaad and Mysore is known to be very great, and probably many more may yet be discovered in Chota Nagpur, and the Central Provinces. If gold really exists in these lodes in quantities that ought to yield a fair return on the capital invested, as Mr. King supposes and as Mr. Smythe has now proved, the present generation may yet see the exchange question solved in a way to which no economists can object; for, with cheap labour and an abundant supply of water power, India ought to be able to supply the markets of the world with gold on better terms than Australia can offer.

STATISTICALLY, the present position of Indian tea in the market is remarkably good. With a production this year of, say, thirty-five millions of pounds, the consumption at home is at the rate of thirty-seven millions of pounds. Not that the season just drawing to a close has been a prosperous one on the whole. Prices have improved, but bad weather, in most districts, has caused a bad yield. Nevertheless the tone of those best able to take a sound view of the future of the industry is hopeful. The reverses of last year have tended to check wild extensions, and impressed upon the manufacturer the priceless lesson that quality, not quantity merely, pays.

WHATEVER may be the difference of opinions as to the essential character of the salt-tax, the organisation of the Bombay Collection is shown by the recent returns to be complete, and not oppressive in its working. The sale of salt made at the Kharaghora saltworks on the Runn of Kutch steadily increases, and whereas in 1871-72 only 4,48,230 maunds were sold, during the past year the sales have been no less than 9,78,356 maunds. Dust-storms, which would ruin a whole crop of salt, are very prevalent at Kharaghora, and the report states that they set in this year "with exceptional severity and force" shortly after the salt had been stored. But for the energy of the assistant collector in charge of the works and his subordinates much loss would inevitably have ensued. There has been an increase in Abkari revenue of Rs.1,60,806-5-7, which is due, not to the increased quantity manufactured, but to the enhancement of the duty in January last. The collector of salt revenue has control over no less than 4,559 officers and men—a perfect little army! Out of this number, only five peons were punished in criminal courts, which is a satisfactory result. There were, it appears, 1,260 cases of offences against the salt laws sent for trial before magistrates, of which almost 90 per cent. were convicted, which is a higher average than the previous three years.

THE annual report by the superintendent of the Bangalore experimental farm for the past year is thus commented on by the Chief Commissioner of Mysore:—"The year to which this report refers was most unfavourable to agricultural operations, but the results which have been obtained in the experimental cultivation of various crops testify to the skilful use of the means employed. The facts recorded in the report are of great value to the practical agriculturist, but their chief interest must consist in the experience which they contribute to the knowledge necessary to the introduction of improved methods of cultivation throughout the country. Since the date of his report Mr. Harman has, under the Chief Commissioner's orders, entered upon a tour of the districts, with the object of acquiring an insight into the native system of agriculture. The means of careful observation and inquiry thus afforded will, it is hoped, prove of great practical value to Mr. Harman in dealing with future agricultural experiments for the improvement of existing systems. As it is in contemplation to organise the experimental farm operations on an entirely different footing, it will not be necessary for the Chief Commissioner here to enter in detail upon the several points discussed in Mr. Harman's annual report."

THE administrative authorities of Cyprus are not destined to find themselves free from criticism or opposition. We are informed that the Cypriote community in Egypt, being dissatisfied with the mode in which the government of the island is administered, have sent out there an Italian gentleman of considerable literary ability to publish a polyglot newspaper, in which the various complaints and suggestions of the friends and enemies of Cyprus will be duly ventilated.

It appears from the report of the Sanitary Commissioner for Bombay that the average strength of the European army in the Presidency during 1877 was 10,061; the total number of admission into hospital from all causes was 13,696, of which 6,522 were from malarial fevers and venereal diseases alone. The latter shows the highest figure recorded since 1871, and the attention of Government is at present engaged in devising a scheme for the remedy for an evil which is to be much deplored. The Bombay division showed the highest daily sick rate, as well as the admission rate; the highest death rate was in the northern division, the lowest in Sindh; and the healthiest stations were Aden and Deesa. The temperance movement is gaining ground, as there were in the year under review 1,196 total abstainers, though, curiously enough, the 83rd Regiment, which had a percentage of total abstainers of 24.60 of total strength, gave a percentage of cases of drunkenness of 78.72. The average annual mean strength of the native army was 22,561, and its total of deaths from all causes was 310. The average number of prisoners was 11,316; all the jails in the Deccan and Southern Maratha country were much overcrowded, as well as the Bombay House of Correction and several of the Guzerat prisons. The number of births registered was 311,661, deaths 627,708, a considerable increase over the year previous. The greatest mortality prevailed in the districts of Kulladghee, Dharwar, and Belgaum. In the city of Bombay the mortality was 33,223, the highest ever recorded, which was chiefly owing to the immigration of distressed people from the famine districts. H.E. the Governor in Council believes that Dr. Hewlett's estimate is considerably over the mark when he states that the deaths from famine in the famine districts "certainly did not exceed, but must have been somewhat, perhaps considerably, under 2.73 per cent." According to the Government resolution the mortality attributable to the famine did not exceed 1½ per cent. of the population for the year 1877. The epidemic of cholera, which began in 1875 and continued throughout 1876, claimed a large number of victims during the year under report, numbering in all 57,252; small-pox claimed 27,369; fever 336,865, an unprecedented number; and accident and violence 7,539. During 1877-78, 750,948 persons were vaccinated; the total expenditure was Rs.2,36,369. On this subject the Government resolution runs as follows:—"The Governor in Council must repeat that the only real test of success in vaccination being the cessation or diminution of small-pox, the prevalence of the disease in an epidemic form is a sure sign that the vaccinators have neglected their work. The closest personal attention of all the Deputy Sanitary Commissioners must be given to ensure the work being thoroughly and efficiently done. In concluding their review of the sanitary report, H.E. in Council express the "sincere regret of Government that the severe exertions and great exposure to which he (Dr. Hewlett) was subjected have temporarily so impaired his health as to compel him to proceed for a change to Europe."

THE Secretary of State has lately forwarded to the Government of India the reports of two of the first tobacco and drug brokers in London on certain samples of tobacco manufactured by Messrs. Begg, Sutherland, and Co., at Ghazipore, and on a paper by the Director of Agriculture and Commerce, N. W. Provinces and Oudh, on the progress made in the experimental cultivation and curing of tobacco under his own supervision at Kumaon and other similar documents. From these reports there does not appear to be any reasonable probability that Indian manufactured tobacco will find a market in England, both on account of the high rate of import duty charged in the United Kingdom, which would, it is stated, amount on these samples to no less than 4s. per lb., and because the demand for the kind of tobacco produced, whether from the above cause or not, is wholly insignificant. Both Messrs. Bremner and Co. and Messrs. Jenkins and Phillips (the firms in question) are of opinion that the attention of those interested in the growth of tobacco in India might with advantage be directed to the cultivation and curing of the leaf for cigar manufacture, in which a large and remunerative trade is, it appears, carried on in Java and other Dutch settlements in the East. Messrs. Bremner and Co. suggest that with this object the services of some skilled persons should be obtained from Java or Sumatra, who should be instructed to bring with them proper seed, and should be permitted to select the most suitable soil for experiment. In the event of private enterprise failing to enter on further experiments with Java tobacco, it will be, the Secretary of State suggests, for the Government of India to consider how far it may be desirable for it to embark in the enterprise.

REFERRING to the distress stated by our Ceylon contemporary to exist in the Western Province, the Colonial Secretary was able to assure the Legislative Council that an official visit of the Government Agent had satisfied the Executive that things were not so serious as had been represented. In introducing the estimates for the ensuing year Mr. Douglas expressed his satisfaction at the steady progress of Ceylon, even at a time when financial depression had affected every portion of the globe. From his explanation of the manner in which the estimated revenue for the next twelve months—between Rs.14,000,000 and Rs.15,000,000—will be dealt with, it appears that liberal provisions have been made for public works, which, however, are to be carried out with a due regard for economy, in accordance with the opinion expressed by His Excellency the Governor in his speech at the opening of the Council, that the limit of expenditure had been reached. On the whole, there is every reason to believe that the colony is making steady progress, notwithstanding the financial depression alluded to, the prevalence of leaf disease and floods, that have so seriously interfered with the harvest of the native tillers of the soil.

THE following Imperial decree has been published at Peking:—"Tso-Tsung-t'ang reports having delivered to the foreign traders and officials in Kashgaria safe-conducts back to their respective countries, and having admitted certain tribes of Bourouts to the Imperial allegiance. He also begs that the Chinese officers who turned against their former Andijan masters and declared for the Chinese flag, may be forgiven the offence of having taken office under the enemy, and be only nominally degraded. Having reduced Kashgaria and Sungaria to submission, Tso-Tsung-t'ang must do his best to dispel Our Imperial anxiety by arranging a systematic organisation as a sequel to the conquest. The chief, Bay-en-Akhoond, for whose crimes even death is an inadequate punishment, must be caught at once, in vindication of the majesty of the law.

He having, together with Kuli Beg ank Machwang, escaped into Russian territory, Tso-Tsung-t'ang must instruct Lin-Kin-tung to take measures for their arrest, and not delay retribution on those hell-fiends longer than can be helped. Let the Foreign Board remonstrate with the Russian envoy and demand from him the surrender of these men, nor permit such rebels to regard Russia as an Alsatian refuge. Let the Yoump (? Kivin), Moollals, and the British traders and officials in Yarkund be (as advised) sent home under safe-conduct."

THE view taken of the situation by a large number of the educated natives is given by the Hindoo Patriot, which thinks it is amusing to observe the attitude which the Russians are assuming in this situation. "They are creating fresh complications in Europe, which have, apparently, nonplussed England. Then a portion of the Russian Press is advocating a 'benevolent neutrality' with regard to Afghanistan. What does it mean? It means that Russia will not give direct cause of quarrel with England, but that Russia will render under-hand assistance to Cabul as much as it likes. The Muscovite will play the same game in the Afghan war that he played in the late Servian war. Russian officers had volunteered for the Servian army, and they may do, and have perhaps done, the same for the Afghan army. So that Russia herself will remain in the background, but her men will be in the front. But Russia's position in Asia seems to be regarded with jealousy by some of the great Asiatic Powers. There seems to be no longer an entente cordiale between Persia and Russia. Then Russia is jealous of the Chinese occupation of Kashgaria, and, according to the latest report, China has demanded from Russia the surrender of Kashgarian fugitives. Our Government may find this an opportunity for alliance with Persia and China. The situation on all sides is thus gloomy. It is impossible to say where or how this quarrel of our Government with Afghanistan will end."

In describing the funeral of one of the crew of the Sunbeam, named George Bonnor, who died of dysentery at Larnaca, the Cyprus paper says that the church of St. George at that place contains a tomb bearing the following inscription:—"Interred, Peter Deleaw, London merchant, who departed this life the 2nd May, 1692."

CYPRUS

NIKOSIA, NOV. 22.

IN the last issue of the Cyprus Gazette the following appointments are given:—To the Executive Council: Col. Biddulph, C.B., Col. Brackenbury, C.B. (during the absence of Mr. Kellner). To the Legislative Council: Col. Biddulph, C.B. (during the absence of Mr. Kellner). Staff Commander Bond is appointed superintendent of the port of Larnaca. Col. Biddulph is to be acting Financial Commissioner during absence of Mr. Kellner. We shall very shortly have a bi-weekly mail from England, which will obviate the inconvenience at present complained of, by which the Cyprus mail arrives a few hours before the departure of the English mail. We are also to have our Larnaca mail earlier, so that letters can leave Nikosia at 12 instead of 3 p.m., and be delivered in Larnaca the same evening, enabling us to have an answer next day. By existing arrangements this takes two days.

I told you in my last that the harbour question was on the tapis. The great expense of constructing a break-water to overcome the natural disadvantages of Larnaca will most likely lead to Famagusta being ultimately fixed upon. An engineer, by name Meillard, is at present surveying there, and will report to Government. Meanwhile, Sir George Elliott is sending out three engineers, who will have every advantage afforded them by order of the Governor. The firm of Greenfield and Co. have offered to place all their plant, at present engaged in harbour work at Alexandria, at the service of the Government. I understand, however, that the various schemes will be fully considered simply on their merits. Mr. Brassey, you may suppose, did not come here for pleasure only. He has busily sought information, willingly afforded by the Government as to the nature of the ground, and other points, with a view of constructing a railway between Larnaca and the capital.

The 20th Regiment, at present stationed at Halifax, will succeed the 42nd, which goes to Gibraltar, and thence home after an absence of thirteen years. It is hoped that, coming at the best period of the year (they will arrive about Christmas), they will become acclimatised, and so Government will be able to meet Parliament not only with a good Cyprus budget—about which there can be little doubt—but with excellent returns as to the health of our troops here. At present officials are at their wit's end to lower the returns of fever and ague, which, I regret to say, are still very high from all quarters of the island. The weather does not change; bright, warm, breezy days succeed one another, and serious doubts are beginning to be entertained about the crops, for the rains are over six weeks due. Old hands assure us that, if the new moon does not bring a change, we shall not have any rains at all. We are looking forward to the arrival of the 20th, for it is said that the right wing and band will be stationed in the town: This will render the bastions very lively of an evening—a great want, for we are absolutely dependent on ourselves for recreation and amusement. The Eastern Land Telegraph Line, between Larnaca and Nikosia, is now on the point of completion, being within a few miles of us.

Next April will see great changes here. We shall have lost Mr. Kellner, Col. Biddulph, and in all probability the chief commandant of military police, Col. Brackenbury. Col. Dormer has already gone, being appointed adjutant-general to Malta. But I believe that Col. White, the commissioner for Larnaca, whose leave expires on the 3rd proximo, will be seconded, and so we shall have the further benefit of his services in that district.

Government is very active in hunting up abuses. The commissioner of Nikosia has already unearthed two genuine cases of slavery, and at Limassol a standing crop of twenty donums of ezrah (bang), a sort of haschish, have been destroyed by Government order. It is difficult to say how much a donum is, for almost every village has its own measure; but the one generally accepted is this—1,000 donums of 60ft. x 60ft. equal 517 acres. I put it on a large scale, as affording a better idea.

The revenues of church property, which, under the Turks, used to be remitted to Constantinople, less a small percentage for expenses, are now obliged to be retained here and expended for the good of the island. Thus, the rich Turkish mosque of San Sofia, which has an income of between three and four thousand pounds, and used to spend annually about £120 for expenses, is about to devote £800 to restoring the interior, which has fallen into sad dilapidation since the time of the Venetians.

The modifications in the law courts, and the adaptation of English law to the peculiar conditions of Cyprus, are advancing rapidly to completion under the able superintendence of Mr. Cookson, legal adviser to the Government. Various ordinances to guide those who have to administer justice are being carefully translated into Greek and Turkish, and printed for distribution. Indeed, in all departments the greatest activity prevails, and nothing proves more the beneficial results that have already accrued than the good opinion and good faith entertained by both Turks and Greeks towards us.

THE following civil appointments to offices in the Government of Cyprus are published for general information in the Cyprus Gazette of Nov. 5:—* Col. G. R. Greaves, C.B. (chief of the staff), chief secretary to Government, Aug. 9; St. L. A. Herbert, Esq., private secretary and clerk of the councils, July 13; * C. A. Cookson, Esq., legal adviser, Aug. 30; * G. W. ### THE CENTRAL ASIAN CORRESPONDENCE.

A SERIES of despatches relating to Central Asia has been issued, commencing with papers which bear upon the conquest of Khiva by Russia, and the explanations given by Prince Gortschakoff of the Treaty of Peace concluded between the Czar and the Khan of Khiva, which supplements the Blue-book on Afghan affairs. On Jan. 28 Lord A. Lottus gives an account of an interview with Prince Gortschakoff, in which the latter assured him regarding Afghanistan that "The Imperial Government considered that kingdom beyond the sphere of their political action, and that, happen what might in the internal state of that country, the Imperial Government would not interfere." At the same time it was made clear that Russia held herself free to punish any attempt on the part of the Turcomans, or of the Ameer of Afghanistan acting through them, to make mischief in her settlements. In October, 1875, Baron Jomini gave proof of Russia's jealousy on this head by drawing the attention of the British representative at St. Petersburg to the reported intrigues which the Ameer was carrying on amongst the Turcoman tribes. The reply to that is an instruction to the Indian Government to inform the Russian Foreign-office of the advice and counsel which have been given to the Ameer for the purpose of preventing him from interfering with neighbouring States. About this time, however, our native agent at Cabul sends numerous despatches—brief, but by no means devoid of significant information—as to the reception of a native agent of Russia at Cabul, bearing apparently some complimentary letters from General Kaufmann. In February, 1876, a despatch is sent to Lord Derby by Count Schouvaloff, agreeing with the proposal of an English Memorandum on the subject, and stating that after the arrangement come to about Afghanistan—that it is to remain outside the sphere of Russian influence—"the two Cabinets should regard as terminated the discussions relative to the intermediate zone, which have been recognised to be impractical;" that "while retaining entire freedom of action they should be guided by a mutual desire to pay due regard to their respective interests and necessities by avoiding, as far as possible, any immediate contact with each other, and any collisions between the Asiatic States placed within the circle of their influence."

With regard to the illicit correspondence carried on between Tashkend and Cabul for several years, the Viceroy of India pointed out on the 18th of September, 1876, that from 1870 letters from the Russian generals, Kaufmann or Kolpakovsky, have, according to the reports of the British native agent at Cabul, been sent to Shere Ali, and that these letters are not merely complimentary, but affect the foreign and domestic affairs of Afghanistan. They show signs of increasing in frequency, and, worst of all—

"The Ameer, though at first regarding the communications with distrust, and seeking the advice of the British Government as to the tenour of his reply, now acknowledges their receipt in cordial terms, and without consulting the Government of India. It will be perceived from the appended extracts from the diaries of August 11 and 14 that another Russian agent has, within the last few weeks, arrived in Afghan territory, and left Balkh on August 7 en route for Cabul, bearing a further letter from the Russian general. We may add that, notwithstanding the arrival of this second agent, his precursor still lingers at Cabul; and that we have received from an unofficial source information, which we are of course unable to verify, that secret nightly conferences are taking place between him and the Ameer."

The correspondence soon took a more intimate form, resulting at last in the despatch of the mission of General Stolietoff. One of our native agents sent the following intelligence in August of the present year:—"Some time ago a Russian envoy brought a letter to the Ameer from the Russian Government. This letter contained a number of questions or proposals. With reference to these proposals the Ameer has informed the envoy that, as the Government of Afghanistan is not totally independent in making a choice, and

The ruler of the principality cannot do any act without assembling and consulting the Mahomedan public, the carrying out of the proposals of the Russian authorities is an impossibility without the acquiescence of the entire body of the Afghans, notwithstanding that he was prepared to agree to the Russian orders or demands; that he had, therefore, addressed all the grands of the country residing in Candahar, Herat, Turkestan, and Badakshan, intimating to them the proposals, and asking their opinion, advice, and counsel in the matter, desiring them at the same time to consult their tribes and parties on the subject, and to communicate their replies by letter, the more important of their number coming to Cabul in person with their answers; and that the proposals have created a great excitement among the population. It is heard from a reliable source that one day the Ameer received intimation that a Christian Russian envoy, accompanied by Sayad Rahim Khan, the brother of the Khan of Khiva, had left the Russian capital and was on his way to Cabul to discuss matters with his Highness."

And to the official inquiries our Government made at St. Petersburg as to the accuracy of the report concerning General Stolito's mission, Mr. Plunkett reports that on the 10th of September, not having received any answer to his letter to M. de Giers, he applied to M. Melnikoff for an explanation, and was told that the Russian Chargé d'Affaires in London had been instructed to clear the matter up. At last, on the 13th, Mr. Plunkett is able to report that he has received a note from M. de Giers, which reiterates his former explanations, namely—

"That the dispositions of the Imperial Government in Central Asia were affected by the political condition in which Russia was placed by the attitude of England during the late crisis in the East, but that now those dispositions are the same as formerly, and are not of a nature to excite the suspicions of her Majesty's Government. M. de Giers adds that the mission erroneously attributed to General Abramoff is of a provisional and purely courteous character, and therefore does not clash with the assurances which I had cited; and he concludes by expressing the hope that the explanations which M. de Bartholomei has already been entrusted to furnish to your lordship will have thrown sufficient light upon the situation."

To this note of M. de Giers, which is forwarded, Lord Salisbury replies that he infers from it that M. de Giers "acknowledges that all former assurances of the Russian Government in regard to Afghanistan have now renewed their validity." The last letter in the correspondence is as follows:—

The Marquis of Salisbury to Mr. Plunkett.

"Foreign-office, Sept. 30, 1878.

"Sir,—In the note from M. de Giers of Aug. 27 (Sept. 8), of which copy is enclosed in your despatch of the 13th inst., reference is made to explanations which the Russian Chargé d'Affaires in London had been instructed to offer in regard to the recent proceedings of the Russian authorities in Central Asia. The communications made by M. Bartholomei have been generally to the same effect as what has been stated by M. de Giers. He has stated that the military and political measures adopted in Turkestan were actuated by the necessities of the situation caused by the state of affairs in regard to Turkey, and were called forth especially by the attitude of Great Britain towards Russia. General Kaufmann's proceedings, he said, must therefore be regarded as the result of a course imposed upon him by the force of circumstances. As I had spoken to M. Bartholomei of a letter from the Emperor which was supposed to have been transmitted to Shere Ali Khan, he asked the Russian Government for information on the point, and subsequently said that he was authorised to state that there had never been any question of sending such a letter.—I am, &c.,

(Signed) "SALISBURY."

COMMISSARIAT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It is well to recall the wise advice of our greatest Indian statesman, Sir Henry Lawrence, and to provide for the efficiency of the commissariat, and against embezzlement, fraud, and forgery by native officials. Many of our brave soldiers died during the first winter of the Crimean war owing to the inefficiency of the commissariat and transport arrangements, and if we have as bad a military audit department now as we had a famine relief audit last year the Government will speedily become insolvent, while our soldiers perish with cold or for want of good food.

No force that the Russians can bring against us on the Indus will conquer us if we attend to three great maxims of good government for India:—

First—Good finance.

Second—Efficient armies.

Third—Contentment of the races subject to us.

1st. Good finance is impossible in India without efficient means of audit. The newspaper press cannot criticise the expenditure of Government in 1874 and 1877 until it shall have been supplied with detailed and truthful accounts. No one knows, or seems to know, how the millions have gone which have been granted for relieving famine.

2nd. Our armies can never be efficient without good means of communication. Is Government prepared to complete the railroad to Attock, and to erect an iron bridge at that place across the Indus? Has Government entertained the idea of making a military road from Lahore, or from Mooltan to Bunnoo and Thull, so as to be able to communicate readily with the army on the Khoorum, or does it intend to depend on the line through Kohat, which may be broken at any moment by the Oorukzaie clans? Were General Roberts' force to suffer a repulse it would be found very difficult to reinforce it. A glance at the map will prove this.

Has any military officer of experience ever seen and approved of the road to Quetta? When may we hope to see a practicable road from Mooltan to Deri Ghazi Khan, and a pontoon bridge at the latter place?

3rd. Russia's great hope of conquering India rests in her confidence that she can sow disaffection among our native subjects and foment internal disturbances. The first step towards preserving the peace in India must be the restoration of power and authority to district officers. As long as the latter are considered merely as clerks to carry out the orders of an ignorant centralised authority, so long will India be in danger; and whenever a revolt may occur no one will know what to do or to whom to look.—Your obedient servant,

T.

"THE BANKRUPTCY OF INDIA" A DELUSION.

MR. HYNDMAN'S "Bankruptcy of India," the first article in the October number of the Nineteenth Century, deserves to be attentively examined, both because of the sensation it has provoked at home, and because it must be regarded as the culmination of all the attacks which have recently been made on English rule in India. The force of misrepresentation can no further go. It would be impossible for any one to cram into the same space a larger number of inaccurate and grossly extravagant statements than Mr. Hyndman has fathered in this article. From the fuss made about the paper by the English press we expected to find in it a display of much ingenuity and learning; but, to our disgust, Mr. Hyndman turns out to be a simple disciple of our old friend Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, whom he calls "a singularly able native writer," and whose figures form the foundation of his whole theory about the "Bankruptcy of India." Mr. Dadabhai, as our readers are aware, holds the opinion that English rule is draining India of her wealth, and exhausting even that fertility of the soil for which the country has been famous for countless ages. It is true that, from the dawn of history, India has been the chief storehouse of the Old World, that she has been the envy of other nations for the almost inexhaustible variety of the products which her fruitful soil brings forth for the comfort and delight of man, and that, till the discovery of America and the development of the agricultural resources of the new continent by European skill, she reigned without a rival in the markets of the East and the West. Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, however, maintains that this supremacy has passed away, that India does not now produce food enough to support her own children, and that England is responsible for this decay, because she has appropriated all the wealth of India. He produces, in support of this assertion, figures showing that the annual yield of the crops in India is worth a very small sum; and though we in Bombay know that a Bombay cockney like Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji is just as much of an authority about the agricultural produce of India as the three tailors of Tooley-street may have been about the agricultural produce of England, the ingenuous Mr. Hyndman accepts them en bloc, and says "there is no reason to doubt the general correctness of his estimate," that the agricultural and manufacturing produce of all India is not worth more than £300,000,000, or 31s. 6d. a-head for a gross population of 199,000,000. We have often exposed the absurdity of these figures, and we will now go through the weary task again. First of all, let us note that, out of this total of £300,000,000, the exports of Indian produce and manufactures each year amount to £63,000,000, leaving only £237,000,000 in the country. Mr. Hyndman estimates that the manufactures of all India are worth £80,000,000, of which we may take the proportion exported as about £10,000,000. Deducting the balance of £70,000,000 from £237,000,000, we get £167,000,000 as the net value of the food left in the country to maintain 199,000,000 of people. This gives us an average of 17s. a-head for the whole year, or of 4½ pies—a little more than a farthing—a-head for each day. With the echoes of the controversy of 1877 ringing in our ears about the quantity of food necessary for the bare subsistence of human beings, we ask it is possible for the people of India to live from day to day for 4½ pies a-head? The reductio ad absurdum of Mr. Hyndman's figures is complete if we consider that a very large and an increasing proportion of the population live very well indeed, consuming a rupee's worth a-head each day of the necessities of life, to say nothing of the luxuries which India also produces, and thus leaving, according to our author's estimate, little or nothing for the rest; and that, nevertheless, he thinks the numbers of the people are certainly not falling off under English rule.

We shall not imitate Mr. Hyndman's presumption in attempting to frame an estimate of the wealth of India. One or two general observations, however, may perhaps be permitted us. We have shown that Mr. Hyndman's estimate is ludicrously insufficient to provide the population with a sufficiency of even the meanest necessities of life, with a handful of grain, in fact, to keep body and soul together. Yet we know that, in addition to the grain crops, the agricultural population possesses large herds of cattle. This is one fact which shows that there is much exaggeration in the common talk about the poverty of the country. Another is the remarkably small proportion of the agricultural population that came upon the relief works in the Bombay Presidency last year. Undoubtedly, the people who did not ask for relief may in many cases have suffered great hardships, but their ability to bear these hardships shows that they cannot have been so badly off as is commonly supposed. The fact that India, which imports no food, increases her population, and still sends abroad a large share of her annual produce, is surely a conclusive proof that in ordinary years she produces enough to feed and buy clothing for all her children, and that her exports consist merely of superfluities of produce which used to rot on the ground till the English made roads and railways to carry them down to the sea, and manufactures which, according to Mr. Hyndman, owe their existence to English capital, and which certainly could never have flourished without English protection. But to resume. If an additional proof is wanted of India's prosperity, we have only to look at what she imports. She takes as much clothing and machinery as she wants from foreign countries, and then gets the balance due to her for her exports in gold and silver. Mr. Hyndman starts the astounding theory that much of the bullion brought into India represents "the proceeds of loans raised or guaranteed by Government, and brought into India as a borrowed fund, wherewith to pay the wages of labourers, engineers, &c., engaged on public works." But the proceeds of loans raised in England are always set against the home charges. The gold and silver exported to this country passes almost entirely through private hands; and, in any case, it is absorbed in India, and thus becomes part of the accumulated wealth of the country. It is obvious that a country which does not grow food enough for its people to eat could not afford to purchase and hoard immense stores of gold and silver; yet this is what India does systematically. According to a recent Parliamentary return this country has swallowed up £382,000,000 of bullion since the beginning of the present century. One-third of this amount consisted of gold, and of the silver balance but a small proportion can now be in circulation as current coin of the realm; so that by far the largest proportion of this immense sum represents savings of the people of India. We do not want to trouble our readers with too many figures; but, when we mention that the net imports of treasure into India amounted in 1875-76 to £3,000,000, in 1876-77 to £7,400,000, and in 1877-78 to £15,000,000, it will be readily understood that this process of accumulation is still going on.—Bombay Gazette.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The following officers have been allotted annuities from the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund from the 1st January, 1879:—Surg. Maj. C. Palmer, M.D., Deputy Surg. Gen. H. M. Cannon, M.B., Surg. Maj. F. Pearson, Surg. Maj. J. C. Corbyn, M.B., Surg. Maj. C. T. Taske, Surg. Maj. G. Barnard, Surg. Maj. J. Ewart, M.D., and Surg. Maj. R. Moir, M.D., retired.—Indian Daily News.

IMPERIAL CIRCLE P.W.D.—The Imperial Circle of Public Works at Simla has been abolished, and Mr. Smith, its superintending engineer, will probably be appointed to the Darjeeling Circle, ousting Mr. Leonard Roberts, who may go to Patna. Captain Cole, who was also attached to the Imperial Circle, has been retained by Sir Andrew Clarke as a sort of architect-in-chief. Mr. Blair, the other executive engineer of this condemned circle, has been made over to the Punjab Government.—Indian Daily News.

A MAN-EATING ALLIGATOR.—A correspondent, writing from Chandbally, gives some particulars of a man-eating alligator:—"The rivers of Orissa are infested with alligators, and every now and then one of these creatures acquires a reputation as a man-eater and is then hunted down. Early last week information was brought to Mr. Chapman, inspector of police at Chandbally, that a man had been carried off. It appears the poor fellow was lying in his boat with his feet hanging over the side, when the alligator made a snap at his feet, pulled him into the water, and made off. On receiving this report Mr. Chapman manned his boat and set off to the Damrah river, some miles from Chandbally, in pursuit. After several hours' search the muggur was seen crossing the river, and was allowed to gain the opposite bank. After crawling up the bank, it proceeded to make a meal off its victim, and, whilst so engaged, was, by a lucky shot, killed on the spot. The inspector had it cut open, and there were found in its stomach twenty-six pairs of brass anklets and bangles, weighing no less than 14 seers. There were also two sets of gold earrings, and a number of toe-rings. It is supposed this alligator must have devoured four women, five children, and an unknown number of persons who wore no jewellery. Mr. Chapman deserves credit for his promptness."—Bombay Gazette.

THE LICENSE TAX.—The secretary of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce has received the following reply to the memorial relative to the license tax, forwarded from the chamber:—"India-office, London, August 15, 1878.—From the Right Honourable Viscount Cranbrook, her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council to his Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor-General of India in Council.—1. I have received your financial (separate revenue) letter, dated the 3rd June last, No. 11, forwarding a memorial from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, dated the 23rd March last, relative to the license tax recently imposed in India, and praying that it may not be sanctioned 'until it has been amended, so as to include every official class within her Majesty's Indian territories, and to provide that all assessment shall be determined by a standard of uniformity.' 2. The memorial transmitted by you has been carefully considered in council by me, but the representations therein contained have not convinced me of the expediency of negating the Act under which the license tax is now levied. 3. I request that you will inform the memorialists that her Majesty's Government must decline to comply with the prayer of their memorial."—Englishman.

COURT-MARTIAL ON AN OFFICER.—At a general court-martial, assembled at Fort William, Calcutta, on Saturday, the 26th day of October, 1878, Major Owen Ivan Chalmers, Bengal Staff Corps, was arraigned on the following charge:—"Conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Fort William, on the 15th of September, 1878, been drunk at dinner at the officers' mess of the 16th (The Lucknow) Regiment of Native Infantry." The court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to be severely reprimanded. Sir F. P. Haines, in confirming the sentence, wrote:—"The court having taken a very lenient view of an extremely grave offence, Major Chalmers is hereby severely reprimanded."—Pioneer.

DRAINAGE IN HOOGHLY DISTRICTS.—The report on the completion of the Dankuni drainage works in the Hooghly districts, and the results obtained from them, shows that the reclamation of 6,808 beeghas of land, which were previously unfit for cultivation, has been effected, and that a further area of 29,928 beeghas has been materially improved. The total value of these improvements is estimated at Rs.6,38,518, the expenditure incurred on them being only Rs.4,10,129. The works are also believed to have been beneficial in improving the sanitary condition of the adjoining villages. In remarking on the report the Secretary of State notes "with satisfaction the observation by the Government of Bengal that 'where the people understand the nature and purpose of drainage works Government may look for intelligent advice and co-operation in carrying them out.'"—Pioneer.

THE BEHAR ZEMINDARS.—An influential meeting of the Behar zemindars took place on Tuesday at Sonepore. The Maharajah of Hutwa, Maharajah Kuwar of Bettiah, the Rajah of Shewhur, the manager of the Doonraon Raj, and many other leading zemindars joined in the movement. It was unanimously resolved to establish a Behar Landholders' Association. The Maharajah of Hutwa presided.—Pioneer.

REGISTRATION IN OUDH.—During 1877-78 the gross receipts of the registration department, Oudh, amounted to Rs.73,588, and the total expenditure was Rs.39,627. The number of documents registered was 51,062, showing an increase in every district of the province, and the increase of the optional registration of immovable property by sales of Rs.100 and by mortgages of the same description were mainly owing to the bad season which necessitated people to borrow money and pledge their property as security.—Times of India.

AN OLD RESIDENT.—A very old resident has just died at Dehra. This is Mr. Johnson, who came out to this country with the first corps of sappers and miners of the East India Company upwards of sixty years ago. His son is the present Wazir of the Maharajah of Kashmir.—Times of India.

WAHABI CONSPIRATOR.—The deceased generally visited Hajee Jackariah's mosque on the Chitpore road, opposite to which he lived, every evening, attended by a number of servants. On Saturday evening he left unattended, and just as he was crossing the road was knocked down by a buggy and horse driven by Mr. Mahomed Shah, son of Golam Nuki, one of the Mysore princes. The injuries were slight, but the shock was too great for the old man, who expired a few minutes after he got home. He was attended by Dr. Munnylall Dutt, who certified to the cause of death. The coroner was soon on the spot, and upon inquiry, being satisfied that the driver was in no way to blame, considered the holding of an inquest unnecessary. The body was conveyed by rail to Patna on Sunday evening, and was accompanied by no less than two hundred Mahomedans, all dressed in white. His remains will be interred in the Emambara in Patna.—Englishman.

MADRAS.

PROPOSED PLOUGHING MATCH AT SAIDAPET.—We see that Mr. Benson, superintendent of the experimental farm at Saidapet, is arranging for a ploughing match to be held on the farm. The date is not yet fixed, but the programme is ready. From it we learn that the prizes are to be divided between three classes. Class I. will be open to all. Five prizes are to be given as follows:—1. A Swedish plough (value) Rs.25. 2. An American plough, Rs.20. 3. Implements or seeds, Rs.15. 4. Do., Rs.10. 5. Do., Rs.5. Class II. is open to the students of the Agricultural College only. The prizes here are:—1. A Swedish plough (value), Rs.25. 2. An American plough, Rs.20. 3. Implements or seeds, or agricultural books, Rs.12½. 4. Do., Rs.7½. Class III. is for ryots or their labourers only. Three prizes are given:—An American plough, value Rs.20 and two money prizes of Rs.10 and Rs.5 respectively.—Madras Times.

THE COONOR VOLUNTEERS.—At a recent meeting held at Coonoor, presided over by Mr. R. Woolley (says the Ooty paper), Mr. Harper Reade, late a captain of the 3rd Buffs, was elected captain of No. 4 Company of the Nilgiri Rifle Corps, vice Mr. Bell, resigned. A sufficient number of members having been enrolled for the formation of a second company at Coonoor, the meeting proceeded to elect officers for the company. Mr. Samuel Bates was elected captain, Mr. J. Egan lieutenant, and Mr. E. Hall sub-lieutenant. The following gentlemen were elected honorary captains, viz., Messrs. R. Woolley, J. Deschamps, P. Walsh, L. Reilly, and S. Honeywell.—Madras Athenæum.

THE IMPERIAL SPINNING AND WEAVING COMPANY.—Consequent on the great success which has attended the establishment of cotton spinning and weaving mills in this Presidency and other parts in India, it has been proposed to start a new mill called the Imperial Spinning and Weaving Company, with a capital of Rs.1,000,000, divided into 10,000 shares of Rs.100 each share. The major portion of the shares have been taken up by the Glasgow merchants, and Messrs. Wilson and Co., managing agents in Madras, have disbursed the remaining portion. The building proposed to be erected will be arranged according to the most approved principles, and will be fitted up with the best and newest machinery from England. The capital of £100,000 is considered amply sufficient for a mill of 30,000 spindles and 300 looms, with extra engine power for future increase, and an adequate working capital.—Madras Athenæum.

WANTS OF THE MYSORE PLANTERS.—In the first place the land tenure must be, once and for all, and reasonably, settled. At the present time the planters hold their lands at the will and pleasure of the State; so that they are liable to be ousted, if things remain as they are, when the native Rajah assumes the reins of government. The tenure once settled, private enterprise will be largely attracted to the Mysore estates. The difficult question, too, as to whether an acreage or an excise-tax would best suit the Mysore coffee districts will have to be determined. It is probable that all the native planters, and most of the European, would prefer the halut or excise tax, provided it was reduced to the same proportion as the acreage tax in British territory. The halut, it should be noted, is imposed only upon the produce exported; so that the planter is not called upon, as in Wynaad and Coorg, to pay the same amount of tax for a bumper crop as for a short one. Two other wants which rank next in importance are a bill to prevent coffee stealing, and a labour law. The Mysore planters feel the want of these two laws quite as much as their brethren in Wynaad, Coorg, and elsewhere in Southern India. Indeed, coffee-stealing is carried on on a larger scale on the Mysore estates, as the quantities of green coffee exposed for sale in the Bangalore bazaars clearly testify. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the extension of the Madras Act to the Province of Mysore will not be long delayed. The extradition of defaulting coolies is another important question. A cooly who makes his escape from Wynaad into Mysore may be arrested and sent back under a warrant issued by a Mysore magistrate. But when a cooly escapes from Mysore into Wynaad the latter authorities refuse to interfere. One of the subjects which the planters have been urging upon Government is the formation of the coffee taluqs in Kadur into a separate district. The scheme is a capital one, and ought to receive the support of Government.—Madras Times.

PUBLIC WORKS LOANS.—The following is a statement of loans made under the Public Works Loan Act of 1871 (all at 4½ per cent.) during 1877-78:—Tinnevely Local Fund Board.—For reconstructing the ruined portion of the bridge over the Satur River, Rs.30,000. Calicut Local Fund Board.—For the completion of the Tambracherry Ghat Road and approach in Wynaad, Rs.89,000. Saidapet Local Fund Board.—For constructing an iron girder bridge across the Cortelliar River, Rs.199,790. Negapatam Municipality.—For constructing a market in that town, Rs.25,000. Ootacamund Municipality.—For the completion of certain roads in that town, Rs.12,420. Tellicherry Local Fund Board.—For the completion of the Peria Ghat road and the construction of a fair-weather road from Karoth to the Peria line in Wynaad, Rs.60,000. Coimbatore Municipality.—For the improvement of the water supply of the town, Rs.4,000. Coonoor Municipality.—For the erection of market sheds in that town, Rs.7,248.—Madras Times.

FREE THOUGHT IN MADRAS.—An Anglo-Tamil weekly journal, entitled the Philosophical Enquirer, price one anna, has been established in Madras. Its motto is from Bacon:—"Man, the interpreter of Nature, knows no more than he has observed of the order of Nature."—Madras Times.

HOW TO ADDRESS NATIVES.—In a notification dated Oct. 31, and published in the Gazette, His Grace the Governor in Council has ruled as follows:—"The undermentioned forms of address, selected as equivalent respectively to 'Mr.' and 'Esquire,' will be used from and after this date, in all official correspondence, in the case of those native functionaries who, by virtue of their office under Government, would be addressed as 'Mr.' or 'Esquire' if they happened to be Europeans or East Indians, viz.:—1. The incumbents of all appointments made and gazetted by the Government, and of appointments the monthly salary of which is not under 200 rupees a-month, will, if Mahomedans, bear after their proper names the affix of 'Sahib Bahadar;' all others the affix of 'Garu' or 'Avargal,' with the letters M.R.R. prefixed. 2. The incumbents of appointments not made and gazetted by Government, the monthly salary of which is 50 rupees, but under 200 rupees, will, if Mahomedans, bear the affix of 'Sahib;' all others the prefix of M.R.R. N.B.—Native gentlemen holding the office of a justice of the peace or of a judge, so styled, are entitled to be addressed as 'Esquire,' agreeably to the English usage.—Madras Times.

NATIVE PORCELAIN.—His Grace the Governor has imported a small quantity of the material used in English manufacture of porcelain for the purpose of testing the capabilities of native artisans. The experiments are being carried out in the local school of art.—Times of India.

BOMBAY.

THE BOMBAY SAW MILLS.—On the 7th ult. an adjourned annual general meeting of the Bombay Saw Mills Company (Limited) was held at the registered office of the company at 3 p.m., the Honourable Morarjee Goculdass being in the chair. The audited accounts for the year ending 30th of June last were passed. The chairman stated that, in consequence of the suspension of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co., the secretaries and treasurers of the company, who had always provided the working capital, some difficulty had been experienced in conducting the finances. He therefore proposed that the company should not pay a dividend this year, but should carry the amount at credit of profit and loss account, Rs.30,860-6-8, and the amount due by Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. for guaranteed interest, Rs.15,000, to next year's account. The amount guaranteed by Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. is fully secured by the lien on the shares of the company, in accordance with Article 15 of the articles of association, held by them, so that although no dividend will be paid, the company will lose nothing by the suspension of the secretaries and treasurers. This was formally put to the meeting and carried. The Honourable Morarjee Goculdass was re-elected a director, and the appointment of Mr. W. M. Macaulay as a director in the place of Mr. H. Maxwell was confirmed. Mr. Burjorjee Muncherjee and Mr. H. R. Cormack were appointed auditors for the ensuing year.—Bombay Gazette.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT FORCE.—Brigadier General T. Wright, C.B., commanding the Hyderabad Contingent Troops, will hold a small camp of exercise at Aurungabad, Deccan, on or about the 10th Dec. The general will proceed on a tour of inspection in the following order, leaving Bolarum on the 6th Nov.:—For Edichpore 8th to the 12th; Hingolee, inspection until the 26th, Aurungabad, arriving about the 4th, and staying there until Christmas.—Bombay Gazette.

MARINE SURVEYS.—We understand that Lieutenant Jarrad, R.N., deputy superintendent of Marine Surveys, now in command of No. 1 survey party on the West Coast of India, is, during this working season, to be engaged in surveying Jaighur and the approaches to Bombay harbour. The second party, under Mr. Morris Chapman, I.N., is now employed at Tuticorin, where a re-examination of the approaches to the harbour is much needed.—Indian Daily News.

THE BOMBAY MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—85, Malabar-hill, Bombay, November 2, 1878.—To the subscribers to the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund who have accepted the Secretary of State's offer to take back their subscriptions, and who are senior to Surgeon-Major Boustead.—Gentlemen,—You are aware that Surgeon-Major Boustead has refused to accept the refund, and, as a consequence, his seniors could not get back their subscription until Government consented to accept a sum of Rs.10,000 to guard against any loss to the State by Dr. Boustead receiving an annuity earlier than he could get one in the ordinary course had the fund continued as hitherto. It will take some time to communicate with each member of the fund and obtain from each his share of the Rs.10,000; and as it is feared Government may not keep the offer open long enough to enable a reply to be received from each subscriber, a few of the members here are trying to raise the Rs.10,000 to pay to Government so as to close with Government at once, and let each officer receive back his money. Of course, this has been done in the expectation that every subscriber will pay his share of the Rs.10,000. At the present moment there are forty-five subscribers interested, so the share for each is Rs.222-3-7; but as there will be some expense for printing and postage, I beg to request you will be so good as to send me a cheque for Rs.235. In the event of any member dying, it might be necessary to pay his share, as trustees might not have power to do so. When all is settled I will account to you for any balance. I need not say that the sooner I get your share the better, especially as it is just possible the refund may not be made until the Rs.10,000 be collected. I am to add that this letter is issued with the approval and by the direction of the committee of members here in Bombay acting for the benefit of all.—I am, &c., J. PINKERTON, Surgeon-Major.—Mecca Pilgrim.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.—The bench of justices, in returning an equal number of Europeans and Natives to the new municipal corporation, has given an interesting illustration of the fact that a public body has often a sense of justice and propriety, which may be denied of the individual sections of which it is composed. We believe that the result in this case will give considerable satisfaction to the great body of the public, and that the bench, on seeing this morning the outcome of yesterday's poll, will feel anything but dissatisfaction. The successful candidates must be admitted to be fairly representative men, and the two new European members will bring technical knowledge of a special kind to bear upon the discharge of their new duties. The bench of justices by its proceedings on this occasion has taught a lesson of moderation and fair play, which, it is to be hoped, will be remembered as an example to be imitated by the future corporation when dealing with the diverse interests of our very cosmopolitan city.—Times of India.

COLONEL FULLER.—The following notice of Colonel Fuller's services is taken from the Bombay Government Gazette:—"Colonel J. A. Fuller, R.E., architectural executive engineer and surveyor, and superintending engineer presidency division, being about to proceed to England on furlough, his Excellency the Governor in Council feels he cannot permit this able officer to leave without placing on record the high sense which Government entertain of his labours, skill, and taste, shown in the designing of some and the construction of all the many useful and beautiful public buildings which have been erected during the past fifteen years in Bombay, particularly the following, costing over 2 lakhs of rupees each:—New Secretariat, University Senate Hall, University Library and Clock Tower, High Court, Public Works Offices, Post Office, Telegraph Offices and Signallers' Quarters, Sailors' Home, School of Art, Native General Hospital, Elphinstone High School, Elphinstone College, Victoria and Albert Museum; in all of which, the convenience of the public, as well the Government service, have been successfully studied, and the city of Bombay greatly embellished."

PORT TRUST BILL.—The Bombay Port Trust Bill has been published for discussion. According to its provisions the board will consist of thirteen members. The chairman and five trustees will be appointed by Government. Five elective trustees will be chosen by the Chamber of Commerce, and these eleven will then proceed to choose two native trustees. The chairman will receive a salary to be fixed by Government. The twelve members will receive Rs. 30 a meeting, for not more than one meeting a week. The sums payable for properties and the rates to be levied are all left blank. One section provides that, after payment of the cost of administration and interest, all surplus revenue is to be applied in liquidation of the principal capital debt of the trust.—Times of India.

The Marine Battalion is not to proceed to Puna this drill season, as previously ordered.

We hear that the Parsee Cricket Club have arranged to play a match with the Calcutta Cricket Club, which is expected to arrive here in Christmas week.—Times of India.

CEYLON.

THE SERVICE.—The Gazette notifies the following appointments:—H. Nevill, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests and joint police magistrate, Colombo, and coroner for the district of Colombo. J. D. Mason, Esq., to be acting commissioner of requests and police magistrate, Galle, and coroner for the district of Galle.

FOR PERAK AND JOHORE.—The last Messageries steamer took from Galle as passengers for Singapore Messrs. Forbes Laurie, Kay-Shuttleworth, Watson, and Smith. These gentlemen are going from the Straits Settlements to Perak, and possibly to the State of Johore, with a view to ascertain their suitability for coffee of both varieties, cacao, &c.

WE clip the following items of intelligence from the Ceylon Times:—

Since the departure of the last mail weather has become settled, and we are now having warm bright days and cool nights, with occasional showers from the eastward. This change was very much needed in the low country, and will enable cultivators to house the remains of their wretched crops in tolerable safety. In planting districts the work is now entirely confined to gathering, curing, and despatching, though of the latter there has not been much done to date. The reports from the Dimbulla, Dickoya, and Rakwana districts lead us to believe that the total outturn will be above the latest estimates.

THE FLOOD OUTLETS.—We learn that his Excellency the Governor has sanctioned the immediate commencement of one of the most serviceable flood outlets, viz., that at Talpitiya, near Panadura, which will give the means of escape for the water of the Bolgodde lake in flood time. This will, at the same time, afford employment to a large number of the famishing and needy population, and enable them to provide the means of support for their families during the months to come, and before the next harvest time.

FATAL FIREWORK ACCIDENT.—An accident, attended with fatal consequences, occurred at a pyrotechnic display given by the assistants of Messrs. Cargill, at Colombo, on Nov. 5. An improperly loaded bomb exploded unexpectedly, and a segment of the iron casing struck Mr. Martin, superintendent of works at the New Oriental Hotel, lacerating and breaking his arm. It then struck Mr. Fraser, one of Messrs. Cargill's assistants, in the stomach, inflicting such severe injuries that he died the day after. The bomb had been sent from London on the occasion of the Prince of Wales's visit and used successfully, but on this occasion it had been charged by natives with the explosives they usually employ. An inquest was held, and a verdict of accidental death returned.

CASUALTIES.—The deaths are announced from India of two officers who were promoted to commissions for gallantry displayed in the Indian Mutiny campaigns. Captain J. M. Macdonald, Madras Unattached List, who died last month at Palaveram, where he was cantonment magistrate and commandant of the European Veteran Companies, was given his first commission while serving as a staff-sergeant of the Madras Artillery in the Central Indian campaign; and Captain William Willcocks, Bengal Unattached List, whose death took place at Deyrah Doon on the 28th October, was promoted in September, 1858, for services in the field with the Hyderabad Contingent. The instances of promotion from the ranks in the Indian Army are comparatively rare, the most noteworthy being that of Colonel Brasyer, C.B., the famous commandant of the Ferozepore regiment, known as Brasyer's Sikhs. Colonel Brasyer served throughout the Afghan War, and obtained his ensigncy at the close of the Sutlej campaign. For his services in the Indian Mutiny he won his promotion to captain with the brevets of major and lieutenant-colonel, and in March, 1858, he was included in the list of C.B.'s distributed to the Indian Army. Lieutenant-Colonel William Sheffield, on the retired list of the Indian Staff Corps, was promoted from sergeant-major of the late 73rd N.I. for his services in the Sutlej, and was subsequently under Colonel Brasyer in the Ferozepore regiment.—Broad Arrow.

THE CENTRAL ASIAN CORRESPONDENCE.

THE publication of the correspondence that has taken place in recent years with regard to the Central Asian Question is an event in the public annals of this country that will long be remembered. Its first and most evident result is that the English people is taken into the confidence of the Administration, and has unravelled for it those intricate negotiations, distorted accounts of which have at various periods reached the outer world. And this alone is no unimportant fact, for our countrymen now have an opportunity of perceiving that those few specialists who were partially behind the scenes were right in attributing to the question all that gravity and importance which were for so long denied to it. But its more immediate and present value is as a justification of the policy of the existing Government, who, ever since the despatch of Lord Salisbury of January 22, 1875—a despatch of which it may be said that, whoever its instigator may have been, it marks a new era in our Indian foreign policy, and one to which posterity will recur—have followed out a policy with regard to Afghanistan and Central Asia, which has the special recommendation of taking them conjointly into consideration and of not ignoring the power of Russia in the immediate vicinity of the Indian borderland. To our mind this is the greatest of recommendations. But if it is true to say that the present Viceroy and Home Authorities have to repair the blunders or, rather, the apathy of their predecessors in regard to Shere Ali, how doubly true is it to say that they have to undertake the same task towards their policy in Central Asia!

And what does the correspondence relating to Central Asia tell us? It tells us two things above everything, which are that the policy of Lords Clarendon, Granville, Lawrence, and Northbrook has been proved to have been weak and hesitating by facts, and also that the policy of Russia has been one series of falsehood, dishonesty, and utter want of principle during the last fifteen years. It tells us of weakness and vacillation in the past, just as it does of the undeserved trust and confidence which we have reposed in the word of Russian Ministers. But, to leave the general, and to come to the specific, we find that the correspondence commences shortly after the announcement of that Treaty with the Khan of Khiva in November, 1873, which proclaimed the fact that Russia was resolved to break her engagement towards this country by annexing a considerable portion of territory which she had specifically agreed to restore. The Messenger Official of the 30th November published a plausible ex parte statement of the causes which induced Russia to retain the right bank of the Amou Darya, in which the fear lest "disorder should supervene upon a Russian evacuation" occupied a prominent place. But the practical result of these Khivan negotiations was an acquiescence in the acts of Russia, and that Prince Gortschakoff renewed those protestations to Lord Augustus Loftus that he had so often made—of Afghanistan being outside the sphere of Russia's action. It is, to say the least, an open question whether we should have accepted Russia's excuses, and there are many arguments to support the view that it would have been more prudent to have insisted upon Russia keeping the letter of her bond to us. More especially is this the case when we find a few months later, that a correspondence of an interesting character is going on between General Kaufmann and Shere Ali, and that the former thinks it necessary to place detailed accounts of Russian triumphs before the Afghan ruler and his people. It is here necessary to take the Afghan Blue-book and the Central Asian Correspondence in combination with each other; and by so doing we discover that, just as the Simla Conference was coming to its abortive end, knowledge came to the ears of our authorities that Russia was virtually breaking both the spirit and the letter of her past engagements with us. The recent incident with regard to Khiva should have made the point of this circumstance more keen; yet, either through wilful blindness or sheer incapacity, our authorities seemed unable to adapt the tale to surrounding circumstances. We condoned General Kaufman's "civilities" in 1874, and we have continued so to do ever since, although, as Lord Lytton boldly said the other day, we cannot and we will not tolerate any foreign interference, in any form or shape whatsoever, within the Afghan frontier; until at last we find that those "civilities" have become part of a plan, combined with an ambitious ruler, for upsetting our claim to supremacy in Cabul. Had Shere Ali been accorded, on conditions, that treaty and that support which he desired in 1873, and had we promptly threatened that if General Kaufmann did not at once cease his correspondence we should take vigorous measures to prevent its continuing, then there is good reason to suppose that we could permanently have reconciled ourselves with Shere Ali, and definitely settled the Central Asian Question as well. It is because the occasion was so peculiarly favourable that it is scarcely possible to refrain from passing a very severe judgment upon those who failed to take advantage of it.

The historical Memorandum which Prince Gortschakoff submitted to our Government in April, 1875, is a masterly exposition of Russian policy in Asia, and probably proceeds from the pen of Professor Gregorieff. If we take this as our text and argue from it by the light of the events that have occurred in Central Asia during the last three years, we cannot fail to arrive at the conclusion that all that has been said by Russophobes of the devious course General Kaufman and his superiors were following is more than justified by that document alone. Lord Salisbury's reply to that Memorandum, in a letter dated 22nd of June, 1875, addressed to the Foreign-office, gives the opinion of our India-office upon the rather sweeping generalities in which the Russian writer indulged. We can easily understand that the satisfaction at Prince Gortschakoff's assurances with regard to Afghanistan was "somewhat weakened by the qualifications contained in the concluding paragraphs of his Excellency's letter and the general tenour of the Memorandum which accompanies it." It is rather, however, when we come down to a later period that we find clear evidence of the hold Russian strength was beginning to have upon the imagination of the Ameer. In 1876 Russia had crushed the revolt which had broken out in Khokand, and which had originally arisen from discontent among a powerful section of the Khokandians at the lethargy or tyranny of their ruler, Khudayar Khan; and in March of that year Khokand was annexed, and became the Russian province of Ferghana. That event, which in many respects was more important than the fall of Khiva, and which carried Russian arms in triumph to the Pamir and to the frontier of Kashgar, was announced to Shere Ali in a letter of flowing courtesy, and in an exaggerated strain as to the power of Russia, by the Governor-General of Turkestan himself. The Cabul diaries show that the effect of this great success on the mind of Shere Ali was to confirm the impression that the Khivan campaign had produced, that the power of Russia was greater than the power of this country. A bolder course in 1873 might have nipped that sentiment in the bud; but what was to be expected when there were weakness and blindness where there should have been strength and clear vision? From the Simla Conference to the Stoletoff Mission is but a fresh exemplification of the natural sequence to be found in all human affairs, and Russia's influence in Cabul is but the result of our having refused to accept the conditions on which supremacy in the council chamber of Shere Ali could alone have been secured. The Central Asian Correspondence affords ample proof of the grave necessity, for which a past Administration was mainly responsible, that has compelled us to declare war upon Afghanistan. It is also most instructive as demonstrating the duplicity to which Russian statesmen can stoop, and the falseness that lies at the root of all the protestation which the Government of St. Petersburg has never been chary of giving as the means of escaping from unpleasant dilemmas. In the future it is idle to speculate on what Russia may promise or bind herself to perform. Such guarantees are valueless. The safety of our dominion in India, the attainment of a sound military frontier, and the settlement of our relations with Afghanistan, must all be secured, not by words and diplomatic engagements, but by acts and accomplished facts.

RELEASE OF FAMINE CONVICTS.—There are many prisoners in jail who committed offences under pressure of want, such as petty thefts, killing animals for food, and even infanticide, caused by hunger-frenzy. His Grace the Governor in Council has been pleased to direct the unconditional release of such prisoners as are not old offenders, and have behaved well. The selection will be entrusted to sessions judges and district magistrates, in consultation with the superintendent of police in each district.—Madras Mail.

HOME NEWS.

THE "JUMNA."—Her Majesty's Indian relief troopship Jumna, Captain Parsons, arrived at Portsmouth from Bombay on Tuesday. She brought 16 officers, five officers' wives and families, 349 men, and 34 soldiers' wives, and 87 children. The Jumna called at Cyprus and there embarked the 42nd Regiment for Gibraltar to relieve the 69th Regiment, returning to England.

ROYAL ENGINEERS FOR INDIA.—A detachment of men belonging to the Corps of Royal Engineers are under orders to proceed to India in January for employment under the Indian Public Works Commissioners. The men are now going through a special course of instruction at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for £300,000 in bills on India. The whole amount was allotted to Calcutta, and tenders at 18. 7 5-16d. will receive about 8 per cent., and above in full. This shows a decline of 1/4d. compared with last week, but the proportion allotted then was 95 per cent. against 8 per cent. now. Tenders for £300,000 in Government bills on India will be received at the Bank of England on the 11th inst., of which not more than £120,000 will be drawn on the Government of Bombay. The power reserved by Clause 3 of the advertisement of the 23rd August, 1876, in regard to sums recently advertised, for which tenders have not been accepted, will not be exercised on that occasion.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—A quorum

was not made at Monday's meeting, which stood adjourned from Saturday, but, in accordance with the charter, the report of the directors was considered as taken. The principal statement in the document was that the area to which the company's water had been applied in the season of 1877-78 was 50,919 acres, or an excess of 2,000 acres over the quantity estimated. The directors were unable at present to afford information as to the extent to which irrigation had proceeded during the current season, being without definite returns on the subject. There had been, this season, an unusually heavy rainfall, which had assisted materially the cultivation of dry crops, and the commencement of sowing for the wet crop was only in progress at the date of the last advices.

RETIREMENTS.—Major-General F. W. Swinhoe, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery will shortly retire on a pension of £1,000 per annum. General Swinhoe served through the campaign under Sir Charles Napier against the Beloochee Hill tribes in Upper Sindh in 1845, also the Punjab campaign of 1848-9, including the siege and capture of Mooltan, and battle of Goojerat (medal with two clasps).—Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet Colonel A. H. Heath, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, will shortly retire on a pension of £600 per annum, and a special annuity of £290. Colonel Heath served the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the battles of Sadoolapore, Chillianwallah, and Goojerat (medal with two clasps); siege of Delhi in 1857—mentioned in despatch with especial approbation and thanks for zeal, ability, and coolness in situations of great danger (medal with clasp).—Colonel A. Light, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, will shortly retire from the service on a pension of £600 per annum, with a special annuity of £310 under the new regulations. Colonel Light was present at Meerut at the outbreak of the Mutiny there on the 10th May, 1857. Marched in command of two 18-pounders with Brigadier Wilson's force on 27th May, and was present at the actions of the 29th and 30th May on the Hindun (mentioned in despatches as "having done excellent service with his 18-pounders"); battle of Budle-ke-Serai (wounded) and siege of Delhi from 18th June to 10th September, when forced to leave from illness. Acted as orderly officer to Sir Thomas Seaton with his force in the Dooab, and present at the actions of Gungaiee, Puttiale, and Mynpooree (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp, and brevet of major).—Major E. H. Ryan, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, will shortly retire on a pension of 16s. per diem.—Broad Arrow.

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—On Tuesday, in the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the case of Rameshur Pershad Narain v. Koonj Behari Pattuk and another came on for hearing. This was an appeal from a decree of the High Court of Calcutta, of the 18th of August, 1874, reversing a judgment of the local tribunal at Gya, in the Bengal Presidency. The appellant, who is the owner of five villages, complained of the diversion of water which he alleged ought to flow from the neighbouring estate of the respondents to his own. A large reservoir had long existed on the respondents' land for purposes of irrigation, and overflow channels had been cut from it for the irrigation of the adjoining lands. The appellant asserted that the respondents had erected two dams in the old overflow channels and had made other outlets for the water, leaving his lands dry and useless. The respondents denied the appellant's right to any of the water; but contended that, if any, he was only entitled to the surplus overflow from a particular channel, which they had not infringed. Their lordships, in giving judgment, observed that the right to the water of a river flowing in a natural channel through a man's land and the right to water flowing to it through an artificial water-course constructed on his neighbour's land did not rest on the same principle. In the first instance, each successive riparian owner was, prima facie, entitled to the unimpeded flow of the water in its natural course and to its reasonable enjoyment; in the latter, any right to the flow must rest on some grant or arrangement from the owners or some legal origin. After reviewing the facts their lordships said they would humbly advise her Majesty to reverse both the decrees of the courts below, and to declare that the appellant had a right in the overflow of the water discharged from the reservoir whenever it was so discharged by the respondents, and that such overflow ought to be directed towards the appellant's villages after the respondents' right to the use of it had been satisfied. They would also advise the removal of the dams and the making of other provisions for the protection of the appellant's right. The appellant would have the costs of that appeal and of the original suit; and the parties must bear their own costs in the High Court.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of the proprietors of this company was held on Tuesday at the offices, Leadenhall-street; Mr. W. Fane De Salis in the chair. The chairman, in moving the usual formal resolution for the adoption of the report, said that the company's fleet now consisted of forty-four sea-going ships, and fourteen subsidiary vessels. It was gratifying to the directors to be able to report a continued state of high efficiency, and that, notwithstanding the vast expanse of ocean traversed by the company's ships, no casualty had occurred. It was also pleasing to be able to report that the mails had been conveyed with remarkable punctuality. Since the last meeting the Kaisar-i-Hind—named after her Majesty as Empress of India—had taken her place in the fleet. She was tried at the measured mile, when it was found that her speed equalled nearly nineteen miles an hour, and on a subsequent occasion, during a trip round the Isle of Wight, it was found that her sea-going qualities were excellent, whilst her fittings generally were highly satisfactory. From the list of the fleet the shareholders would observe that three names had disappeared, the Bombay, the Orissa, and the Nubia. The prices of the Bombay and the Nubia appeared in the accounts, but that of the other ship would not appear until the next account. The prices realised had not been large, but it was necessary to get rid of the ships, as they were altogether unfit to the purposes of their trade, and to have had them refitted would only have been waste of money. Turning to the accounts, he said that they had carried to repair and renewal account £250,000. They had also carried as usual £300,000 to insurance and repair account, and following that course, which had received the approval of the shareholders at the last meeting, they had carried an extra sum of £100,000 to the same account. The credit side of the account presented no bright aspect. They were all aware that the great depression of trade had not spared the East, and they would, therefore, be prepared to hear that their earnings for the past year showed a great diminution, which would have been increased had it not been for the strict economy exercised by those who had the management of the company's affairs. It was under these circumstances that they were unable to offer a higher dividend than 2½ per cent. In regard to the new contract, he said that the papers were about to be laid before Parliament. They would be made public before the next meeting, when the subject might be more properly discussed than at the present time. In conclusion, he paid a tribute to the memory of the late Admiral Sir William Hall, and mentioned the fact that Mr. Godfrey, one of the auditors, and Mr. E. P. Bouverie, had been elected to seats at the board, subject to the confirmation of the meeting. In answer to a question, the chairman said that the moneys of the company were only invested in securities of the highest class. A limited bank would be the last thing into which they would put their money. The report was adopted, and the dividend therein recommended declared. Messrs. Bouverie and Godfrey having been re-elected directors, and Mr. J. H. Baddeley having been elected auditor for the year, the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

EASTERN EXTENSION, AUSTRALASIA, & CHINA TELEGRAPH.—An adjourned extraordinary general meeting was held on Tuesday at the Cannon-street Hotel; Mr. John Pender, M.P., presiding. The chairman explained that the meeting was called for the purpose of approving an agreement with the Government of the Australian colonies for the duplication of the Australian cable. At the time of the former meeting the agreement had not been signed, and since then messages had been continually passing between this country and Australia, the result being that they had received a message that morning to the effect that the agreement had been completed. In consideration of the company duplicating the cable the colonies had agreed to pay a subsidy of £32,400 for twenty years. The company have to maintain and work the cable, allowing a rebate on Government messages of 50 per cent., and on Press messages of 75 per cent. Powers are also given to the colonies to purchase the line under certain conditions. The chairman considered that this arrangement, besides giving security in the transmission of traffic, would also prevent competition. During the last two years no less than £32,000 had been lost through interruptions of the traffic. It was now proposed to issue £660,000 of debentures, to redeem which it would be necessary to set aside £20,600 annually for twenty years, the period at which the subsidy expired; thus, without calling on the shareholders for any money, they would double their property. Resolutions were then agreed to in favour of this arrangement and authorising the issue of the debentures.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The adjourned meeting, held on Friday, November 29, gave the final answer that the terms of arrangement are accepted by the shareholders. The meeting was large, although not so large as on the previous occasion, and, with a minute exception, their voice was unanimously in favour of acceptance. The whole proceedings only lasted three-quarters of an hour, the principal part of which was taken up by discussions upon points of detail which can hardly be dealt with at present. The question of the ability of trustees to hold the stock again cropped up, and whether it would be possible to convert annuities into permanent Government stock of India. In effect only about the same answer could be given—namely, that everything would be done that could be done in the matter. One of the speakers maintained that the option to work the line on the terms would render the stock worth at least 140. We congratulate the shareholders upon the substantial conclusion of this great business, and upon having a board so well able to carry it through.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The directors of this company have during the week received tenders for loans at 4 per cent. interest per annum, payable half-yearly, in sums of £100, or in multiples thereof, to the extent of £360,000, on the security, at the option of the lender, either of debentures, transferable by delivery for seven years, from 1st January, 1879, the interest being payable by coupons attached to each debenture, and the payment of both principal and interest being guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council, or of irredeemable debenture stock, part of the debenture stock which the company is authorised to issue, and which debenture stock is a charge upon the undertaking of the company prior to all other stock or shares, payment of interest being also guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council. The tenders were received yesterday, accompanied by a deposit of 5 per cent. The amount allotted is to be paid up at the London and County Bank on or before the 12th December, and interest will run on and from December 14.

BANK OF BENGAL.—This bank has again increased its rate of discount 1 per cent., this being necessitated by the Government requirements in Calcutta. The rate of exchange is easier at rs. 7½d. to 15-16. Bar silver is reported to be now worth about 50½d. per oz.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

THE sixth Session of the ninth Parliament of the Queen was opened on Thursday by commission. The Royal Speech was almost entirely confined to an explanation of the cause of the unusual summons for the early assembling of Parliament in session as follows:—"My Lords and Gentlemen, I regret that I have been obliged to call for your attendance at an unusual and probably, to most of you, an inconvenient season. The hostility towards my Indian Government manifested by the Ameer of Afghanistan and the manner in which he repulsed my friendly mission left me no alternative but to make a peremptory demand for redress. This demand having been disregarded, I have directed an expedition to be sent into his territory, and I have taken the earliest opportunity of calling you together and making to you the communication required by law. I have directed that papers on the subject shall be laid before you."

The sittings of either House were suspended till the evening, when, in the House of Lords, Lord Cranbrook gave notice that next Monday he will move that her Majesty having directed a military expedition of the forces chargeable on the Indian revenues to be despatched against the Ameer of Afghanistan, this House consents that the revenues of India shall be applied towards defraying the expenses of carrying on military operations beyond the frontier.

The Address was moved by Lord Ravensworth, and seconded by Lord Inchiquin. Lord Granville complained that the Central Asian papers were not published until the beginning of this week. Under these circumstances it was not his intention to move any amendment to the Address, but of course at some future period the whole matter must be thoroughly discussed. He criticised the conduct of the Government, and pointed out certain omissions in the published correspondence; but added that the whole matter must be fully discussed when Lord Cranbrook brought forward his motion. However disastrous it might be to have brought the Afghan war into existence, he would yet advise the House of Lords to co-operate with the other House in the most ample manner for the support of the brave troops fighting on the part of the Indian Government. Lord Cranbrook defended his published despatch. He declared most sincerely that when he was told that some one had complained of the 9th Article he examined it to find out what was wrong in it, and came to the conclusion that if he had to mention the circumstances again it would be his duty to repeat that paragraph. In justification of inserting it, he quoted largely from the official correspondence, and said, in conclusion, that all he wanted was that he should be treated fairly. Lord Grey condemned the Government for entering upon this terrible war without affording any opportunity to Parliament of expressing an opinion as to its expediency. It was undoubtedly the prerogative of the Crown to declare war; but he thought it was the duty of the Queen's Ministers not to exercise that prerogative without giving to Parliament early information of the cause of war. He moved an amendment to the Address, expressing sorrow at the war and regret that when it became so probable as to induce costly preparations her Majesty's Ministers had not advised the Queen to summon Parliament without delay. The Duke of Somerset pronounced the amendment to be unconstitutional because it interfered with the prerogative of the Crown and with the responsibility of the Ministers. Much as he regretted the war, still he confessed it was unavoidable, and he expressed his regret that Lord Lawrence should have allowed himself to be placed at the head of a committee called the Afghan Committee. He concluded by saying that he cordially supported the Government in the prosecution of the war. Lord Salisbury argued against the doctrine that there was anything unconstitutional in the course pursued by the Government in declaring war without previously consulting Parliament. Lord Northbrook contended that from the parliamentary papers Lord Cranbrook, in writing his despatch, might have inferred that his statement of the transactions was not accurate. He declined to enter into the general policy of the war, and concluded by hoping that Lord Grey would not press his amendment. Lord Beaconsfield believed that the country would be greatly disappointed on reading the present debate, which had degenerated into a petty squabble at a moment when England expected to witness a discussion on one of the most momentous issues. With regard to the Convention with Turkey in reference to Cyprus, the Government looked forward with confidence to the regeneration of Asia Minor. He felt, in connection with the operations of our troops in Afghanistan, that there could be but one feeling of satisfaction at the manner in which victory had been achieved there.

After some observations from Lord Granville, the amendment moved by Lord Grey was negatived without a division.

In the House of Commons, Mr. E. Stanhope gave notice that on Monday he would move a resolution declaring that, her Majesty having directed a military expedition of her forces charged on the Indian revenues to be despatched against the Ameer of Afghanistan, the House consented that the revenues of India should be applied to defray the expenses of military operations to be carried on beyond the external frontier of her Majesty's Indian possessions. Mr. Fawcett gave notice that he would oppose the resolution.

The Address in answer to the Speech from the Throne was moved in a brief speech by Viscount Castlereagh, and seconded by Mr. Hall. Both speakers dwelt upon the necessity of summoning Parliament, and expressed a hope that the war would be short and decisive. Lord Hartington complained of the delay which had taken place in the presentation of the Afghan papers. Some hon. members would, he said, most probably challenge the policy and necessity of the war; but it was not his own intention to oppose any proposal that might be made for conducting hostilities with the energy and despatch which the safety of the army and the honour of the country demanded. At the same time, he denied that the voluminous correspondence on affairs in Central Asia disclosed anything to justify the war. On the question of the Russian advance, to which he was by no means indifferent, he admitted all the possible dangers of the approach of a European Power to the Indian frontiers; but thought it did not follow that we should rush out to meet it. An advance on our part would not retard but accelerate the drawing near of the frontiers. The policy of former Governments had been to deal with Russia direct. It was important that when she approached India she should find frontier States friendly to us, and anxious to preserve their independence. The Government, however, had in no way dealt with Russia, but with the unfortunate State of Afghanistan, which they almost forced into the arms of Russia. The House had been kept in complete ignorance on all these matters. Parliament had no share whatever in the responsibility for the war, which rested solely on the Ministry, which had mismanaged the whole of our relations with the Ameer. Mr. Gladstone, having disclaimed any intention to enter upon controverted matter, pointed out that the Address to the Crown was so worded as to commit the House to a declaration that her Majesty was left no alternative but to declare war. He also urged the necessity of laying a trustworthy estimate of the cost of the war upon the table. The Chancellor of the Exchequer intimated his willingness to agree to a verbal amendment to meet the objection raised by Mr. Gladstone. The paragraph:—"To express our regret that the hostility manifested towards her Majesty's Indian Government by the Ameer of Afghanistan, and the manner in which he has repulsed her Majesty's friendly mission, has left her Majesty no alternative but to make a peremptory demand for redress, was altered as follows:—"Humbly to thank her Majesty for informing us that the hostility manifested towards her Majesty's Indian Government by the Ameer of Afghanistan, and the manner in which he has repulsed her Majesty's friendly mission, has left her Majesty no alternative but to make a peremptory demand for redress." Sir Stafford Northcote said that the reforms in Asia Minor were still under discussion, and with regard to Cyprus, it was now believed that the island would more than pay its expenses. The delay in the production of the papers, he said, was unavoidable. The Government up to the last moment hoped the business would end pacifically; but when it became certain that there would be a war they lost no time in taking the necessary steps to summon Parliament and to lay the papers before it. Following Lord Hartington into the controversy as to the fairness of Lord Cranbrook's despatch, he read numerous extracts to show that paragraph 9 gave an accurate account of the action of Lord Northbrook and the Home Government, and disclaimed warmly any intention to distort or misrepresent the action of his predecessors. He repudiated also with indignation Lord Hartington's charge that the Government wished to pick a quarrel with the Ameer. They greatly regretted the necessity for the war, and their only object was the protection of India and the tranquillity of the people. When they saw a Russian envoy received at Cabul while a British envoy was turned back, it became absolutely impossible for them to sit still. While military operations were going on it was impossible to speak with confidence as to the scope of the war, but the Government had no desire for annexation, and had only in view the security of our frontier. He hoped the struggle would be short; but he repeated that it had been forced upon the Government by a conviction that their duty to the people of India would not permit the continuance of such a dangerous state of things.

The debate was continued by various speakers, and Mr. Cross having replied, the Address was agreed to, and the House adjourned.

FRIDAY.—In the House of Lords, Lord Cork gave notice that on Monday Lord Halifax would move, as an amendment to the motion given notice of by Lord Cranbrook, a resolution declaring that the House of Lords, while ready to consent to provide the means to carry on the war with Afghanistan to an honourable conclusion, regrets that the conduct pursued by the Government has unnecessarily engaged this country in the contest.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Whitbread gave notice of his intention to call attention to the papers on Afghanistan, and to move:—"That this House disapproves the conduct of her Majesty's Government, which has resulted in the war with Afghanistan." With regard to the day on which he would bring on his motion, Mr. Whitbread said he was entirely in the hands of the Government, who, no doubt, would follow the usual course, and would lose not a day in meeting him.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer replied that under ordinary circumstances the Government of course would give the earliest day to a vote of censure, but it must be remembered that on this occasion Parliament had been called together for the special purpose of discharging a statutory obligation, which it was proposed to do by means of a joint resolution on Monday next. It was impossible to set aside this resolution for any other business, and, if Mr. Whitbread was asking for Monday to be given to a motion which might have been made as an amendment to the Address, the Government could not comply with the request.

Mr. Chamberlain gave notice that he would propose, as an addition to Mr. Whitbread's motion, "That this House regrets that on the present occasion the consent of the nation, through its representatives, was not obtained before war was declared, and that the Government withheld from the public papers which would have enabled it to form a correct opinion on the war."

After much discussion as to the day, in the course of which Mr. Fawcett refused to postpone his motion, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, remarking that the Government had no desire to limit the discussion, accepted the suggestion to adjourn the report of the Address until Monday, when Mr. Whitbread intimated he would bring on his motion as an amendment. On the report being brought up, it was accordingly adjourned until Monday.

At the time of questions, Mr. Bourke stated, in answer to Mr. Mills, that the Government had no official information as to the address alleged to have been presented by General Kaufmann to the Ameer.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS,

HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now in the nurseries.—Yours truly,
CRANSTON AND CO.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay up to November 25; Allahabad and Madras, November 23; Calcutta, November 22.

REPORTS of the season and crops for the week ending Nov. 12 state that in Madras prospects have not altered materially. The north-east monsoon has not yet broken out generally. In Tinnevely rain is still much required, and indigenous locusts and caterpillars are destroying the crops in places. The number on relief works and that gratuitously relieved now amount to 40,328 and 21,809, showing a further decrease of 8,121 and 5,093 respectively. In Mysore raggi and jowari are being harvested, and prices continue to fall. The numbers on relief works and in receipt of gratuitous relief have further increased by 2,408 and 1,501, the totals standing at 14,116 and 4,864. In the Bombay Presidency the kharif harvest is approaching completion in Guzerat, and is progressing in the Deccan; in the Southern Mahratta country, however, it is being delayed by excessive rain, which is injuring the standing and cut crops. Beneficial rain has fallen in the eastern districts of the Central Provinces; the kharif is being harvested with good results, and rabi sowings continue; rain is, however, wanted for the latter in Saugor, Seoni, and Mandla; prices are falling in a few districts. No change reported from Berar. In Central India rain is still wanted, but prospects are hopeful. In Rajputana, except at Ulwur, where rabi sowings are impossible, save round wells, prospects are not, on the whole, unfavourable. In Bengal the rainfall of the week has benefited all the crops, except ripe paddy in Hazaribag and Lohardugga; in Shahabad and Sarun the rice crop has been much injured, and in Palamow the prospects of the rabi are very bad, and the paddy crop indifferent; the latter crop is also unsatisfactory in Cooch Behar. In Assam prospects remain good. There has not been any notable change in British Burma. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh slight rain has fallen in some of the eastern districts, but rain is generally wanted for the rabi. In the Punjab also the want of rain is still felt; health reports are now more favourable, but fever continues to be more or less prevalent throughout the greater part of the country.

THE Calcutta telegram states that the Viceroy will leave Lahore on Thursday and arrive at Calcutta on Saturday. He will hold an installation of the Star of India on Jan. 1.

"DEC. 8.—Roberts reports column marched 6th to Alikhel, leaving wing of 8th and three guns in Kotal, with 29th N.I., in support in valley below. Prisoners state Ameer's intention had been to press on troops from Cabul and Khushi, and make night attack on camp; troops reported on Shutargardan, but does not anticipate another stand being made at present, all guns and supplies having been captured. Large quantities of ammunition, rice, and grain stored by Ameer for wintering of large force in Hariab being brought in from surrounding villages, some carried off by Jajis, but hopes to secure several thousand maunds. Arrangements being made for hutting part of force on Peiwar Kotal. Cold, but timber plentiful and commanding position. Maude reports all quiet in Khyber, convoys passing unmolested."

"DEC. 9.—Cavagnari reports received intelligence of arrival of Mir Akhor at Osilozai, near Pesh Bolak, with object of stirring up hill Shinwarria. Went off with Guide Cavalry to intercept him, but arrived few hours too late. All quiet in pass. Sandeman reports pushed reconnaissance to crest of Khojak Pass looking down on Candahar plains; guided by friendly Orukzai and Kakarzai maliks. Pass easy, only short piece requires improvement; wood and water abundant on summit; people all friendly."

"DEC. 9.—All quiet in Khyber. Mir Akhor having escaped; troops sent after him; reported to have fled to higher parts of Sufed Koh. Native troops in Khyber rather sickly; British troops healthy. Biddulph returned to Haikulzai after reconnaissance of a week; will occupy Khojak Pass. Stewart arrived at Quetta. His division in Bolan Pass. Roberts at Ali Khol 6th; Rokian 7th; proceeds with reconnoitring party towards Shutargardan. Wet season late, but cold severe. Jajis quiet and respectful. Report of Ameer's flight not confirmed. Ghilzais report that Ameer sent Wali Mahomed to take command at Peiwar, and raise Ghilzais, but he was stopped by fugitives from Peiwar."

"DEC. 13.—Cavagnari reports notables and officials from Jellalabad come in to offer service. Some of the Peiwar fugitives arrived there 5th. Sirdar Khalu Khan has succeeded in inducing residents who were fleeing from Jellalabad to return. Three grass-cutters and one Sowar Guide Cavalry cut off and killed by Mirzan Khels. Small force sent to punish them; destroyed their principal fort at Cheari. Mir Akhor has sent emissaries to Bazaar to try and incite malcontents; is himself in Shinwari Hills. Roberts telegraphs from foot of Shutargardan, Dec. 9, hopes to reach top that day and return to Ali Khel; no opposition met with. Hears from Cabul Ameer has eight regiments here, but troops not inclined to fight. Ameer seeking assistance from Balkh, and endeavouring vainly to stir up people to fight."

"DEC. 14.—General Biddulph was at Kala-Abdula-Khan and the foot of the Khojak Pass, 9th; had pushed reconnaissance to Chuman, on east side of pass; no opposition. People all friendly. Engineers commencing improvement of road over pass. Southern route by Gwaja reconnoitred; easily made passable for all arms."

The Times correspondent telegraphed yesterday under date Lahore, Dec. 15:—

"The contingents furnished by the native States have all arrived at Lahore, with the exception of 200 infantry belonging to Rajah Nahun. The contingents, when complete, will muster altogether 13 guns, 850 cavalry, and 2,700 infantry—namely, from Pattiala, 4 guns, 300 cavalry, and 800 infantry; from Kuppurtala, 3 guns, 100 cavalry, and 500 infantry; from Nabha, 3 guns, 200 cavalry and 500 infantry; from Jheend, 3 guns, 200 cavalry, and 500 infantry; from Furriddhot, 500 cavalry and 200 infantry; lastly, from Nahun, 200 infantry. They were reviewed yesterday by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, the Maharajah of Cashmere being present and wearing for the first time his uniform as a British general. They will be reviewed by the Viceroy on Tuesday. They are fine men, almost all Sikhs, their uniforms and accoutrements showing that money had been liberally spent in procuring them; but their arms, being old-fashioned and of little use, will be replaced by Enfield rifles of the latest pattern for infantry, and Snider carbines for cavalry. Their artillery is being inspected by a committee of British officers, who will, if necessary, substitute for them 6-pounders and 9-pounders and howitzers. Their spirit is very good, and they are eager to face their old enemy the Afghans. It is not, however, at present contemplated to use them otherwise than for keeping communications open. The Maharajah Scindia was expected here last week, but his visit is postponed on account of ill health. He was among the first to offer a contingent, but his offer, in common with all similar offers made by any except the Punjab States, was declined. The Madras troops, well provided with warm clothing, will pass through Lahore to-morrow on their way to the front, under the command of Colonel Prendergast, and the 68th Regiment, from Agra, is expected at Meeran Meer, as also four others with batteries of artillery from Bombay, in a few days."

THE increase of the Indian army, voted by the unanimous voice of the Secretary of State's Council, was to the effect that each regiment of cavalry in the Bengal Army and the Punjab frontier force was to be raised by a strength of sixteen sabres per troop, while infantry battalions were to receive twenty-five men per company. This order is equally applicable to those Madras and Bombay regiments composing General Primrose's division. Any and every request of the Viceroy has been promptly and unanimously granted, but as yet no application has been made for additional British officers to native corps. The additions thus authorised, amounting to 15,000 men, will bring up the total strength of the native army to above 140,000, and as, according to Mr. Stanhope's rough estimate, the monthly increase of expenditure will be about £23,000, the addition to the annual charge will be £270,000, making the total charges £16,070,000, as against an estimate of £15,800,000. The European troops in India number about 62,800, thus making our Indian army muster over 202,000 men.

A PARLIAMENTARY paper issued on Saturday records the opinion of five members of the Council of India on the question whether India or England ought to bear the expense of the war. Sir Erskine Perry, who disapproves of the war in toto, Sir Barrow Ellis, Sir R. Montgomery, Sir W. Muir, and Mr. R. A. Dalyell concur in thinking that the extraordinary expenditure occasioned by the war should not fall upon the revenues of India; The

"An order issued by the Bombay Government last week affords a remarkable comment on the Secretary of State's announcement of the flourishing condition of Indian finances and their ability to bear the whole cost of the war. This order directs that, in view of the immediate importance of avoiding or deferring expenditure where it is possible till the next year, no new works are to be commenced and all allotments provided for them are cancelled; all works in progress are to be suspended, except in cases of urgent necessity; nor are any repairs to be effected beyond such as are absolutely essential, repairs of that description having, moreover, to be reduced to a minimum. No further purchases of tools or plant are to be made, and all applications for grants for public works are to be retained until such time as the state of the finances will permit. No travelling is to be permitted except when the occasion is so urgent as not to brook delay. Engineers are called upon to show how far this order will affect the works under their charge, and what saving will be effected in the current year.

"The Anglo-Indian Press is divided in opinion about the justice and expediency of charging the Indian revenues with the cost of the Afghan campaign. The majority are inclined to the view that the cost should be shared between England and India. Some, however, strenuously maintain that India alone is quite capable of meeting the expenditure and is bound to meet it, seeing it is her own frontier that is threatened. Among the vernacular papers, the Kohinoor, the oldest native paper of Upper India, defends the measure on the ground that the present campaign may save India still greater cost of a war to prevent invasion, and that no other country can show such benefits accruing from foreign rule. At the same time, it expresses the hope that the taxation for defraying the expenses of the war will be more fairly distributed than at present, and that the chief burden be no longer permitted to fall on the poorer classes. The leading Bengal journal, the Hindoo Patriot, strongly denounces the measures as specially cruel, coming, as it does, so soon after the famine. It declares, however, that opposition is useless, since India is without a voice in Parliament."

The Times of India, fully approving of the vigorous action of the Government, although reproaching it with delay, declares that "as the question had been raised, we think that India may benefit by it financially, and that, as the Home Government, by fettering the action of the Viceroy, have undoubtedly added to the cost of the campaign, so they should be compelled to pay the cost of their defiance of constitutional form and to defray a large proportion of 'the expense of military operations carried on beyond the frontier.'"

In another column will be found an extract from the Gazette of India giving the precise details of the several forces engaged in the Afghan campaign, which differ in some particulars from the account telegraphed and published in our issue of the 25th ult. We have therefore reprinted the Gazette for reference.

THE Pioneer, in chronicling the arrival of the Famine Commission at Lahore on the 21st ult., says that Mr. Caird's first impressions of Indian agriculture are favourable. He thinks the outturn creditable to the skill and industry of the people. But he is struck with their distressed condition, and does not yet see his way to their relief.

THE talukdars of Oudh assembled at Lucknow on Nov. 13 to witness the unveiling of the portrait of the Prince of Wales, presented by H.R.H. in token of his gratification at the loyal reception given to him by the Oudh nobility. The same occasion was taken by Sir George Couper to present khilluts of honour to those of the landowners "whose conduct had been most enlightened and humane during the recent famine. The return address of the talukdars to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, after dwelling on the beneficial results of British rule, and recalling the visit of the Prince to Lucknow, thus concluded:—"It was the crowning act of royal favour to us that her Majesty proclaimed to all the world her gracious desire that the same law and justice should be administered in her name without partiality to every one of her subjects, of whatever name or race, and that all alike should be considered as having an equal claim on her sympathy and care. On the 1st of January, 1877, at Delhi, we were gladdened to hear from the lips of the Viceroy and Governor-General that her Majesty that day assumed the title of Empress of India. For it was joy to us to feel that if her Majesty was Queen of England for the English, she was now also Empress of India for us. We are fully sensible of the great honour conferred upon us in our being permitted to assemble at this durbar to receive the gracious gift which it has pleased your Royal Highness to bestow upon us. When we or our posterity look upon this portrait we shall fondly remember the countenance and favour shown to us by your Royal Highness in the past; and our fervent prayers shall rise to Heaven that infinite blessing may be bestowed on her Majesty the Empress, on our noble Prince, and on every member of the Royal Family."

A LETTER, dated the 11th ult., has been addressed to the Secretary of the British Indian Association by the leading Oudh talukdars, who are desirous of showing their loyalty by rendering aid to the Government in the present war. They vaguely say:—"We have learnt of the military preparations which are being made at present at the North Western Frontier. Inspired by our long-cherished loyal sentiments, we have come to the unanimous determination that all the people of the province in general, but especially the talukdars, should display their loyalty, both individually and as a body, in such a manner that they may in some way or other have the honour of rendering service to her Most Gracious Majesty's Indian Government. The measures which we have individually considered to take in order to bring about this wished-for result will be brought into play on their proper occasions. But our greatest desire is that as a body we should show the same loyalty and fidelity to the British Throne now also which we have been accustomed to do on all other occasions, and to hold, with the consent of the other members of the association, a special meeting for this purpose." The finances of the association are in a prosperous condition, and by the unanimous exertions of the members considerable additions may be made to them. With such a fund at the association's disposal the committee can, to a certain extent, adopt measures to render at least some service, however humble, to the paramount Power.

SUBJECT to the approval of the Secretary of State the Government of India have, on the recommendation of the Committee of the Organisation of the Marine Department in India, sanctioned provisionally the appointment of an Examiner of Marine Accounts at Calcutta upon a consolidated salary of Rs.1,000, rising by five equal yearly increments to a maximum of Rs.1,500 a month.

THE correspondent of the Times of India, telegraphing from Colombo on 24th ult., announces that a proclamation and order in council has been issued annexing Cocos and Keeling Islands to Ceylon, the Governor of Ceylon being also constituted governor of the new colony.

OUR attention has been drawn by the Pioneer to an existing record of our former presence in Afghanistan. Some investigations were then made into the mineral wealth of the country; and Captain Drummond, of the 3rd Light Cavalry, wrote an interesting report on the mines and minerals of Northern Afghanistan. His report deals chiefly with the copper mining districts in the Ghilzai country south east of Cabul, and with the iron ores of Bajour. In the Ghilzai country the whole of the strata were found to be highly metalliferous; whilst the pine forests which stretch southwards from the Safid Koh would furnish plenty of wood for fuel. There was a lack, however, of running streams; whilst another hindrance to the success of mining and smelting operations lay in the unsettled state of the province and the lawlessness of large sections of the people, the predatory tribes infesting the tract between Ghuzni and Jellalabad. Captain Drummond gives a list of the tribes; for instance, there were the Adumzaiee who thieve by night, the Ahmedzaies of Spiga who are bandits by day; and the Kurrukheyls, to whom, in the matter of thieving, day and night are both alike; together with several other tribes rightly called predatory. Of the Ghilzais generally, he says:—"They are the finest race of people I have seen in Afghanistan, and the predatory portion, though wild, are far from being intractable. They might be brought to order without a drop of blood being spilt; only give them constant employment, good wages, and regular payment; encourage a spirit of industry, and give them strict justice." Then he notices the reputation which the Afghans enjoyed, of being a detestable race; and the popular belief that an Englishman could not stir a few yards from his house without running the risk of assassination. "Yet I," he says, "have gone with but a few followers into the midst of them, have wandered amongst the wildest and most desperate characters often without a sword at my side or a pistol in my belt." We should take advantage, he goes on to say, of the keen commercial spirit of this nation, and direct its energies into useful channels. When once the Afghans become persuaded that we are really their friends there is no quarter in the East where British influence will more rapidly take root, and British influence be more readily consolidated.

WE have heard a great deal about the fever at Peshawur, which is generally spoken of as an unavoidable evil. Yet the great percentage of the proverbial unhealthiness of this important station might, if the statements made by the special correspondent of the Times of India are not exaggerated, be mitigated, if not prevented, by sanitary precautions. He gives a horribly graphic account of the supply of drinking water, which recalls Dickens' description of that pestiferous locality known in Bermondsey as Jacob's Island:—

"I saw running through the city what I thought to be a sewer—an exceedingly dirty sewer—its bed was in many places silted up, causing the obstruction of the channel; its sides were pasted with mud and slime, and the bottom of the sewer, which I could see, for it is only partly covered by the stream, was full of slush. I inquired of an officer who was with me why this sewer was not cleaned, and was horrified to learn that it was the chief stream of drinking water for the great city of Peshawur. If Peshawur wishes to be healthy, it must cease giving this fluid filth to its population. No population could live in health who drank of so filthy a stream."

THE amount of revenue derived from eight sales of Bengal opium and seven months' pass duty on opium exported from Bombay is Rs.5,95,63,908, which is Rs.77,52,908 above the estimated revenue. Of this surplus Bengal opium has contributed Rs.32,46,345, and Bombay pass duty Rs.45,06,563.

THOUGH the population of the Punjab is said to be, as a rule, very abstemious in the use of intoxicating liquor and drugs, the excise returns for the year 1876-77, show a steady increase in the revenue. The total receipts for the year were Rs.10,48,956 or Rs.86,884 more than in 1875-76. The excess is about equally divided between spirits and opium, &c., and while of course not wishing bad habits to extend among the people, the Government "hopes that the limit of expansion of this source of revenue is far from being reached." As a means to this end, it may be supposed, the sale of rum has been promoted, the right to vend it by retail having been put up to auction in the same way as country spirits. This experiment was quite successful, the revenue leaping up from Rs.48,337 to Rs.55,691 in a single year. The Financial Commissioner states that the income from rum is clear profit to the Government as the sale of native liquor has been in no way affected, and the Lieutenant Governor fully coincides in the view. As to illicit distillation, the offence seems scarcely to exist, the chief source of annoyance being the smuggling of liquor from native States. In these States the spirits are sold very little above the cost of production, and they find only too ready a market in British territory. Pressure has been brought to bear upon the rajahs to raise their excise duties, and one State, Pattiala, has adopted this course. Opium has to be largely imported to meet the wants of the Punjabees, only 2,103 maunds having been produced in the province, while 1,796 are sent on from other districts. The Government does not hold out encouragement to those who wish to extend the cultivation of the poppy; for it considers the present system should not be disturbed, as it is "the result of much deliberation and experiment."

THE statistics recorded in one of Toulmin's late circulars prove that the outturns of Indian tea have risen between 1870 and 1878 in Kumaon and the Upper Himalayan plantations, from 1,500,000lb. to nearly 6,000,000lb.; in Assam, from 6,000,000lb. to 21,000,000lb.; in Cachar, from 5,000,000lb. to 11,000,000lb. The total estimated outturn for the whole of the tea districts of India is now over 41,000,000lb., against one-third of that amount in 1870, and may be valued at about £3,000,000 sterling, almost the whole of which amount is paid in cash by England to India or to creditors of India at home.

THE value of the whole external trade of the port of Bombay for 1877-78, exclusive of stores and treasure on account of Government, amounted to Rs.66,24,87,358, which shows a considerable increase over that of the preceding year. The value of imports from Germany increased more than twelve-fold. Turkey in Europe shows a falling off, while that of Turkey in Asia has more than doubled. The total value of imports was Rs.6,18,78,978. In exports to foreign countries the share of China does not fall far short of the United Kingdom; and the latter's shows a decrease of over eighteen millions of rupees when compared with the previous year. Exports to the United States show a great decline from Rs.1,11,202 in 1876-77 to Rs.13,435 in the year under review; and Russia, which does not figure at all in the imports, took from us merchandise and treasure valued at Rs.5,84,375. The total value of exports was Rs.23,87,58,052. The trade in cotton has largely fallen, and its value was less than one-third of that ten years ago. The gross amount of customs duty on imports and exports was Rs.62,21,513; and the total number of vessels which entered and cleared was 1,835, representing a tonnage of 1,346,375.

THE London and China Telegraph reports the death, under strange circumstances, of the Chinese general Lu-Sho, who is described as having been recently ennobled for his victories over Yakoob Khan. This description points to the deceased officer having been Liu Kim-tang, the conqueror of Karashar, Kurlu, Kuche, and other cities in Kashgaria, and lately the general in command on the Kuldja frontier. The report, which is said to have arrived at Kuldja from Aksu, states that, having completed his military dispositions on the Kuldja frontier, it occurred to General Liu that the body of Yakoob Khan would be a fit trophy to forward to Peking as evidence of the complete success which had attended the Chinese arms. With this object in view he went to Kashgar personally to supervise the recovery and identification of the body. This done, he returned to his command, and on the way complained of illness which shortly developed into a fever, produced by the unhealthy nature of his self-imposed task, and of which he died a few days afterwards. It is quite in accordance with Chinese custom to exhume a body of a defeated rebel leader and to send his head as a trophy to Peking; and it is probable, therefore, that the body of Yakoob Khan was one object of Liu's search underground; but at the same time it is not unlikely that he had a more practical aim in view, and that he wished to repeat at the capital the experiment which he made at Kurlu, where he dug up enormous quantities of stores and supplies of every kind which had been buried by the flying rebels. The fact of his making excavations may also have furnished a convenient excuse for attributing his death to the cause assigned. But he was a successful general ruling over a conquered territory, and under such circumstances in Central Asia sudden deaths are not unfrequent.

THE introduction of the Ceylon Budget for the ensuing year gave an opportunity to the Colonial Secretary to state that, notwithstanding the adverse influences of commercial depression, leaf disease, floods, and the depreciation of silver, the revenue of the colony, although not maintaining the steady increase of former years, would show no falling off. A change has been introduced in the mode of the accounts, by which the fictitious figures hitherto included under the head of colonial stores are eliminated. Going into details, Mr. Douglas estimated the revenue for the coming years at Rs.14,981,000, and in doing so he thought that he was justified in anticipating an increase of Rs.100,000 on land sales, and of Rs.250,000 on railway receipts, but he had only calculated upon the small revenue of Rs.40,000 from the pearl fisheries. Five million odd rupees were not taxes, but items that did not come out of the pockets of the people. The actual amount paid by the people was about nine millions of rupees. That, taking the population of the island at two millions and a-half, was a tax about Rs.3½ a-head per annum. Of this Rs.3½ they derived Re.1 from grain; a quarter of a rupee from salt; Re.1 from drink, and nearly a rupee from stamps, leaving nearly a quarter of a rupee to be accounted for by miscellaneous items. This proved that the colony was not unfairly taxed; in fact, it favourably compared with other colonies, the figures being in Mauritius Rs.20 a-head; Hong Kong, Rs.13; and in the Straits Settlements Rs.12 per head per annum.

We learn from Ceylon that the Royal Engineers are most actively engaged in providing efficient coast defences for the three principal ports of the colony, viz., Trincomalee, the naval station and depot, Galle, the southern coaling port, and Colombo, the capital and chief commercial port of the island. The existing defences of Trincomalee, Forts Frederick and Osterberg, are so situated as to sweep with their fire the approaches to the harbour. The smooth-bore batteries already mounted are being supplemented by long-ranged rifle guns mounted in protected implacements; in addition to which a torpedo service is being organised. A new battery, armed with heavy rifle guns, is in process of construction at Watering Point to defend the approaches to Galle, while the old batteries will be armed with new ordnance. At Colombo the existing batteries, Klippenberg, Enkhuisen, and Battenberg will receive heavy rifled guns, and the construction of a powerful battery at Mutwal Point is contemplated. It is expected that a good deal of the works will be in a forward condition by the early part of next year.

The following letter and telegram concerning the health of the 101st Regiment have been communicated to the press by Colonel Deedes:—

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE 'OBSERVER.'"

SIR,—It having been reported in one of the daily papers that the health of the 101st Regiment since they left Cyprus had been very bad, and that two or three deaths were occurring daily from fever since the arrival of that regiment at Halifax, the Secretary of State for War telegraphed yesterday to the general officer commanding to inquire. By Colonel Stanley's desire I send you a copy of the reply received to-day, which he would be much obliged if you would insert in your issue of to-morrow.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

MILITARY OPERATIONS IN AFGHANISTAN.

A LECTURE on the 6th inst., by Lieut. Gen. J. L. Vaughan, C.B., was delivered "On Afghanistan and Military Operations therein," at the Royal United Service Institution. The chair was taken by Major General Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B. In the unavoidable absence of Gen. Vaughan the lecture was read on his behalf by Col. Malleeson.

The author of the paper, after glancing, in passing, at the more southern portion of the barrier formed by the great Suleiman range of mountains, and the tribes which occupy it, proceeded to give a minute account of the eastern barrier, extending from the Hindoo Koosh on the north to Sindh, and the latitude of Quetta on the south. Turning to the question of a new frontier, on this he observed that if the masters of India could afford to remain quiescent until hostile legions actually emerged from the passes, no doubt their position behind the passes was strong, and the present frontier as good a one as could be desired; but it was a most sound maxim that the best defence is an "offensive defence"—(cheers)—a defence which was always ready to strike a blow in advance at an approaching enemy; and this maxim, it true, was surely particularly applicable to the case of Afghanistan. It was not so much the actual blow which constituted the danger here, as the condition of things which would precede and accompany the striking of that blow; the state of unrest which would prevail throughout the whole Indian peninsula, the doubt in men's minds while the blow was still impending what might be the issue of the coming contest; the hope of successful rebellion, which we should flatter ourselves unwisely if we did not believe might find a place in the breast of many of our feudatories. It was in these considerations that he saw the advantages of a frontier beyond the passes. He then proceeded to speak of the population of Afghanistan as the Afghans properly so called, who might be further distinguished as the Pushtoo-speaking Afghans; and the semi or pseudo Afghans, who use a distinct language, the Persian. He estimated the total population at 2,500,000, and the number of fighting men at 370,000, but it was extremely unlikely that the whole population would unite for a common object.

In the subsequent discussion, General Fyers said he could not understand why the new frontier should stop at Jellalabad, especially as it should be a frontier between themselves and the Russians.

Lord Waveney said, as regarded the establishment of a new frontier, he had been much struck with the remark of a German officer in reference to the North-Western frontier of India, that it was like a fortress of which the glacis was not in the possession of the garrison. That description appeared to him most accurate, and it was for the country to determine whether the glacis should be in the possession of the garrison or not. He hoped that one result of the present war would be to open up to them the markets of Central Asia, from which they had hitherto been thrust, kept back partly by the skill of their Russian rivals and partly by negligence born of too great security, which had prevented them from selling in markets which the Russians had occupied.

The Chairman observed that the question of frontier was undoubtedly one of very great importance, and, in the present stage of the proceedings connected with it, one of very great complexity. He was unable to understand how an advance merely at three different points in a country like Afghanistan—by the Khyber Pass, the Khorum Pass, and the Bholan Pass—could form a frontier. It must appear to any military man that, unless those three advanced posts were connected by lateral communications, there was no frontier. The utmost all these advances could do was to form separate posts upon which a frontier could be arranged. As regarded the population of Afghanistan, he did not concur in the estimate which had been given by the lecturer. He believed there were 2,000,000 Afghans, 2,000,000 non-Afghans, speaking the Persian language, and 1,000,000 of miscellaneous people. As to the amount of the forces, it appeared from credible information that there had been lately a very large accession of the organised regular forces; but he agreed with the lecturer that the greater number of such forces were massed against our own the better, our arms of precision being so superior to theirs. In concluding, he must say that he felt some satisfaction at that moment at having for so many years done his best to call the attention of the country to the state of affairs before it, and he had no doubt that the result would be honourable to the army and advantageous to the national interests.

SUPPLEMENTARY SUPPLY AND PUBLIC WORKS.—At the meeting of the Legislative Council on Nov. 13, the Colonial Secretary said that the question of Government taking over certain roads up country would be considered next year, his Excellency the Governor adding that so important a subject would have to be first submitted to the Secretary of State. The Colonial Secretary brought up the Supplementary Supply Bill, which amounted to Rs.1,809,625. Of that amount, loss on exchange would absorb Rs.370,000; roads, streets, bridges, and canals, Rs.30,128; the Colonial store, Rs.267,905; hospitals, Rs.186,965; and railway services, Rs.193,986. To meet the additional expenditure there would be the excess of revenue over expenditure and savings on estimates, and Government would be compelled to stop the expenditure of the sum allotted for railway construction, which otherwise would have been applied to the minor lines. The following summary of the amounts for appropriation by the Public Works Department shows how the votes for the year are to be appropriated:—WORKS AND BUILDINGS: New works and buildings, Rs.299,404; alterations and additions to ditto, Rs.73,396; repairs to buildings, Rs.107,300. ROADS, STREETS, BRIDGES, AND CANALS: New roads, Rs.463,653; improvements to roads, Rs.248,128; maintenance of roads, Rs.1,323,302; toll grants to minor roads, Rs.35,235; new bridges, Rs.40,000; improvement to bridges, Rs.20,000; maintenance of bridges, Rs.50,000; improvements to canals, Rs.20,000; maintenance of canals, Rs.40,544; irrigation, including maintenance, Rs.401,000; general departmental charges, Rs.171,530; miscellaneous works, Rs.250,632; total, Rs.3,544,124.—Ceylon Times.

THE AFGHANISTAN PAPERS.

THE further papers which have been published bring the story of the relations and negotiations with the Ameer down to the Proclamation of the Viceroy, dated November 21. They commence with Lord Northbrook's letter of March 21, 1873, to the Ameer, proposing to depute Mr. Macnabb to visit his Highness at any selected place, for the purpose of explaining the Seistan decision. The Ameer replied by a request to know beforehand what decision had been arrived at. A Cabul agent to Peshawur of same date, March 31, 1873, informed the Commissioners that the Cabul Durbar had debated for three days as to the exact purpose of the proposed envoy's visit, and some expecting that he would explain matters as to the Afghan frontiers. He writes:—

"Many of the Dubarees indulged in extravagant hopes, in the belief that the Sahib would be sent, not alone, to explain the decision of the Seistan boundary, but because of the near approach of the Russians and the obvious tendency of their policy, which is to extend their power in Asia; he may be sent to arrange for the strengthening of Afghanistan and the determination of its limits, as the boundaries of Afghanistan may be termed the frontiers of Hindostan, and there is no possibility of establishing the frontiers of Afghanistan firmly without the intervention of the English Government; and that strength cannot be established without assistance in munitions of war and large sums of money before any emergency actually arises. If the coming of the Sahib is only with reference to the Seistan question and not for the lasting advantage of Afghanistan, it will be a great injury to the Afghan Government, as there exists in some quarters a great respect and consideration for the Afghan Government, derived from its association with that of England, which will disappear if the support of England is withheld; especially the neighbouring countries will note any falling-off in interest taken by England in the welfare of Afghanistan. . . . One reflection arising from the Seistan decision is, that as the British Government, though considering Seistan to belong of right to Afghanistan, has divided that country between Persia and Afghanistan in order to avoid dispute, it may be that one day the Government of Bokhara, acting under Russian instigation, may lay claim to a portion of Balkh on the ground that it is part of Turkestan, and the English Government may, in order to prevent an open rupture, agree to the cession of Maimena or Budukshan or any other province, and in this way Afghanistan may become dismembered. It is to be remembered that whenever the Russians, either in the current year or the next, take possession of Merv, only twelve marches will separate them from Herat, and there are no mountain ranges or other obstacles on the road. Undoubtedly, as soon as they have established themselves in Merv, the Russians will begin to enter into negotiations of friendship, trade, and political relations with the Cabul Government, either openly or secretly, and we shall be placed in a most difficult position on account of our alliance with England, in dealing with the questions brought forward by Russia, so that extreme emergencies will arise with which we shall be unable to cope. From all that appears in the English papers about the preparations for the advance of a Russian army, and all that the merchants tell us of the intention of Russia to open up Western Asia, it is clear the day will come when the ruler of Afghanistan will either have to agree to all that Russia proposes or to abandon his country, as neither are the Afghans able to contend with and check the Russians, nor is there any hope of an English army being sent into Afghanistan to protect it. Nor has the English Government as yet fixed on any place or provision in Hindostan or Europe to which the nobles of Afghanistan may retire if driven from their own country."

On April 14, 1873, the agent of Cabul again wrote, conveying the Ameer's own words:—

"As for the recently defined boundary of Northern Afghanistan, whatever views the British Government may have entertained about it, great anxiety weighs on me day and night, and I am not in any moment relieved from it, that the juxtaposition of boundaries with Russia will involve difficulty in making provision for the security of the borders in the interests of both Governments."

In these circumstances he suggests that, before the proposed deputation from the Viceroy to himself, one of his agents should first wait on the Viceroy to exchange views on this and other matters.

In October, 1876, Captain Grey informed Syad Noor Mahomed Shah that "the present Viceroy is as well disposed towards the Ameer as was Lord Mayo," but that he is surprised to learn "that the Ameer's own sentiments are considerably changed since Lord Mayo's day," although he knew that the Ameer resented what happened in 1873.

"You will see that the Viceroy has accepted all the propositions which you made in 1873, imposing only the condition that he should be enabled to watch a frontier for which he renders himself responsible, and that the Ameer, his friend and ally, should receive his envoys. It would, indeed, be a strange friendship which shut the door in the face of the messengers of one's friend. You know that at Umballa you said that when affairs in Afghanistan had somewhat settled down there would be no objection to the residence of British officers anywhere save at Cabul. Now, the Viceroy does not in the least want to place an envoy at Cabul. He only requires to have officers at Herat and other points on the frontier. Again, in 1873, at Simla, you gave your opinion that British officers should come and go to define the Afghan frontier, and that, when the people were thus accustomed to their presence, the Ameer would not object to their permanent residence on that frontier. At that time the Viceroy objected to assuming the responsibility for the Afghan frontier, so the other arrangements also fell through. Now the Viceroy does assume that responsibility; the other condition ought, therefore, also to be accepted, the reasons being that the Viceroy's arrangements turn upon this condition, and the treaty itself depends upon it."

In February, 1877, Sir Louis Pelly wrote to the Afghan Envoy a strong complaint of the "Ameer's misrepresentation of the Viceroy," and "the persistent and public manner in which the Ameer is appealing to his subjects to join in a jehad openly aimed at the British Government. Sir Louis Pelly added that he was instructed to demand explanation as to this and other points, specifying among them the conferences with Russian agents, and correspondence with the Russians as to his military arrangements, and also the hostile attitude of the officials and people towards the British Vakil at Cabul. The envoy denied the truth of the reports as to the jehad, and as to the Russians, fell back on the communication of the Russian letter to Lord Mayo, but evaded any direct reply, "as this is a very great question."

Among the papers relating to the mission turned back from Ali Musjid is a letter from the Ameer to Lord Lytton, dated Oct. 6, 1878:—

"Be it known to your Excellency (Janab) that your Excellency's friendly letter, which was sent by the hands of the highly-honoured Nawab Gholam Hussein Khan, and which contained the news of the deputation of a friendly mission, namely, a mission from the British Government, has been perused by me; and on perusal I have fully informed myself of its contents. But the above-named Nawab had not yet been honoured with an interview, and your Excellency's friendly letter had not yet been seen by me, when a letter addressed by Major Waterfield, Commissioner of Peshawur, to Mirza Habibulla Khan, an official of this God-granted Government, having arrived here, was perused by this supplicant before the throne of God. And great surprise and astonishment was caused by the writing of the officer above-mentioned, that is, the Commissioner. What can be the result, meaning, and advantage of such a vehement communication to an ally and friend, and of advancing by force a friendly mission in this manner?"

"Subsequently three more letters from the same officer, in the same tone and style, to the address of the officials of this God-granted Government, were seen. Moreover, in the course of a few days, several other letters, which were received from that direction, were seen. These were not free from harsh and rough words and expressions, which are inconsistent with the forms of courtesy and civility, and contrary to the mode of friendship and sympathy."

After complaining of the tone of the letters, especially during his period of mental trouble, he continues, "But should any Government entertain without cause any hostile and inimical feeling towards this God-granted Government, I commit all my affairs to the merciful God, upon whose will and intention all matters depend. He alone suffices for us, and He is the best to be trusted."

In reference to this letter the Viceroy telegraphed on December 1 to the Secretary of State a reply to an inquiry:—

"Following is text of Commissioner of Peshawur's letter, September 7 to Maustaufi. Letter begins—'After compliments, I write this friendly letter to inform you that September 16 or 17 has been fixed for the departure of a mission of high rank from the British Government to Cabul, and that the mission will start, whether Nawab Gholam Hussein shall or shall not by that time have had the honour of waiting on his Highness the Ameer. The object for which mission is deputed is friendly, and the refusal of free passage to it, or interruption or injury to its friendly progress, will be regarded as act of hostility. I am to explain that the mission will not in any case enter capital of Cabul before expiry of the month Ramazan. In conclusion, may you keep well.' Letter ends."

"Following is text of letter from commissioner to Gholam Hussein. Begins same as other down to word 'hostility.' Then continues thus:—'You should, under all circumstances, use all endeavours to reach Cabul soon. Should any impediments be interposed to your journey, in such case it is fit you should act firmly.' Second letter ends:—

"Please remember that these letters are a continuation of preceding correspondence between English and Cabul officials, in which the latter said matter must be wholly deferred pending Ameer's pleasure. Letter to Gholam Hussein, opened by Ameer, was private to our own officer."

Lord Cranbrook replied on Dec. 3:—"Yours 1st. Gives text of two letters, Ameer refers to four. What are the other two?" And the papers end with the following telegram from the Viceroy, Dec. 4, 1878:—

"Yours of 3rd. The four letters to which the Ameer alludes in his letter of Oct. 6 are the commissioner's letter to the Mustaufi, and simultaneous communications containing similar notice to the Ameer's officers at Ali Musjid, Dakka, and Jellalabad. These latter were sent for information and not as separate notices."

CORRESPONDENCE.

FURLOUGH RATE OF EXCHANGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I hope officers now at home on furlough, and the Indian army generally, will not remain silent under the late decision of the Secretary of State for India regarding furlough rate of exchange.

An attempt is made to browbeat officers and discourage the faint-hearted from further efforts, by saying "this decision is final." A similar reply was given to the majors of R.A. and R.E. regarding their being paid as captain while their contemporaries in other parts of the world were being paid as majors. But the result of the agitation made in consequence, and especially of the stir made in Parliament, was that the major's pay was given, not from 1st April, 1875, only, instead of, as usual, from the date of promotion. Again the officers returned to the charge, again questions were asked in Parliament, &c., and at last, in the end of 1878, the pay due from 5th July, 1872, has been paid.

Parliament is now sitting; we have many friends in and out of Parliament who agree with us that this last decision should not be final; that the paltry saving effected by it is not to be compared with the discontent that has been caused, and will continue, owing to a rule, made after great deliberation in 1868, being cancelled in 1871, and to the anomaly of a few hundred officers (from no merit of their own, but merely from the accident of their having been sick or their time for taking furlough having come round between 1868 and 1871) being continued in the enjoyment of a privilege which is denied to the large majority of their brother officers.

Let no one be discouraged from agitating the question by the thought that the result may be to withdraw the privilege from the minority who now have it; this would be impossible, for it would be illegal, and the Secretary of State was probably well aware of this when he continued the privilege to these officers.

The chief argument adduced by the Secretary of State appears to be that the rate of exchange before 1868 was variable, and that some few officers actually got more than 2s., and can, therefore, now not complain if they get less. It was probably, or possibly, this very fact of their having sometimes got more than 2s. that induced the fixing of the rate in 1868 at 2s., and the Secretary of State must be perfectly well aware that there is now no hope of the exchange ever again rising over 2s., and our being thus compensated for the present low rates. Prices have risen, both in England and in India, and the result is that officers find it harder than ever to live in India and save anything, or to take furlough or to educate their families in England as they would wish.

Nobody can deny that the zeal of officers for the public service has cooled of late years, and that a spirit of discontent has taken deep root, and is spreading, and the chief causes of this are, I consider, the frequent acts of meanness perpetrated by the Home and Indian Governments. A boon is scarcely ever offered to the army or the services generally without some qualifying clauses which deprive the act of half its benefit and thus kill all gratitude for the residuum that is left.

The Secretary of State is perhaps acting under legal advice, and therefore legally justified in refusing to the army generally a boon which he dare not withdraw from the few officers now entitled to it; but he will probably find few to agree with him in his intention, that the fact of some officers continuing to receive the exceptional rate of furlough pay has no legitimate bearing on the question. The making the rate of 2s. universal, and not exceptional, will be considered by most sufferers a mere act of justice, and the cost, compared with the total annual outlay of the Indian Government, and the irritation that will thus be allayed, will, I believe, be a mere trifle. I hope, therefore, the question will not be allowed to drop till justice is done.

Nobody will pretend that Government has not the right to modify regulations once made, though many may well doubt whether it is wise for Government thus not to know their own minds, and to make regulations only to alter them almost as soon as they are made, and always in a sense adverse to the interests of officers who have served them well and zealously, and who would continue to do so if treated with justice and consideration, and not restricted to their bare legal rights.

A LOVER OF JUSTICE.

DEBT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The slavery with which so many millions of our subjects in India are now afflicted has not been caused by capture in war, by which slavery was created and extended in Africa, nor by being bound to the soil, which, in spite of theoretical emancipation, is still the lot of the Russian peasant, but by debt. Now it is commonly said that these debts have been incurred through the extravagance of the Indian peasant. Let us examine the truth of this; so many erroneous statements are now circulated regarding India, that it is only by holding fast to the truth that that country can be saved from terrible calamities. Take the case of the small proprietor of land, or peasant proprietor, as he is called. His crop fails, but the native agent of Government demands just as large a land tax as usual. In former days, when district officers were rulers, and not mere clerks, and had plenty of leisure for doing justice to British subjects, they would mount their horses and ride about the villages during three or four months to ascertain generally what damage had been done by drought, inundations, hail, &c. Their European assistants would efficiently aid them in this, and at the same time practically learn their duties. In the present day the district officers have to write, write, write what native agents report, and the consequence of overworking district officers at their desks has been to render the administration inefficient in the eyes of her Majesty's subjects. Whatever remissions of revenue Government may make, large sums go into the pockets of the native agents, and the peasant proprietors must necessarily go to the usurers. In 1868 native landholders in the province of Oudh frequently expressed to me their astonishment that the prices of grain oscillated so violently; that when they were anxious to sell their grain prices were always so low, and that prices rose suddenly and unexpectedly a few months later. Farmers are not usually clever in prognosticating future prices of corn, and the octroi municipal tax prevents prices current inside towns from indicating the true prices outside in the pergunnah or county. You may walk out of an octroi town and buy provisions for 4-5ths of the town prices. The landholder who sells his grain cheap in order to pay the Government taxes and the usurer's interest, and to buy seed corn and a little manure, or perhaps a plough bullock, finds a few months later that he must go to the usurer to obtain the means of purchasing food at a high price for his children. The fate of the daily labourer is yet more hard. At harvest time he and his wife and children can obtain plenty of work, and food is then cheap; but a few months later work is scarce and food dear, and in a year of drought starvation at once ensues. The forestalling of grain has, during two years past, been carried on to an alarming extent. Who can be surprised at the spread of socialism when the miserable poor see the rich piling up incredible wealth, not to be used for purposes of beneficent expenditure, but as an agent of power to enslave the labouring classes. The discontent thus caused becomes most dangerous in a country like India, because some of the European officers have become fearful of telling the truth, and the reports of others never reach the newspapers. It is important to bear in mind that the rebellion in 1857, as distinguished from the mutiny, was caused by debt. The first remedy to be applied is to abolish imprisonment for debt. The imprisonment of debtors is only useful for purposes of extortion, either to enable the usurer to extort fresh bonds from the debtor, or to force debtors to unearth some hidden store. If it can be proved that debtors, whether they be greek bankrupts or half-starved peasants, have concealed any money, let them be punished with imprisonment, but do not, without a particle of evidence, permit creditors to threaten with utter ruin millions of industrious poor.—Your obedient servant,

December 11.

"THE BANKRUPTCY OF INDIA."

MR. HYNDMAN'S article, "The Bankruptcy of India," in the Nineteenth Century, continues to supply food for the alarmists at home. The few Continental journals which give attention to our internal administration have eagerly seized on Mr. Hyndman's essay as a proof that the English rule in India is tottering to its fall. Mr. Hyndman attempts to show that we are draining the resources of this country not only by taxation, but also by a stream of capital yearly carried out of the country to England. He states the result of this two-fold depletion briefly and trenchantly in the title of his article—"The Bankruptcy of India." It is to be regretted that an essay which has furnished such congenial food to those who wish ill to our rule should have been written without a sufficient knowledge of the facts. But the attention which it has drawn to the rural statistics of India may possibly produce more beneficial, and more long-lived, results than the immediate injury which it has done. Mr. Hyndman complains of the absence of any adequate data for the calculations upon which he is about to enter. "The facts in relation to agriculture and other produce," he says, "have never been tabulated with any approach to accuracy." Mr. Hyndman then proceeds to rear upon such isolated facts and conjectures as came within his reach his fabric of figures proving "the bankruptcy of India."

The Indian Government has to blame itself for this result. It long omitted to discharge one of the most necessary functions of a civilised administration, namely, the statistical investigation of the condition of its people. It allowed the vast, dense masses living under its rule to go on multiplying or diminishing, striving or prospering, without inquiry. Mr. Hyndman taunts us with our incapacity to render an account of the people after more than a hundred years of rule. But he goes too far when he says that it is impossible to state whether the population is increasing, decreasing, or stationary. He also appears to be unacquainted with the fact that during the last ten years great and successful efforts have been made to remedy this defect. A special inquiry has been made into the condition of each district of India; a statistical survey of four-fifths of the whole country has thus been compiled, and is printed in 78 volumes. Nor does Mr. Hyndman appear to be better informed with regard to the efforts of the local Governments to tabulate these figures in their annual reports. As a matter of fact, any one who desires to know about India can now find a minute statistical survey for 190 out of the 240 districts. He can also find a return of the total provincial acreage under crops in almost every yearly report by the local Governments, excepting Lower Bengal. Mr. Hyndman has causes for complaint against the Indian Government, but he does not seem to be aware of the measures which that Government has taken during the past ten years to remove those causes.

Mr. Hyndman's figures are based on a return drawn up by "a singularly able native writer." That return gives the total cultivated area of British India at 158,000,000 of acres. Now, we know that even in fertile Bengal districts, where the population amounts to one person per acre, the people have a hard struggle for land. In parts where it exceeds one person per acre, the peasantry live at the mercy of each successive season, and just above starvations. We do not speak of metropolitan districts, but of the rural parts of India. We have purely agricultural districts in Behar, where the population exceeds one per acre; and the famine literature of recent years has made it painfully clear what such a density means. Now, Mr. Hyndman has allowed only 158,000,000 acres for the 190,000,000 of inhabitants in British India. When we turn to individual provinces, which we can test by the statistics published by the local Governments, we find curious mistakes. But the single fact that Mr. Hyndman only allows 158,000,000 of cultivated acres to supply food for 190,000,000 of people, and to furnish the enormous surplus of agricultural staples yearly exported from India, proves the untrustworthiness of his data more conclusively than the exposure of individual errors.

Many inquiries have been made during the past ten years with regard to the average income of the people. There is at the bottom of the community a considerable population which just manages to live. We think that he fairly it stated at a rupee a month per head. The great body of the cultivators spend double the sum, while, above the ordinary husbandmen, are numerous classes whose spending power is very much greater. We do not think that the general expenditure of the Indian people can be rated at less than two rupees a month per head, including not only their food and dress, but the wear and tear of their bullocks and other agricultural stock or capital. The experience gained from the cost of living in gaol points to a larger sum; but we know that gaol diet is more liberal than that within the reach of great masses of the people. Now, if we allow two rupees a-month as the average expenditure per head of the Indian population, we have a total of Rs. 4,56,00,00,000, or say £400,000,000 sterling. But, besides the sum thus expended by the Indian population upon living, they manage to export an average of £55,000,000 sterling of produce. It is clear, therefore, that supposing they save nothing, and if the production of the country were just equal to support the people from year to year and to supply the annual exports, this production cannot be estimated at a less value than £455,000,000 sterling. Mr. Hyndman assumes the total "value of produce" to be only £227,000,000 sterling, and he generously takes it at £300,000,000, "with the assurance that the average produce of all India is not being undervalued." It is needless to waste further words on such an estimate. Yet it is on this sole basis that his conclusion regarding "the bankruptcy of India" rests.

The truth, however, is that the produce of India not only suffices for the yearly wants of India, but enables her to accumulate a large annual amount of the commodities which she most prizes. Among those commodities are gold and silver. During the ten years ending 1876 she imported £95,000,000 sterling of gold and silver, of which she retained in her own hands about £78,000,000. The produce of the Indian soil and of Indian labour is, therefore, not merely equal to the daily consumption of the Indian people. But, even if it were only equal to that consumption, Mr. Hyndman's figures, from which he has deduced the new scare of "the bankruptcy of India," are altogether worthless and misleading.—Englishman.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

H.M.'s 68TH REGIMENT LIGHT INFANTRY.—Gen. Robert Phayre, C.B., has issued the following order in praise of the above regiment:—"On the occasion of the approaching departure of the 68th L.I. to Ferozepore, after a service of nearly three years at Nusseerabad, the brigadier general commanding has much pleasure in recording his sense of the excellent manner in which all ranks have maintained the reputation of the regiment for discipline, general smartness, and soldier-like conduct whilst under his command. To Lieut.-Col. Trent, commanding the regiment, the brigadier general's cordial thanks are due for the ready and efficient aid which he has at all times rendered him in conducting brigade duties. With regard to Col. Trent's high abilities as a commanding officer, the brigadier general commanding need only remark here that they have recently, on separate occasions, received the marked approbation of the Field Marshal H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, Commanding-in-Chief, and of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army. In taking leave of the regiment, Brigadier General Phayre feels assured that, should the 68th L.I. have the good fortune to take part in the impending field operations beyond the Punjab and Sind Frontiers, its high name as a steady field service regiment will be fully maintained."—Bombay Gazette.

CASE OF LIEUT. KNOX.—Lieut. F. C. Knox, who has recently been cashiered for desertion, writes as follows to a contemporary:—"I should like to say a few words about the treatment that I have experienced and the injustice I have had to suffer since my arrest at Bombay on a charge of desertion. After my arrest there on this charge, I was handed over to the officer commanding the 66th Regiment, who accepted my parole. On Saturday, September 21, two non-commissioned officers of the 85th arrived to escort me back to my regiment, and having with them written instructions with regard to their conduct towards me. Against this proceeding I appealed, and was detained until an answer should be received. The answer arrived by telegram. What was contained in this telegram, what reasons were given for this most extraordinary course of bringing me back to my regiment, I was not permitted to know; but was informed that matters were to proceed as originally ordered. From Wednesday, September 25, until Monday, November 11, I was confined in a small bungalow under double sentries. I am certain that the circumstances of my case have been misrepresented to the Commander-in-Chief or he would never have permitted such a hard sentence to be carried into effect. What other charges I have had laid against me, I have not been permitted to answer, but have been convicted of them without a hearing. In conclusion, I must say that this disgracing and ruining of a young officer neither reflects credit on the general commanding the Oudh Division, nor on the officer commanding the 85th King's Light Infantry."—Pioneer.

MESSRS. TODD, FINDLAY, AND CO.—The Rangoon Times is glad to hear that the temporary difficulties in which the old and respected house of Todd, Findlay, and Company of that city found themselves, in consequence of the disastrous failure of the City of Glasgow Bank, have been so far removed that the firm will resume business again very shortly, if not at once.—Indian Daily News.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE IN BURMA.—We have been informed that a proposal has been made, and, we believe, approved of by Government, to let officers serving in Burma accumulate twelve days' extra privilege leave.—Indian Daily News.

WE learn that the Supreme Government have lately sanctioned a plan for dividing the police of Assam into two parts—viz., a civil, and a frontier or military police. The reason put forward for this step is that at present constant calls are made on the civil police to perform military duty against the frontier tribes. The civil police, as heretofore, will discharge the work of policemen, whilst the military division will, in fact, be an indifferent imitation, on a small scale, of the Punjab Frontier Force, and will be thoroughly instructed in company drill, skirmishing, firing, and rifle exercises, the force being recruited chiefly from Sikhs, Goorkhas, Jhurroas, &c.—Indian Daily News.

NORTH WEST SECRETARIAT.—The changes in the North West secretariat that have ensued from the removal of Mr. James to the High Court are as follows:—Mr. Baker goes to the secretariat in Mr. James's place, and Mr. Holderness, abandoning the secretariat, takes Mr. Baker's place as junior secretary to the Board of Revenue. Mr. Connell remains first assistant secretary.—Pioneer.

TURKISH OFFICERS FROM YARKAND.—The Lahore paper says:—"Three Turkish officers arrived on Thursday in Lahore, by way of Jammu and Ladakh, from Yarkand, where they had been some time imprisoned by the Chinese authorities, who are now in possession. They had some years back been engaged by Yakoob Khan, the Yarkand Envoy, to instruct the troops of the Khush Beghi in artillery practice, and are now on their return journey to Constantinople, where the Yarkand Envoy is still residing. The Russians, when the officers left Yarkand, were, according to their account, within five marches of that place."—Pioneer.

THE MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The Calcutta Marine Department will, it is said, visit Burma during the ensuing cold season. They will inspect the spot where the old Krishna shoal lighthouse once stood, and also the other lighthouses on the coast, after which they will proceed to examine the Tenasserim coast.—Indian Daily News.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—Following closely after the demise of Mr. Batchelor, the death of Mr. W. Allen, personal assistant to the traffic manager, is a loss to the E.I. Railway that will be severely felt, and his place will not be easily supplied. He had great administrative talents, clear head, a wonderful grasp of details; he combined an aptitude for figures and an industry that was unsurpassed. It is few men who have been trained to the English system of accounts who can cast up three columns of figures, whether £ s. d. or Rs. a. p. at the one time; this Mr. Allen could do with ease. He handled the details of railway accounts in a manner that surprised trained railway accountants, and was equally well acquainted with the general work connected with the traffic department in its varied branches. His devotion to the service of the railway company is no doubt one of the principal causes of his death; for he never spared himself, and scarcely knew what it was to take a day's rest through the whole of his long service. His loss will be regretted by all servants of the E.I. Railway, from the highest to the lowest.—Railway Service Gazette.

A NEW SHOAL IN THE BAY OF BENGAL.—The Indian Government notifies that a sunken danger has been discovered about eight miles north west of Beacon Islet by the commander of the steamer Avagye, belonging to the British India Steam Navigation Company. He observed heavy rollers and breakers, indicative of a shoal-patch, with probably two or three fathoms over it at low water. The position is given as latitude 19deg. 2min. N., longitude 39deg. 21min. 30sec. E.; and the bearings are West Point, Ramree Island, N. by E.  $\frac{1}{2}$  E., north-west point of Cheduba Island, S.E. by S. Mariners are cautioned to navigate this locality with care, as the neighbourhood of Cheduba and Ramree Islands is but imperfectly known.

DURBAR OF LUCKNOW NOTABLES.—On the evening of Nov. 8 the nobles and rases of Lucknow attended the durbar of the Lieutenant Governor at the Government House. They were received by Sir George Couper agreeably to Eastern etiquette, and he expressed his gratification at the meeting. With a few prefatory remarks he spoke to them about the Hoseinabad endowment. He said it had been all along very badly managed; it had failed to fulfil the objects for which it was created; that arrangements would be made for its satisfactory management; that at present there are two trustees, Ali Quadir, son of the late Nawab Mohsammed-ud-dowla, K.C.S.I., and Mumtaz-ud-dowla; and that he has added two others to form a committee for the proper supervision of the endowment and the submission of periodical reports to the Government. His Honour then praised them for the promptitude with which they responded to the invitation of the Government, during the late distress, to give their liberal aid towards the relief of the poor and the starving, and that he felt sure of their readiness to meet the wishes of the Government upon any emergency. He felt proud that he had met such men, willing co-operators in every good work, and would impress upon them the necessity of creating a fund by their noble contributions, and placing it under judicious management, for the support of the poor and the helpless, and this would redound to their honour and credit. Their public spirit—their philanthropy—their munificence would be widely spread, and the Government would not forget to mark its sense of their merit by commensurate acknowledgments in the way it may choose to accord for their encouragement.—Friend of India.

NEW RAILWAY.—A recent Calcutta Gazette announced that a survey party is about to take the field for the purpose of making a survey for a railway from Sonarpore via Mughra Hat to Diamond Harbour in the 24-Pergunnahs.—Friend of India.

CASHMERE HOPS.—The Murree Brewery Company have just received from their hop gardens in Cashmere about 1,000lb. weight of hops of this season's growth. About a third of these have been picked from French seedling plants in their second season, and the remainder from stock imported from Kent, some of the plants being in their first season. The famine in the valley has been greatly against the experiment, and to have attained such satisfactory results in the face of adverse circumstances is regarded as encouraging.—Times of India.

PUNJAB NATIVE CONTINGENT.—A contingent of 4,000 troops offered by the chiefs in the Punjab, with thirteen guns, is to be utilised, and is under orders to be ready for immediate service. The contingent will be composed of 3,000 infantry and 1,000 cavalry, and, as at present arranged, will be supplied by the respective States as follows:—Patiala, 800 infantry, 300 cavalry, 4 guns horse artillery; Bahawalpur, 300 infantry, 100 cavalry; Jhind, 500 infantry, 200 cavalry, 3 guns horse artillery; Naba, 500 infantry, 200 cavalry, 3 guns horse artillery; Kapurthala, 300 infantry, 100 cavalry, 3 guns mule battery; Maler Kotla, 300 infantry, 50 cavalry; Faridkot, 200 infantry, 50 cavalry; Nahan, 200 infantry; totals, 3,000 infantry, 1,000 cavalry, 13 guns.—Civil and Military Gazette.

CATHOLIC CHAPLAINS.—Three Catholic chaplains have been posted as follows with the troops for Cabul:—Rev. Fr. Callistus, O.C., from Subathoo to Thull; Rev. Fr. James, O.C., from Bareilly to Quetta; and the Rev. Fr. Michel Angelo, O.C., from Nowshera to Jumrood and the Khyber column.—Times of India.

FEVER AT AGRA.—A very heavy mortality has been incurred during the last few months in the districts of Agra, Muttra, and Allypore from fever. The natives attribute their sufferings to the canals. High and low have been equally affected by the epidemic.—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

INVESTITURE OF THE PRINCESS OF TANJORE.

A durbar was held at Tanjore on Nov. 14 for the purpose of investing H.H. the Princess of Tanjore with the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India. His Grace the Governor of Madras personally delivered the insignia, and the event is, according to the correspondent of the Times of India, an epoch in the history of the State, inasmuch as "a princess of the Royal Family, a Brahmin of the Brahmins, a gosha all her life long, threw off the gosha or veil, and appeared in public. At the durbar his Grace delivered a letter of congratulation from the Viceroy, after which the Royal notification was read, commencing "Victoria Regina Imperatrix, to her Highness Vijeega Mahana Muktaba Bai Ammani Rajee Saheba of Tanjore," and granting full power to wear the decoration of the order, with which her Highness was duly invested. The following letter of thanks was then read on behalf of the Princess:—

"My Lord Duke—I heartily thank your Grace for the personal interest your Grace has taken in conferring the mark of Royal favour bestowed on me this day, and sincerely request that your Grace will be pleased to communicate to her Most Gracious and Imperial Majesty the expression of my deep gratitude and devotion to the British throne. The decoration that has been conferred on me to-day will be preserved in my family as a precious memento of her Majesty's love and mercy towards me, and I shall remember this day as an important event in the history of my life and of the ancient Royal Family of Tanjore. With my fervent prayer for the long life and prosperity of her Imperial Majesty and her beloved family, I remain your Grace's faithful friend,

"THE PRINCESS OF TANJORE."

The proceedings closed with the chanting of a Sanscrit ode. Her Highness, who was born in 1846, is the heiress of Maharajah Seevajee, and married in 1860 to H.E. Sakuram Rao Saheb Mobite Amia Rao of the Kolhapur princely family.

MADRAS CIVIL ORPHAN ASYLUM.—We hear that this institution has received a sum of Rs.2,500 from Mrs. J. Jordan, now in Bangalore, the widow of the late Mr. Jordan, formerly treasury deputy collector, Chingleput. The interest on this sum is to support an orphan boy. The endowment is made by the lady in memory of her husband.—Madras Times.

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—The Right Rev. F. Gell, D.D., Bishop of Madras, has returned to Madras after his visit to Europe. His lordship came via Bombay.

ENTERPRISING FRENCHMEN IN MADRAS.—This city owes much to a French gentleman, who has made this city his home, viz., Mons. de Closets. The Mercanum Railway Company, the prospectus of which was issued eight months ago, will soon turn its first sod. The capital of the company is to be Rs.12,00,000, in 8,000 shares of 125 rupees each. Of the capital required Rs.8,00,000 have already been subscribed for in London. The line would commence at Patlalom, one mile south of the Palar, where the junction with the South Indian Railway is to be. It will then run through the salt-producing districts of Chugoor, Chinampett, and Mercanum to Pondicherry. This project has been highly approved of by the French Government. Mons. de Closets is the engineer of the company. There are many French gentlemen doing very well in Madras, such as MM. de Closets, Faciulle, De Guigne, Prudhomme, and others.—Madras Correspondent of the Indian Daily News.

COOLIE EMIGRANTS TO NATAL.—The ship Umvote arrived at Madras on Nov. 9, with return emigrants from Port Natal. The Zenobia, Capt. C. W. H. Hutchins, arrived at Madras from Natal, Nov. 15. The following is the captain's report:—"Left Madras Sept. 7 with 456 coolies for Natal, had a fair passage, arrived at Natal Oct. 7, anchored during a strong S.W. gale with 120 fathom chain. Oct. 8, there was a heavy sea, could not land. Oct. 9, landed the coolies. 10th, there was a heavy sea, no communication between ship and shore. 11th, weighed anchor and sailed for Madras, crossed the equator in 87 deg. E. Nov. 3, had fresh S.W. winds and N.W. sea to 12 deg. North latitude, then calms and very smooth sea for five days to Madras roads. Anchored 11 a.m. Nov. 12." The Natal Mercury says the coolies by the Zenobia made a fair show of Indian labour.—Madras Times.

THE DELAYING MONSOON.—The present month of November is not November as it ought to be. No rain is falling or fallen, while the temperature reminds one of the months of May and June. The seasons are still out of joint, and an additional misery is added to life in this land, in our being robbed of even the little "cold season" which is ours of right. So far, we are told, the season exhibits the characteristics of the year 1862, when rain persistently held off till the end of December, and then made up for delay by the most persistently stormy week in the memory of "the oldest inhabitant." We hope we have not to wait six weeks more, as in 1862, before the rains descend and the temperature lowers. Throughout the Presidency matters meteorological still are out of joint. In one district in the north, Kurnool, there is too much rain. In others in the south there is too little. The Kurnool report for the 26th of October runs as follows:—"The standing dry crops are fair in some parts of the district, while heavy rain has injured them in others. Wet crops are good everywhere. Harvest of cumbu, korra, and jonna continues; outturn of combu and korra about three-fourths, jonna low. White cholum, cotton, Bengal gram, and wheat are being sown. Heavy rain fell during the early part of the fortnight, which did much injury to the standing crop. The rank grass, which has sprung up in black cotton soils in consequence of this rain, is much impeding the progress of white cholum cultivation." In Chingleput, Mr. Price was a little too sanguine. On the 26th ultimo he reported:—"Ploughing, sowing, and planting still actively continue. Harvesting of dry crops in the principal division, and of rice and ragi in the subdivision taluks going on, and the outturn is good. The north-east monsoon has commenced to blow in the most decided manner, but the monsoon has not yet broken, although there is every indication of its being at hand. The prospects of the season are extremely good. Rain would help such dry crops as have not yet matured." The Madura report is in these terms:—"The standing dry crops suffer much for want of rain in all the places except Periyakulam and Pulney taluks. The nunjah are generally in good condition, although in parts of Madura, Melur, and in the two zemindaries want of rain is felt. Transplantation of nunjah and sowing of pudjah are going on in all the taluks." According to the Bellary collector's report distress will linger yet awhile in that district. The collector, writing a fortnight ago, said:—"The area cultivated in Bellary and Adoni is much below the average. This arises from want of means on the part of the ryots, and is believed not to be affected by relief measures. The numbers on relief in Adoni are now small comparatively. The outturn in this taluk of the mungari crop is disappointing. Large flights of locusts have appeared in various parts of the district. The damage done by them is generally not so great as might be expected, and has been confined to the crops awaiting harvest. They have been driven off everywhere after a short stay."—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—BUSREH, OCT. 28.—Since last writing to you the Turkish Government have sent an expedition to Hassan and Gatiff (two days' march from the bunder bearing the same name) to bring the Sheik, who had rebelled against the Turkish rule, into subjection. It was here that the pirates pillaged vessels. The frigate Bourseh, with 2,000 soldiers, and later the steamer Nejjid (late Snipe) with 1,000 more, have left for the scene of operations. In addition, the Skanderia (flying the commodore's flag), is held in readiness with 1,000 men, and a cavalry regiment in Bagdad is prepared to proceed should reinforcements be required to quell the disaffection. The soldiers intended for the expedition arrived here from Bagdad per Turkish river steamers, and made a stay of a few days. While here they behaved in a very unruly manner, appropriating all the boats and donkeys for their special use, without paying the fares due; they pilfered fruit stalls, and beat the owners for raising objections to this nefarious conduct. One fellow came to grief for disputing the right of a soldier to take a few pomegranates from his load, and I believe the man subsequently died from the effects of the drubbing he received. On the days they were to embark they made themselves very obnoxious by seizing all the lighters and boats to take them off to the transports, heedless of the inconvenience to their owners and the impediment to traffic. It was stated lately in an up-country Indian paper that the number of deaths in the Gulf this year was more than twenty-three. Only three have come under my notice—viz., Capt. Watson, of the commissariat, of sunstroke; the second officer of the E.T. steamer Blosse Lynch, of fever; and the chief officer of the steamship Glendale, of heat apoplexy. There are in all thirteen or fourteen resident Europeans in Busreh, excluding seamen of the mercantile marine employed in river steamers, in which class not one death occurred.—Correspondent of Bombay Gazette.

A NATIVE DEPUTATION TO THE AMEER.—The Puna Sarvajanik Sabha, recently asked the permission of the Bombay Government to allow them to send a deputation of their members to the Ameer of Cabul for the purpose of bringing him to his senses about the present difficulty with the English.—Indian Daily News.

STATE OF GONDUL.—The Secretary of State has approved of the arrangements made for the administration of the State of Gondul in Kattywar during the remaining period of the young chief's minority. The State has hitherto been administered by an assistant political agent, with somewhat limited powers. In accordance with a system, which has worked well in the State of Bhownugger under similar circumstances, it has now been decided to associate a native gentleman with the British officer, and to allow the joint administrators to exercise the same powers as would be exercised by the chief personally.

REVISED ASSESSMENT.—The Secretary of State has approved of the revision of the assessment of ten villages of the Bhimthudi taluka of the Puna collectorate at the rates proposed by the Bombay Government. Under the settlement now expired it is very satisfactory to notice that the occupied area of these villages has more than doubled, and the arable assessed unoccupied waste has been entirely absorbed into occupation.—Indian Daily News.

SAW MILLS COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the Bombay Saw Mills Company (Limited), held on 19th ult. at the company's registered office, the following resolution, which was passed at the extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders on November 2, 1878, was proposed by the Honourable Mr. Morarji Goculdas (who presided), and seconded by Mr. Vanmally Shamji:—"That it be confirmed that Messrs. W. M. Macaulay and Co. be elected secretaries and treasurers of the Bombay Saw Mills Company (Limited), in place of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co., resigned. Their remuneration to be 2½ per cent. on the gross receipts of the company." The resolution was carried unanimously.

THE ATTACK BY NATIVES ON BRITISH SOLDIERS.—It will be remembered that we lately noticed a grievous assault committed by a party of natives on two soldiers of H.M. 2-11 Regiment stationed at Puna on Oct. 19. Five persons were subsequently arrested by the police, and, having been convicted, were sentenced to a year's imprisonment and Rs. 100 fine.—Deccan Herald.

THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL.—We understand that H.H. the Begum of Bhopal intends to file an appeal before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council against the decision of Sir M. R. Westropp and Sir Charles Sargent in her suit against the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company.—Times of India.

MUSCAT.—Advices from Muscat state that (with the exception of the Batinah, where there are slight disturbances) the country there is generally quiet. In El Sharkiyeh the feud between the Hishn and Hejrieen tribes is not at an end, but negotiations are said to have been opened.—Times of India.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S TROOPSHIP "SIMOOM."—Her Majesty's troopship Simoom, 3,302 tons, Commander J. F. G. Grant, arrived in harbour on Nov. 21 from Cyprus Nov. 2, Port Said, 4th, Suez, 5th, and Aden Nov. 13, with six officers, 10 Europeans, and 230 natives, rank and file, and 80 followers of the Bombay Sappers and Miners, and four officers, eight Europeans, and 200 natives, rank and file, and 40 followers of the Madras Sappers and Miners. During the voyage she experienced moderate north-easterly winds.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'S INDIAN TROOPSHIP "CROCODILE."—The Indian troopship Crocodile, 4,173 tons, Capt. F. H. Doughty, sailed on Nov. 22 for England with 28 officers, 8 ladies, and fifteen children, besides 14 ladies (without their husbands and 8 children); also 602 men, 72 women, and 174 children. ## THE AMEER'S REPLY.

THE following is the text of the Ameer's reply, dated November 19, to the ultimatum:—"Be it known to your Excellency that I received and read from beginning to end the friendly letter which your Excellency has sent in reply to the letter I despatched by Nawab Gholam Hussein Khan. With regard to the expressions used by your Excellency in the beginning of your letter, referring to the friendly character of the mission and the goodwill of the British Government, I leave it to your Excellency, whose wisdom and justice are universally admitted, to decide whether any reliance can be placed upon goodwill if evidenced by words only; but if, on the other hand, goodwill really consists of deeds and actions, then it has not been manifested by the various wishes that have been expressed and the proposals that have been made by British officials during the last few years to officials of this God-granted Government—proposals which, from their nature, it was impossible for them to comply with. One of these proposals referred to my undutiful son, the ill-starred wretch Mahomed Yakoob Khan, and was contained in a letter addressed by the officials of the British Government to the British agent then residing at Cabul. It was written in that letter that if 'the said Yakoob Khan be released and set at liberty, our friendship with the Afghanistan Government will be firmly cemented, but that otherwise it will not.' There are several other grounds of complaint of a similar nature, which contain no evidence of goodwill, but which, on the contrary, were effective in increasing the aversion and apprehension already entertained by the subjects of this God-granted Government. With regard to my refusal to receive the British mission, your Excellency has stated that it would appear from my conduct that I was actuated by feelings of direct hostility towards the British Government. I assure your Excellency that, on the contrary, the officials of this God-granted Government, in repulsing the mission, were not influenced by any hostile or inimical feelings towards the British Government, nor did they intend that any insult or affront should be offered; but they were afraid that the independence of this Government might be affected by the arrival of the mission, and that the friendship which has now existed between the two Governments for several years might be annihilated. A paragraph in your Excellency's letter corroborated the statements which they have made to this Government. The feelings of apprehension which were aroused in the minds of the people of Afghanistan by the mere announcement of the intention of the British Government to send a mission to Cabul before the mission itself had actually started or arrived at Peshawur have subsequently been fully justified by the statement in your Excellency's letter, that I should be held responsible for any injury that might befall the tribes who acted as guides to the mission, and that I should be called upon to pay compensation for any loss they might have suffered, and that if at any time those tribes should meet with ill treatment at my hands, the British Government would at once take steps to protect them. Had these apprehensions proved groundless, and had the object of the mission been really friendly, and no force or threats of violence used, the mission would, as a matter of course, have been allowed a free passage, as such missions are customary and of frequent occurrence between allied States. I am now sincerely stating my own feelings when I say this Government has maintained, and always will maintain, the former friendship which existed between the two Governments, and cherishes no feelings of hostility or opposition towards the British Government. It is also incumbent upon the officials of the British Government that, out of respect and consideration for the greatness and eminence of their own Government, they should not consent to inflict any injury upon their well-disposed neighbours, or to impose the burden of grievous trouble upon the shoulders of their sincere friends; but, on the contrary, they should exert themselves to maintain the friendly feelings which have hitherto existed towards this God-granted Government, in order that the relations between the two Governments may remain on the same footing as before; and if, in accordance with the custom of allied States, the British Government should desire to send a purely friendly and temporarily mission to this country, with a small escort, not exceeding twenty or thirty members, similar to that which attended the Russian mission, this servant of God will not oppose its progress."

We cannot expect that it will be any news to our readers that, on Saturday last, the anniversary of the death of the Prince Consort, H.R.H. Alice Maud Mary, Duchess of Saxony, and Grand Duchess of Hesse-Darmstadt, the second daughter of her Majesty Queen Victoria, died of diphtheria in the thirty-sixth year of her age. The devoted daughter who watched by her father's dying bed, the loving sister whose faithful nursing was rewarded by the recovery of her Royal brother, has fallen a victim to the maternal care with which she tended her sick children. The peoples of England and Germany alike mourn the untimely decease of one so adorned by all womanly virtues and accomplishments, and we can but tender our deepest sympathy to our Queen and the Royal circle in which death has made so sad a breach.

"Death, ere thou shalt slay another,
Fair and wise and good as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee."

THE AFGHANISTAN DEBATES.

We are informed by the able correspondent who has accompanied the force under General Roberts that the effect on the troops of the congratulatory telegrams received by the victorious general from her Gracious Majesty, as well as from the Viceroy, has been most satisfactory. "cheers us," said a soldier, "under all hardships to know that our work has been appreciated." The telegrams received last week announcing the triumphant majorities which have declared the approval accorded by Lords and Commons to the policy which set the troops in motion may be well assumed to have been as satisfactory to the Viceroy and his counsellors. Notwithstanding the slight censure, if it deserves the name, implied in Mr. Stanhope's admission that the speech to the native agent touching a possible partition of Afghanistan is open to criticism, the decision of the tribunal of Parliament has been given by no mere partisan majorities in favour of the Viceroy, with whose name the second Afghan war will be associated in our history.

It was not until the end of the debate in the House of Commons that the leader of the Opposition was, as it were, forced to declare what would be the policy of his party, and Lord Hartington summed it up in two clauses: "That there should be no permanent occupation of the country," and that "Lord Lytton must be recalled as the embodiment of all that our Eastern policy should not be." Thus the Vote of Censure upon the Ministry at home was by the last, and, politically speaking, leading orator, converted into a demand for the recall of the Viceroy to whose lot it has fallen to change the doing nothing policy of olden times and initiate active measures for securing the avenues to India against a possible enemy. As there has been no proposal, or even shadowed intention, to occupy Afghanistan, the first part of the Opposition policy may be looked on as mere words. The second has been rejected by an unexpectedly large majority in a full house, to which the fullest opportunities have been given of thoroughly scrutinising every step in the conduct of the Viceroy of India towards the Ameer. It has been well pointed out by impartial contemporaries that a great part of the grounds of impeachment of the Home Government and the Viceroy consisted in the purely partisan contention that the admitted blame to be attached to some one for the existing danger should be thrown, not on "the outs," but "the ins." The game of the poisoned needle was played last week, as is usual in our debates on momentous national questions, and certainly by no means to the advantage of the outs. To throw back and forwards responsibility for the alienation of the Ameer as attaching now to one political party and then to another, to impute imaginary motives of policy, and bandy charges of misrepresentation of facts or suppression of papers, were a necessary accompaniment of a discussion from which, we believe, slowly but surely have been evolved great public benefits in the way of clearness of knowledge at home and apprehension of British determination abroad. And this refers not to political divisions or parties. We are not concerned with the maintenance in power of this or that Ministry, nor with the votes which, either in the House of Commons or at the hustings, may be given to support a name or faction. It is certain that it would have been most impolitic at such a juncture to have weakened, much more to have changed, the Ministry, and the general result is, so far, one that may be distinctly regarded as an advantage. But the benefit resulting from the thorough examination of our Indian foreign policy to the people at large goes beyond the immediate present. Whether a Ministry has a working majority or not it is most needful that the English people be enlightened as to the measures required to protect India, to maintain security for her frontier and tranquillity within her provinces. Before the meeting of Parliament there was undoubtedly a widespread feeling that a war had been wantonly, and therefore wickedly, forced on the Ameer, without giving him time to consent to or even understand what we wanted. We need not go back to the Afghan Committee, with their commendation of a stereotyped policy of the past, which has been now almost universally admitted to be an anachronism. The baneful effect of their declaration, endorsed by names which Englishmen esteem as authorities on Indian subjects, made themselves felt in awakening the intense dislike that the English nation has to open bullying or spoliation. A feeling that the Ameer had been badly treated was strong. The result of the debate, the publication of the papers, and the full and free comments thereon, has been to impress upon the public mind that, whoever was to blame for it, the Ameer had for some years past inclined to side with the Russians and nourished hostility to England, which broke out at last in his insulting refusal to receive the mission. The idea so sedulously spread, that he had reigned unmolested as an independent prince, owing us no particular amity, and wanting nothing from us, has been utterly dissipated by the revelations of his earnest entreaties for protection, advice, and assistance. He himself has been allowed to explain his own motives for his former so-called friendship and his latter avowed enmity, and they are not enough to vindicate the claim made on his behalf for sympathy and interference to save him from the aggressive policy of the Government. It is very probable that a considerable section of the community will be of opinion with Mr. Jenkins that both sides of the House are in the wrong. It is likely that a few will still think that the policy of conciliation, as if a timorous man should pat and soothe an ill-conditioned cur, ought to be still applied to Shere Ali; but we are bold enough to predict that throughout the country the opinion will have widely obtained that the Ameer has fully deserved, inasmuch as he need not have provoked, his chastisement. If the porter has ranged himself on the side of the would-be burglar, if the bandog has fawned on the hand of the foe, English common sense has discerned the truth of the illustration, and will approve the exaction of the penalty. Turning to the people of India, we may rejoice over the assurance to them as to the proud interest that England cherishes for that great section of the British Empire. It is not possible to over estimate the importance attaching not more to the vote than to the utterances which preceded it. It might have been that less care should have been bestowed by the Opposition speakers to defend themselves from the barely possible imputation of indifference to India. Englishmen might well deem it unnecessary to protest that they cared not to defend the Indian Empire, and the silence might have been misconstrued. It would have been an evil, indeed, had the loyal voices of the Indian princes, eagerly pressing forward to offer their services to their suzerain, found echo only on the one side of the Houses of Parliament. It has been most clearly declared that whatever be the real or apparent differences as to the means there is but one feeling as to the necessity of preserving inviolate the territories of India. The noble peroration of the Chancellor evoked from Lord Selborne an elaborate disclaimer of the "Perish India Party," if there be such a one. Seeing that he made a parallel of this hollow piece of rhetorical bombast with the proverbial ruat Cælum, it may well be thought that he was gravely jesting at once at the "learned historian," and the credulity of those who fancied for a moment that such a thought could be entertained for an instant by any Englishman. Our fellow-subjects of Bombay and Calcutta who have reposed their confidence in Mr. Gladstone as the champion of native grievances will realise fully how all party differences would disappear before India's danger when they read that he disapproved of the war because he would, if India were menaced, attack Russia, as the instigator of the mischief, rather than the Ameer. It is well it should be so; nothing would be more injurious than that it should be supposed in India that either of the great political parties in England was more careful of Indian interests than its rival. We care not which might be the possessor of the proud distinction. Already there have been incipient signs of an attempt to throw home partisan feelings into the scales of Indian politics; to a certain extent it is not to be regretted that in cases of internal legislation the educated natives should avail themselves of an appeal to the criticism of the Opposition, for such a practice develops a healthy relation between our Indian subjects and the English legislators; but that the idea should establish itself that it was possible for a party to rule in England which would set the value of an Indian pergunnah to the empire below that of an English county, nor deem one as well worth fighting for as another, would be an irreparable evil. The Afghan debate has fully declared to our Indian fellow-subjects and to the world that all the jealousies of party, all the the personal antipathies of rivals, are forgotten when it is a question of defending our Oriental Empire. Who touches even the pardoh of Hindostan must try conclusions with the full power of Great Britain wheresoever it can be brought to bear. Lastly, the discussion has proved most useful in declaring this to Russia, as well as in unmasking the designs, if not of the Government of the Czar, of his viceroy in Turkestan. We may congratulate Sir H. Rawlinson that his persistent warnings, so long unregarded, have at last been acknowledged as true. For long years, like the Trojan priestess, he foretold to deaf ears the advancing danger. It is well that he, unlike Cassandra, has lived to see the policy of precaution anticipate the ruin. We have not pointed out the pitiable injury to established reputations for political foresight that this debate has wrought; but we may not pass unnoticed the verification of the predictions of those who foresaw the slow-moving progress southwards of the boundary of Russia, and the foothold that, if no precautions were taken, she would gain for offensive movements against India. Thanks to the clear and precise revelations of her gradual approaches from Tashkent, we know, and Russia has been explicitly told we know, how much reliance for the future may be placed on her promises of abstention in Central Asia. The assurance that India shall not be touched or even menaced will be respected throughout the Asiatic borders wherever the shadow of the Russian power is cast, and this assurance, given not only by the Government, but by the mouthpieces of the Opposition, must make the statesmen of St. Petersburg realise the truth that it is no longer safe to speculate on English party divisions. We may hope that a withdrawal of irritating influences will be a speedy consequence; we may be sure that alike from the supporters and the opponents of the Government the lesson has been taught to Englishmen to be on their guard, and to Russia to beware, and, finally, to India to rest assured that the English nation will peril all to defend her from all assailants.

THE Ceylon Times of 14th ult. says that the weather has settled down somewhat more like the proper type of the north-east monsoon season, though there are still showers occasionally from the south-west—a most unusual occurrence in the month of November. In some of the coffee districts we hear that more rain at times would be acceptable, in order to fill out the ripening coffee berries. The recent squally weather along our coast was the result of a cyclone which swept over a portion of the Bay of Bengal, and did much damage to shipping at Vizagapatam and elsewhere, on the 5th November.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY, DEC. 9.

Lord CRANBROOK moved a resolution declaring "that, the Queen having directed a military expedition of the forces charged on the Indian revenues to be despatched against the Ameer of Afghanistan, the House of Lords consents that the revenues of India shall be applied to defray the expenses of the military operations which may be carried on beyond the external frontiers of her Majesty's Indian possessions," and in support of his motion he began by stating that the moment war became inevitable the Government called Parliament together in obedience to the law, adding that he saw no necessity for imposing any charge on the revenues of India during the present financial year for the purposes of the war. He dwelt on the importance of having Afghanistan as a friendly Power on our frontier, and, taking a review of our past policy in reference to that country, he mentioned that a change occurred in our relations with the Ameer after the death of Lord Mayo, though he believed that in 1873 the time had then come to declare a readiness to assist the ruler of Afghanistan. The course pursued, however, had the effect of dissociating him from England, and inducing him to look elsewhere for help. In 1877 Lord Salisbury thought it desirable, in order to obtain reliable information, to have a British resident in Afghanistan, but nothing could be more repugnant to the feelings of the British Government than to coerce the Ameer. Nevertheless, the Ameer, who refused our mission, received with ostentatious pomp a Russian envoy at a time when he might have imagined that England would be engaged in war with Russia. Such conduct might of itself be regarded as a declaration of hostilities, and, an ultimatum having been addressed to the Ameer, an answer arrived after a long delay, but it was an evasive reply. The time had therefore gone by for masterly inaction. He called on the House of Lords to support the motion, for the sake of the honour and safety of the Queen's Indian possessions.

Lord HALIFAX expressed great objection to the measures taken for forcing residents on the ruler of Afghanistan, and moved an amendment declaring that, "while ready to consent to providing the means necessary for bringing the war in which we are unhappily engaged to a safe and honourable conclusion, the House of Lords regrets the conduct pursued by the Government, which has unnecessarily engaged this country in the contest." He proceeded to say that by the Treaty of 1855 we were bound to respect the territory of the Ameer, and should that understanding be violated the people of India would believe that the territory of a neighbouring Power had been annexed by an act of barefaced spoliation; while at the same time any occupying force would be beset by difficulties and dangers on account of the nature of the country, being forced to go on in spite of its wishes from one boundary to another. By conciliation and kindness we might best secure, he thought, a scientific frontier.

Lord LAWRENCE could not conceive how it could be asserted that the Ameer of Afghanistan, who was really and truly an independent chief, had violated his engagements towards this country by receiving a friendly mission from Russia. He vindicated the policy he pursued in reference to the competitors for power in Afghanistan; but when there was a prospect of Shere Ali becoming the permanent ruler of that country he declared that then was the time to assist him. As long as the Viceroyalty of Lord Mayo and of Lord Northbrook existed, and also while he himself was responsible for the conduct of affairs, the relations with the Ameer were satisfactory. The whole cause of disagreement was the attempt to force British officers upon that ruler.

Lord DERBY thought that, as far as he could judge, the cause of the misunderstanding between the Ameer and this country was that kind of support which it was impossible for us to promise—namely, he wanted to have his dynasty supported against all enemies. He held that in the circumstances existing in 1876 it was desirable to establish British agents in Afghanistan by friendly means, but he did not advocate the forcing them on the Ameer. If we had told the Ameer that as he had received a mission from the Russians he could not do less than receive a mission from us, then it was not likely that the Russians would have encouraged him to resist receiving an English mission, and he thought that with prudence the war might have been avoided. He also alluded to the probability of great expense being incurred on account of the war, and said that he looked with alarm on the present and future condition of the finances of India. He believed that the war, which he did not think necessary, might have been avoided with a little forbearance.

The Duke of SOMERSET dissented from the observations of Lord Derby, and if the war would cost a great deal of money he asked whether India was not worth the expenditure. He declared that he could not support the amendment.

Lord NAPIER and ETRICK protested against the expenses of the war being borne entirely by India, but he declared that he would vote for the resolution.

TUESDAY.—DEC. 10.

Lord GREY, resuming the debate on the Afghan resolution, said that he was disappointed in not having as yet heard from the Government one word to show that the war against Afghanistan was justifiable. To the best of his judgment the Government had failed to make out any legitimate ground for war, and without such ground he maintained that the commencement of hostilities was a great national crime. Pointing out various objections to the policy of the Government, he concluded by stating that he would support Lord Halifax's amendment, with the object of bringing the war to an immediate conclusion.

The LORD CHANCELLOR dissented from the policy advocated by Lord Grey—which he styled the policy of the ostrich—of taking no notice of the doings of Russia; and none of the best Indian authorities, he added, doubted the existence of danger on the side of Russia. After arguing that the policy of "masterly inactivity" broke down the moment it came to be applied, he proceeded to refer to the despatches which passed on the Afghan question, which, he said, must have been unsatisfactory to the Ameer, as a great and unfavourable change occurred in his mind at the end of 1873. He regretted the proposal of Lord Halifax's motion, for it was a motion to stop the supplies for the support of the Indian troops in Afghanistan, and he implored the House of Lords to do nothing which would impair or endanger the stability of our Indian Empire.

Lord NORTHBROOK thought it would have been wise and just of the Government not to have thrown on India the cost of this war, which had in reality arisen out of complications in Europe. The increased revenue of which the Secretary for India had spoken on the previous night was the product of unnecessary taxation. When Viceroy of India he served two years under the Government of Mr. Gladstone and two years under that of the noble earl the present Prime Minister, and he had not been able to discover any difference in the objects which each of those Governments had in view. The Government of India never had looked on the advance of Russia in the same light as that in which it was regarded by Sir H. Rawlinson and the noble and learned earl on the woolsack. The Secretary for Foreign Affairs entertained a different opinion as to what ought to be done with regard to Afghanistan from that of everybody of experience in India. He himself asserted emphatically that when he left India the Ameer was loyal to the British Government, and that the real cause of his subsequent discontent was the attempt to force English agents upon him. During the two years he was Viceroy under the present Government he never received the slightest hint that the policy of 1873 was wrong, or that stronger assurances should be given to Shere Ali, and he himself made the suggestion of an additional guarantee which, though not to the full extent, was subsequently carried out by Lord Salisbury as Minister for India. The only difference between the late Government and the present up to the outbreak of the war was as to the means and not as to the object. It was the action of her Majesty's Government which made it too late to secure the faithful alliance of the Ameer when the danger arose of a war between this country and Russia. The matter of the reception of the Russian Embassy to Cabul ought to have been settled between this country and Russia. With great regret he felt obliged to say that the course the Government had taken was unnecessary, and to join in the vote for the amendment before their lordships.

Lord SALISBURY vindicated his answer to the Duke of Argyll in June, 1877. The idea that the Ameer had any real aversion to English residents within his frontiers was an entire imagination. The Ameer himself had told us the causes of his anger. The first of these was the impartiality of Sir J. Lawrence; the next was the interference of Lord Northbrook on behalf of the Ameer's son. The late Viceroy of India had told their lordships that there was no change of policy. If that was so, why censure the Government? It was not a military invasion of India we had to guard against, but it was a diplomatic invasion of Afghanistan we had to guard against. We had to take measures to prevent Russia working in the East with Afghanistan as her base, as she had worked in Europe with Bulgaria and Bosnia as her base. To prevent such an evil, remonstrances to St. Petersburg were useless. It could only be done by English agents to watch on the spot the unauthorised diplomacy of Russia. Our dispute with the Ameer was because he would not receive an envoy from us while he was professing friendship for us, but conspiring with subordinate chiefs against us.

Lord CARDWELL replied to the question of Lord Salisbury why, if there had been no change of policy, should the House be asked to censure the Government, that the censure was called for, because the means of carrying out that policy had been so essentially changed as to lead to the existing complications.

Lord BEACONSFIELD commenced by descanting upon the inconvenience to this country of the present boundary of our North West Provinces. We had been in possession of it for twenty-eight years, during which we had had nineteen expeditions to control the neighbouring inhabitants, in which we had employed between fifty and sixty thousand men. If there had been Viceroys who had not felt the inconvenience of such a boundary those persons were not fit to be viceroys. Lord Napier of Magdala now thought a rectification of that boundary to be absolutely necessary. Between civilised nations of Europe there had been numerous treaties for the rectification of frontiers which certainly had conduced to peace. He had not described rectification of the frontier as the object of the war, but as a probable consequence of the war. For defensive purposes there was the greatest possible advantage on the side of a scientific frontier as compared with a haphazard frontier. Things might have continued to go on as they had gone on for years if it had not been for the sudden appearance of Russia in the vicinity of Afghanistan. He held that the preparations made by Russia in Central Asia, when it was supposed that there was to be war between this country and Russia, were allowable. Explanations had since been given by Russia on that point which he thought were a sufficient answer; but after those things had occurred it was impossible for us to go on in the old way. He regretted that the debate had been rather a wrangle than a political discussion. The question on which their lordships were called on to decide was not merely one concerning Afghanistan, it was one affecting the prestige and influence of England throughout Asia as well as in Europe; and he hoped their lordships would condemn unequivocally by their votes "a peace-at-any-price policy" which for a moment had even dimmed the majesty of England.

Their lordships then divided. The Lord Chancellor announced the numbers to be:—

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY, DEC. 9.

In answer to Sir H. Havelock, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the Russian Ambassador here had informed the Government that the Russian mission had left Afghanistan; and, in answer to Mr. Fawcett, Mr. STANHOPE stated that the expenditure hitherto incurred in the Afghan expedition had been incurred by order of the Secretary of State in this country, and that this was unquestionably within his power Mr. Stanhope established by a quotation from a speech of the Duke of Argyll in 1867. Mr. FAWCETT gave notice of his intention to move a resolution declaring that the Secretary of State has infringed the letter and spirit of the Act of 1857.

On the report of the Address being brought up, the debate on the Afghan war was opened by

Mr. WHITBREAD, who moved as an amendment a resolution declaring that the House "disapproves the conduct of her Majesty's Government, which has resulted in the war with Afghanistan." He proceeded to show that the Afghan policy of former Viceroy had always been "non-intervention and peace," and that they had always refrained from pressing on the Ameer the reception of British residents in Afghanistan. It was to this demand that he attributed the hostility of the Ameer, contending that it was conscientiously objected to by the Afghans as dangerous to their independence, and that it would really have been of no value. In 1875 there had been a departure from this policy, when Lord Salisbury directed the Indian Government to obtain the Ameer's assent to the placing of British officers at Herat and Candahar. Lord Northbrook always resisted, but Lord Lytton when he arrived in India lost no time in endeavouring to carry the new policy into effect. Tracing the communications between Lord Lytton and the Ameer up to the end of Sir L. Pelly's negotiations at Peshawur, he maintained that it was owing to the altered tone and the threats with which the Viceroy enforced his demand for the reception of British residents that the Ameer became distrustful and suspicious, and that ultimately he began to turn a friendly ear to General Kauffman's advances. Turning to the Central Asian papers he traced the Russian communications with the Ameer, contending that it was not until Lord Lytton had threatened the Ameer that he gave any encouragement to General Kauffman of which we could complain. The representations made to Russia by our Government against her dealings with the Ameer were much too weak, and he complained that, while it was on account of Russia's action that we had gone to war, it was not with Russia, but with the Ameer that we had picked a quarrel. The conclusion he drew from the papers was that ever since Lord Lytton went to India the Government had determined on a rectification of frontier, and they took advantage of the Ameer's imprudent reception of the Russian envoy to make the necessary advance into his territories. He complained that the Government had concealed their new policy from Parliament and the country, and called attention to the speech of Lord Salisbury in the House of Lords last year disclaiming all intention of sending an envoy to Cabul, by which Parliament had been entirely misled.

Mr. E. STANHOPE disputed altogether the argument that the Ameer became hostile to us solely because we insisted on forcing British resident agents on him. On the contrary, the Ameer had himself at one time asked for a British agent, and at the Umballa conferences had expressed himself willing at some future time to consent to such a measure. He contended that even in Lord Northbrook's time the Ameer had become unfriendly to us, and that before Lord Lytton had held any communication with him he had become distrustful of us and had entered into friendly relations with General Kauffman. Lord Northbrook himself had admitted that in view of the constant advance of Russia it would be necessary at some time to give further assurances to the Ameer, and the sole difference between him and Lord Salisbury was as to the opportuneness. Lord Northbrook thought that any further action might be delayed until the Russians came much nearer, and Lord Salisbury insisted that it must be taken at once. Events had shown that Lord Salisbury was right. When the Russian Mission was received at Cabul, and the Ameer was found to be stirring up the border tribes against us, the Government would have been failing in its duty to the people of India if they had delayed longer to meet the evident danger. They were not afraid of an invasion of India, but they knew that the establishment of Russian influence at Cabul would have a disturbing effect in India, and would lead to troubles on our borders. It was determined then to send a friendly mission to the Ameer, which the Viceroy hoped and believed would receive a friendly welcome. But when, after many delays, it was turned back with violence, the Indian Government had no option, unless it wished to be disgraced in the eyes of its subjects, but to take the measures which had led to the war.

TUESDAY.—DEC. 10.

The adjourned debate on the Afghan war was resumed by Lord J. MANNERS, who denied that the Government had changed the ancient policy which was to establish on the north-western frontier a strong, friendly, and independent State; all that it had changed was the means. "Masterly inactivity" might have been sufficient ten or twenty years ago, but the advance of Russia had made it totally inapplicable. Lord Northbrook himself had contemplated the necessity for a change at some future time, when the Russians had occupied Merv; but the Government differed from him, and held that immediate action was called for. When it was proposed to the Ameer to receive a British envoy, it was not meant in a hostile spirit, but it was intended to cement an alliance with the Ameer, and the demands which he made were to be granted on condition that he received British agents. But when this was refused, and a Russian envoy was received at Cabul, it was impossible to rely on the old methods. Still, by sending Sir N. Chamberlain they continued to follow a friendly course, and it was not until his mission was repulsed with insult and violence that they were compelled to go to war. But even before resorting to the extreme course plenty of time was given to the Ameer to change his mind. With regard to the future, the policy of "masterly inactivity" to which the Opposition wished to return had proved barren and useless, and was condemned by circumstances and by the greatest Indian authorities. With regard to the intentions of the Government for the future, the war must be prosecuted until Shere Ali had made due submission, and the Government would then be prepared to grant him terms as moderate as was consistent with the security and peace of the Indian Empire.

Mr. GLADSTONE asked what was to be done if the Ameer did not submit, but disappeared altogether from the scene of our military operations. Proceeding then to deal with the motion, he complained warmly of the concealment habitually practised by the present Government, and impeached the trustworthiness of the documents laid before Parliament, which, he said, contained gross misstatements showing unprecedented recklessness and negligence. Especially he dwelt on the inaccuracy of the Indian Government's despatch of May 10, 1877, which he showed at much length contained an inadequate and misleading description of the Ameer's grievances. He impugned also the accuracy of Sir Lewis Pelly's statements at the Peshawur conference, and contended that when Lord Northbrook left India the Ameer was friendly to us, and required nothing more from us than a continuance of the old policy and to be released from the demand for British agents. The old policy, therefore, had succeeded in all its objects. But Lord Lytton had commenced a new policy, the first price of which was the present war, and in enumerating the faults committed by the Viceroy in his dealings with Afghanistan he dwelt specially on the occupation of Quetta, the revocation of all the promises which had been made to the Ameer by former Viceroys, the refusal to allow him to send a new envoy down to Peshawur, who would have made all the concessions required from him, and the allegation of the Russian mission as a cause of war after the Government had accepted the transparent pretexes of Russia. He reproached the Foreign-office with weakness and with having allowed Russia to establish a title to send a mission of courtesy to Cabul whenever it pleased. He denied altogether that the mission was within the understanding with the former Administration. On the contrary, it was a direct violation of the agreement between Prince Gortschakoff and Lord Clarendon. He concluded by appealing to the future against what he anticipated would be the present determination of the House, and even of the country, to accept a share in the responsibility of the war.

Lord G. HAMILTON, after explaining that the occupation of Quetta, undertaken by Lord Lytton reluctantly, but in deference to the advice of the military officers, who declared that it was the only point from which the trade could be protected, said the charge of untrustworthiness made by Mr. Gladstone against the official documents was not supported by the facts, and he protested warmly against the unworthy imputation of deceit brought against the Viceroy, the Commander-in-Chief, and other members of the Council. He contended that, so far from Shere Ali being friendly when Lord Northbrook left India, the present Government, when it came into office, found a state of things eminently unsatisfactory, which was growing worse and worse every year, and which might have involved us in war with Russia. The masterly inactivity policy, which in some respects was unworthy of a great civilised Power, had completely collapsed long before Lord Northbrook left India, and a continuance in it would have been full of danger. With regard to the reception of British agents, Shere Ali in 1869 was willing to accede to it, and Lord Northbrook contemplated its ultimate necessity, and there could be no security against a war with Russia unless we had an agent at Herat. Such a step was not in any way an interference with the internal affairs of Afghanistan, and without it the Indian Government could not have given the Ameer the unconditional assurances which he required. Although that war was to be regretted, after the conduct of the Ameer it was inevitable, and to have declared war against Russia he showed would have led ultimately to the annexation of Afghanistan.

THURSDAY.—DEC. 12.

Sir W. HARCOURT gave notice of his intention to ask the Government whether the Russian Mission as well as the Russian Envoy had been withdrawn from Cabul; whereupon the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said he would answer the question at once. When he gave his reply the other day he said the Government understood from what had passed between our representatives and the Russian Ambassador that the recall of the Russian Envoy was equivalent to the withdrawal of the Russian Mission; but they had received information since which led them to form a different conclusion. They had, therefore, to assure the House that they had not and did not intend to acquiesce in the exercise of Russian influence in Afghanistan, either in that form or any other.

In answer to Sir H. Havelock, Mr. STANHOPE said that no proposal to increase the number of British regimental officers in the native army had been received from India.

Mr. BOURKE informed Mr. E. Ashley that nothing had yet been settled with regard to the 3rd clause of the Chefoo Convention. Sir T. Wade was instructed to consult with the Viceroy of India on the subject before his return to China. After that he hoped the negotiations would soon be completed. When they were completed papers would no doubt be presented.

The adjourned debate on the Afghan war was resumed by Mr. GRANT DUFF, who complained that the correspondence did not give any clear account of the reasons why the "old policy" had been abandoned and a new policy adopted. That we should fear an invasion from Afghanistan he regarded as ridiculous, and he laid it down also that while Afghanistan was "out of our parish," we should insist always that Russia should refrain from interference there. The old policy, he maintained, had been perfectly successful, and it had received the approval of successful Ministers, including Sir S. Northcote, whom he pressed repeatedly to explain without any reserve why he had changed his mind. Canvassing the various reasons assigned for the change of policy, he maintained that if we feared the advance of Russia, we ought to have gone to St. Petersburg and threatened war if the frontier of Afghanistan were threatened. As to the "scientific frontier," on which he commented in a sarcastic vein, although some advance might be necessary if Russia were likely to attack us with a well-appointed European army, no rectification would be of the smallest use which did not include a large part of Afghanistan. The Cabinet might not desire the annexation of Afghanistan, but it would probably be forced on them; and, among other reasons for deprecating it, he said it would precipitate the meeting of the Sepoy and the Cossack on the Oxus, which all wise politicians must wish to defer, at least until the Eastern Question was settled. But, he asked, amid cheers from the Opposition side, had we a moral right to seize on this scientific frontier? Mr. Duff concluded his speech by inveighing against the want of candour and the suppression of information which had become habitual to the Government; to which

Mr. BOURKE replied with some warmth, both for himself and on behalf of Lord Salisbury, who had been specially attacked, and challenging Mr. Duff's ingenuity to point to a single case in which he had made an erroneous statement on a matter of fact. Entering into the general merits of the case, he contended that the papers showed our relations with Afghanistan to be going from bad to worse ever since 1869, and recent events revealed a danger which had long been prophesied by great Indian authorities, but which public opinion had refused to believe in. The appointment of British agents in Afghanistan, he showed, was a measure to which the Ameer was not so much opposed as had been represented, and it had become absolutely necessary in consequence of the advance of Russia and the constant overtures made to the Ameer by General Kaufmann. No attempt was made at the Peshawur Conference to force them on the Ameer, and when those conferences were broken it was because the Ameer was endeavouring to stir up war against us. The war had been undertaken in self-defence, and to wipe out an insult which we could not have submitted to, though we had borne more from the Ameer than we should have endured from a strong Power, and the first result had been to elicit offers of loyal support from all the great princes of India. To the charge of keeping back the papers, he replied by pointing out that at least one-half of these papers had been kept back by Mr. Gladstone's Government, and he gave an emphatic denial to Mr. Gladstone's assertion that the Government had acquiesced in Russia's claim to send a mission to Cabul whenever she pleased.

Mr. O'SHAUGHNESSY regarded the war as one of aggression.

Lord WILLIAM HAY supported the vote of censure solely on account of what Lord Lytton had done since the Treaty of Berlin. He did not disapprove of the proposal to send British agents into Afghanistan, because without them we could not maintain our supremacy there, nor did he think that there had been any change of policy, because, as he showed, both Lord Lawrence and Lord Northbrook had departed from the policy of "masterly inactivity" when they thought it necessary. But he believed that Lord Lytton went to India determined to bring on a war, when his real course should have been to pursue a conciliatory policy towards Shere Ali, and give him time to follow his natural bent for an English alliance. Among other consequences of the war he pointed out that it made it impossible for Russia to withdraw from Cabul, and would give her an excuse for an advance to Merv, and perhaps Herat.

Mr. A. GATHORNE-HARDY replied to Mr. Gladstone's charges, and vindicated the trustworthiness of the official papers.

Mr. FOLJAMBE strongly condemned the pretexts on which an unjust war had been commenced.

Mr. C. B. DENISON complained that in forming a judgment on the change of policy, sufficient allowance had not been made for the alteration in the situation, owing to the progress of Russia in Turkestan. This, he thought, amply justified Lord Salisbury's instructions to Lord Lytton; and if the Government had permitted Russia to establish her influence in Afghanistan they would have been guilty of gross dereliction of duty.

Mr. RYLANDS censured the Government for going to war without consulting Parliament.

Sir J. HAY argued that by refusing to accept our envoy the Ameer had committed a breach of international law which justified the war.

Mr. GOSCHEN ridiculed as preposterous the suggestion that the war was the result of the irritation created in the Ameer's mind five years ago, and maintained that it was really an episode in the Treaty of Berlin. To establish the connection between the Eastern Question and the Afghan trouble, he reminded the House that while in April the Indian troops arrived at Malta, in May the first step was taken for sending the mission, and the envoy actually entered Cabul on the same day as our Plenipotentiaries returned to London bringing "peace with honour." Analysing the Central Asian Papers, he complained that the Government had not remonstrated with sufficient firmness against the advance of Russia towards Afghanistan, and, drawing the inference that the policy of Russia was to encourage us to annex Afghanistan in order that they might go on annexing the rest of the Khanates; Russia, in fact, had outwitted us, and was now laughing in her sleeve. On behalf of the Opposition, he protested against the supposition that they were indifferent to the establishment of Russian influence at Cabul, or that they thought India a burden. He held that the Russian mission was a breach of her understanding with us, and he blamed the Government for being too easily satisfied with an evasive answer from Russia; in fact, while they had bullied at Cabul they had flinched at St. Petersburg. It was the fault of the Government that the Russians had come to Cabul; but while the Opposition thought the war to be unjust and unnecessary, they desired that it should be prosecuted with vigour, and that its object—the exclusion of Russia from Afghanistan—should be attained.

Major NOLAN discussed the various suggestions for a "scientific frontier;" after which the debate was adjourned on the motion of Earl Percy.

Sir W. HARCOURT divided the question at issue into two parts—had the policy of the Government been wise, and was the war just? Admitting that the Government was bound to take action if the Ameer were unfriendly to us and Russia were advancing, he asserted that the Ameer's temper was caused entirely by what happened in 1876, and that Russia had not made any advance to the Ameer of which we could complain until Lord Lytton had completely estranged him. But when it became necessary to win him back the Government took the most unlikely means, and he complained specially of the choice of Sir Lewis Pelly as our agent at Peshawur, of what he called the attempt to "bamboozle" the Ameer, of the threatening letter written to him, and of the manner in which the conferences were closed. The terms offered to him were in no way more advantageous than Lord Northbrook's, and if the Indian Government had wished the negotiation to break down and war to ensue it could not have taken a more effective step than to prescribe as a condition precedent that the Ameer should receive British agents. Being thus alienated, as he contended, by the sharp practice and the want of temper, straightforwardness, and common sense which marked the proceedings of the Government, he had no other course left to him but to make friends with Russia. No doubt when the Russian mission was sent to Cabul the Government was right in sending Sir Neville Chamberlain; but they ought to have done it in a manner as little humiliating and vexatious to the Ameer as possible. What, he asked, was now to be done with Afghanistan; for to take the scientific frontier which had been hinted at would make Afghanistan an Asiatic Bulgaria?

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL referred to the various passages in the papers, which, he contended, showed that the insufficiency of Lord Northbrook's assurances in 1873 had alienated the Ameer, and that Lord Salisbury, seeing the danger of this state of things, had endeavoured in various ways to bring him back into an alliance with us. If he had not succeeded it was because the Ameer had already made up his mind to side with Russia; and the real reason why the Peshawur conference had failed was that he had determined not to yield the conditions which were required from him. The war, he asserted, was just; for the Ameer had not only broken his treaty engagements with us, but had turned back our envoy with insult and force; and it was a necessary war, because the safety of India required that if Afghanistan were not a friendly Power our frontier should be strengthened.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON fixed his attention first on the unsatisfactory reasons which the Government had given for abandoning the old policy, insisting, in contradiction to Lord Cranbrook's despatch, that there was no difference between Lord Northbrook and the Duke of Argyll, and pointing out that for two years the present Government had not directed Lord Northbrook to amplify those assurances which they now said were vague and unsatisfactory. The event had shown that Lord Northbrook and Lord Salisbury were wrong. Of all the courses open to them after their failure at the Peshawur conferences the Government had taken the very worst, and here he asked for some definite information from the Government as to their intentions in Afghanistan, quoting the opinions of such military authorities as Sir H. Green and Lord Sandhurst against the occupation of the country. Reminding the House that the advance of Russia had long been foreseen and that the Government so lately as 1876 had declared that it felt no alarm, he asked what particular advance of Russia had frightened them and made them change their policy. He himself could perceive no danger of an actual invasion through Afghanistan, and, as to the danger of intrigue, the occupation of Afghanistan would not prevent it, while a mere rectification of frontier would throw the Ameer irretrievably under Russian influence. Admitting, however that there might be a danger from Russia's advance, it was for the Government to show that the only means of dealing with it was by advancing to meet her. At any rate, we must deal with Russia direct, and not through Afghanistan. Replying to the question what would be the Opposition policy, he said there must be no permanent occupation of the country, and Lord Lytton must be recalled as the embodiment of all that an Eastern policy should not be.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, adverting to Lord Hartington's attack on Lord Lytton, severely censured language which, he said, would debase his authority in the eyes of the people of India. Entering into the defence of the Government, he maintained, first, that they had acted in strict conformity with the letter and spirit of the law, and replied at some length and in detail to the charges of bad faith, misrepresentation, and suppression of information. The cause of the war, he said, was the turning back of a friendly mission under circumstances of menace and defiance, and any faltering at that moment would have had the most serious consequences in India. It would have been absurd to go to Russia, because it was not the acceptance of the Russian envoy, but the refusal of ours, of which we complained. Discussing the previous events, he pointed out that, according to Dr. Bellew's statement, confirmed by subsequent evidence, it was Lord Northbrook's interference on behalf of Yakoub Khan which first irritated the Ameer, and which still rankled in his mind, and, explaining the reasons which had induced the Government to depart to some extent from the former policy, he read extracts from correspondence with Lord Lawrence in 1867 which pointed to such a change under certain circumstances, and to the Russian mission as the principal determining cause. After that the Government could not rest content with doing nothing. They remonstrated with Russia, but that was not sufficient to remove the impression which would have been made on the minds of the people of India. Sir N. Chamberlain's mission, which was intended as a counter-move to the Russian mission, was sent in a friendly spirit, and if it had been received as it was hoped it would be the difficulty would not have occurred. On the part of the Government he disclaimed emphatically a policy of annexation; but while the Government remained charged with the destinies of the empire they intended to do their duty regardless of all misrepresentations.

His commissions were dated as follows:—lieutenant, 1822; captain, 1831; major, 1842; lieutenant colonel, 1848; colonel, 1854; major general, 1859; lieutenant general and general, 1877.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.—Doolar Chand Sahoo and others v. Bisheshur Dyal; Doolar Chand Sahoo and others v. Chabeel Chand. These were consolidated appeals from two decisions of the Calcutta High Court, dated June, 1874. The appellants were purchasers of the villages in suit in execution of a decree which the zemindar or superior landlord had obtained against Gooder Khan, the holder of the under tenure, for arrears of rent. The respondent, Bisheshur Dyal, the plaintiff in one suit, had purchased the right, title, and interest of Gooder Khan one day prior to the purchase made by the appellants. The respondent, Chabeel Chand, the plaintiff in the other suit, had obtained a conveyance of the interest of Gooder Khan's sisters. The important question was what interest passed at the sale, in which the appellants became the certified purchasers. Whether it was a sale under the Bengal Rent Act, passing the whole tenure free of incumbrances, or simply a sale of Gooder's interest under the Civil Procedure Code, and, in case the latter only, whether Bisheshur Dyal's purchase was to have priority or not. The Local Court decided that the tenure passed to the appellants. The High Court contra, that the sale was simply of Gooder's share, which was subject to Bisheshur's purchase. Mr. C. W. Arathoon for the appellants; Mr. R. V. Doynne for the respondents. Their lordships, without calling on the respondents' counsel, dismissed the appeals with costs.

INDIAN APPEALS.—The case of Ishvardas Jugjivandas v. the Collector of Surat and another was before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Friday. It was an appeal from a judgment of the High Court of Bombay of the 29th January, 1873, affirming a prior decision of the judge of Surat. The suit was originally instituted as far back as 1866, its object being, shortly stated, to establish, as against the Bombay Government as stakeholders, and against persons beneficially interested in the property, the right of the appellant and others to have certain mortgage debts, contracted by the half brother of the last owner, satisfied out of the collections made by the local officials in respect of various villages in the Surat district. In 1800, when the East India Company, having obtained the cession of Surat, took into their own hands the administration of that province, they provided for the maintenance of various officers of the ex-native Government who were likely to be prejudiced by the change. Among them was one Nuzmoodeen, who held the important office of paymaster or commander of the troops, and to him they granted the ownership and enjoyment of certain rights in the produce of the land in seven villages in Surat. It was these rights that the litigation was in respect of. Their lordships affirmed the decision of the High Court, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

RUSSIAN EXPLORATION.—A Russian expedition has been recently making important explorations in Hissar, Karategin, and Darwaz. In the first-named country a perfectly new route, but one of extreme difficulty, was traversed in the mountainous tract between Yakobagh and Saryjui, on the Surkhan. This route avoids the famous "Iron Gates" Pass near Derbend. The river system here was mapped out, and a flood of light let in on the hitherto obscure topography of the country. In Northern Karategin a terra incognita was examined north east of Fyzabad, and a good deal of information was got together about Darwaz, which has been lately the scene of an insurrection, but it is now quiet. The last intelligence respecting the party was dated Sept. 13, from a place called Jailgan, to the north of the Pamir. Mr. Oshanin, one of the party, proposes to cross the Pamir and the Hindu Kush to Darkot, on the Kashmir frontier, a project the boldness of which may well excite our admiration.—Athenæum.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—At the half-yearly general meeting, which is convened for the 2nd proximo, the directors will recommend the payment of a dividend of 17s. 6d. per cent. on the consolidated stock, in addition to the guaranteed interest. In the corresponding period last year a bonus dividend of £1 5s. per cent. was paid.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The half-yearly report of this company states that the net earnings were at the rate of £1 9s. 9½d. per cent., being the lowest that has resulted from the company's working since the line has been opened. This somewhat alarming statement contained in the report proves, however, to be exceptional in character, and is capable of satisfactory explanation. The receipts from passengers were £129,130 as compared with £118,737, or an increase of £10,393; the goods and merchandise yielded £171,353, or a decrease of £161,753; the receipts from the telegraph revenue were more by £3,322 than in 1877. The total receipts were thus £150,044 less than in the corresponding half-year. The expenses, however, were only £13,391 below those of the half-year with which they compare. The result of this is that the net revenue, which in 1877 was £214,579, was only £77,926, or the lowest that has been earned by the company since its opening throughout for traffic. The cause assigned for this apparently anomalous state of things is that the Government of India, foreseeing the possibility of another rush of traffic into the famine-stricken districts, required that the staff and arrangements of the traffic and locomotive departments should be maintained at the high standard which was necessary to meet the demands of the famine year. For this laudable act of provision on the part of the Government the shareholders of the company do not directly suffer, as the Government has to make up the deficiency of interest from rather less than 1½ per cent. to 5 per cent. It is probable, however, that had the company been allowed to carry out those economies and retrenchments which would have been justified after the terrible famine had passed away the net profits would have shown a slight surplus for division over and above the guarantee of 5 per cent. The half-yearly meeting was held this afternoon, at the City Terminus Hotel—Col. J. T. Smith in the chair—when the report was agreed to and the dividend as announced therein was declared.

BOMBAY AND BARODA RAILWAY.—The net revenue of this company for the half-year ending June last amounted to £234,354, against £265,299, being a decrease of £30,741 as compared with the corresponding half of 1877. The sum required to cover the Government guarantee is £200,956, so that the earnings of the line exceed the amount of 5 per cent. guaranteed by the Government. This sum, after making certain small deductions, amounts to £33,005. Instead, however, of dividing this sum between the Government and the shareholders, the whole has been applied by consent of the Government to defraying the cost of the new Nerbudda bridge. The result of the half-year's operations may therefore be regarded as satisfactory, and as affording another illustration of the sound policy which has been pursued by the Government of India in encouraging the construction of railways. The cause of the decline in the revenue of the company is due to some extent to the poor harvest which followed the drought of the previous year. The loss from this cause was partially compensated by the importation of food and grain into districts where the stocks had been reduced by the famine of 1876-7. On balance, however, there is a decrease of £32,732, or about 11 per cent., as compared with the first half of 1877. With regard to the passengers there has been an increase in numbers, but a slight falling off in receipts. The numbers carried were 2,369,541, as against 2,289,424; the total receipts were £117,090, compared with £118,520, or a decrease of £1,430. The increase in the number of passengers travelling was entirely in the local and suburban traffic of Bombay, the other portion of the line showing a trifling decrease. The total working charges for the last half-year were £147,868, against £167,609. The percentage of working charges to revenue was slightly lower than in 1877; the proportions being 38·69 to 38·72. The actual charges, as just stated, were, however, considerably less, the saving being almost exclusively under the head of permanent way charges. This item in the last half-year stood at £30,399, while in June, 1877, they were £52,407, the percentage being 7·95 as against 12·11.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The report of this company shows a decrease of 231,792 in the number of passengers carried, and an increase of £133,887 in the goods tonnage. The gross receipts exceed those of last year by £16,100, but the expenditure is £18,548 more than last year. The net revenue, as shown by the accounts, is £120,287, as against £122,735. The proportion of net revenue to the gross receipts is 48¼ only as compared with 52½ per cent. last year. The principal item of increase is in locomotive, carriage, and wagon repairs, and traffic expenses. The falling off in the passenger receipts is explained by the fact that it compares last year with the exceptional festival at Fyzabad, which contributed about 140,000 additional passengers. The report states that in the presence of the extreme depression of trade and the anxiety which has prevailed during the past half-year the decrease in the normal traffic is scarcely so great as might have been expected. The failure of the Rohilkund sugar crop appears also to have had prejudicial effects on the business of the half-year. The operations for the construction of the bridge across the Ganges are, the report states, making satisfactory progress. Plans and surveys to a very large extent have been forwarded by the company to the Government for approval, none of which have, however, as yet been adopted. The report gives no information as to the results of the working of the half-year as far as dividends are concerned. The shareholders have, therefore, to look to the accounts to see how matters stand in this respect. We learn from these that the guaranteed interest on the £4,000,000 of subscribed capital is £100,000, on £1,615,300 of 4 per cent. debentures £28,226, and on £384,700 debenture stock, at 4 per cent., £7,694. This gives a total of £135,920, the net profits for the half-year, as already stated, being only £120,287, which leaves a balance of £10,035 to be carried to the guarantee interest account.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—This company, like the East Indian, is in a position to declare a dividend in excess of the guarantee of the Government. The amount available for distribution to the shareholders is £181,751, which admits of a dividend at the rate of 16s. 6d. per cent. Under the circumstances of the past half-year this result should be regarded as satisfactory by the shareholders. In the corresponding half-year the surplus dividend was at the rate of 2 per cent., or £1 3s. 6d. in excess of that for the past half-year. But the larger amount was due to a great extent to the large traffic in grain caused by the famine in Southern India. The revenue for the half-year was £1,556,321, as compared with £1,685,876 in June, 1877, being a decrease of about £130,000. The expenditure was £926,492, as compared with £693,567 in the June half of last year. The net profits for the half-year were £929,828. The payment of the Government guarantee absorbs £562,500 of this amount and, after making certain deductions on account of the provident fund and other minor charges, the balance divisible between the Government and the company is £363,503. The number of passengers carried on the line during the half-year was 2,324,000, against 2,084,000 in 1877, and 1,966,000 in 1876. The tonnage of goods carried was 897,000 tons, against 987,000 in 1877, and 745,000 in 1876. The working expenses also compare favourably. In 1876 they were 46·01 per cent. of the receipts, 45·99 in 1877, while in the last half-year they were but 42·92.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE, THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Hysteria, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 23, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

PRESIDENT.

HIS GRACE THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

The "German" System teaches spoken and written language to the "Deaf and Dumb." It dispenses entirely with signs and the finger alphabet, and with the necessity in after-life of using pencil and tablet.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay up to December 2; Allahabad and Madras, November 30; Calcutta, November 29.

THE general health returns for the same week report:—In Bombay, fever and cold prevalent in Karachi and Upper Sindh frontier, also in Guzerat; Konkan, public health good, also in Deccan; Baroda, fever prevalent. Bengal—fever prevalent in Backergunge, 24-Pergunnahs, Jessore, Moorsheadabad, Rajshahye, Howrah, Hooghly, Bankoor, Sarun, Singhboom, Balasore, and Cuttack; cholera reported in Bogra, Jalpaiguri, Cuttack, and Pooree. North Western Provinces and Oudh—fever prevalent in Agra and Meerut. Punjab—health improving, but fever bad in Jullundur, and fever and small-pox in Rawul Pindi. Central Provinces—cholera disappearing, fever prevalent. Central India—fever still prevalent. Rajpootana—fever prevalent in Bhurtpore, but abating elsewhere. British Burma—fever prevalent in Akyab, and some cholera; Rangoon, 17 cases of cholera; Bassein, 15 deaths from cholera; 26 in Myanourg; and a few in Shweygeen and Tounghoo.

THE general reports on the season and prospects for the week ending Nov. 29, state that in Madras prospects are reported to be less favourable in consequence of the retardation of the monsoon. Rain is much wanted in Tinnevely, Madura, Chingleput, Nellore, and Trichinopoly; in the last-named district prices are rising. Dry crops have been harvested in most places with a fair outturn. The number on relief works and that gratuitously fed have decreased from 40,328 and 21,809 to 25,653 and 18,831 respectively. In Mysore raggi continues to be harvested, and prices are still falling. The number on relief works and on receipt of gratuitous relief are 11,356 and 3,457, being less than the previous week by 2,760 and 1,407 respectively. In the Bombay Presidency, where the cold weather has now set in, there has not been any material change since last week's report. In Bengal there has been beneficial rain in a few districts, and the good effects of the rainfall of the previous week are still felt; prospects are, on the whole, satisfactory, except in Sarun and parts of Chumparun, where drought still prevails. In the North Western Provinces a little more rain is wanted for the rabi crops. In the Punjab there has been no rain, but it is needed, especially in the south eastern districts, for the spring sowings; however, prospects are favourable and health is improving. In the Central Provinces there has been slight rain in Damoh, which has done much good. Rain is required in Saugor and Mandla, but the general outlook is hopeful. Prospects also are still promising in British Burma, Assam, and Hyderabad assigned districts. In Central India rain is required. There has been no material change in Rajputana.

FROM Lahore the Times correspondent telegraphs that the Viceroy went to Calcutta on Thursday. The Commander-in-Chief remains at Lahore; his health has not been good. The Lieutenant Governor of this province starts on Jan. 2 next on his yearly tour and will camp out six weeks. The Viceroy reviewed the native contingent on Tuesday, and expressed himself much pleased with their appearance. They marched past much better than was expected. Most of the men were well set up, and their line was fairly kept. A mule battery from Kampoor-thalla attracted special admiration, the mules being extremely fine and their equipments excellent. The Pattiala Infantry and the Nabha Cavalry were also much admired. The Maharajah of Cashmere and other native chiefs attended the review. Even the little Rajah of Kapoorthalla, a boy of eight years, appeared on the scene mounted on his pony. Next day the native chiefs again met the Viceroy at an evening party, which was given by the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Egerton, and which passed off most successfully. Seven ruling chiefs were present—viz., the Maharajah of Cashmere, the Nawab of Bhawalpoor, the Rajahs of Jind, Nabha, Kapoorthalla, and Fureedkote, and the Nawab of Malevkotla, and about 140 native noblemen and gentlemen, many of them in the employ of the Government. Those not already known to the Viceroy were formally presented by the Lieutenant Governor, with a brief account of their position and antecedents, and were received by the Viceroy with marked courtesy. Next morning the chiefs and principal dignitaries went to the railway station to pay the Viceroy their compliments, waiting his departure and bidding him farewell.

THE Indian journals contribute nothing to the accounts of the war, except criticisms on the attack on Ali Musjid, in which the general is declared to have unnecessarily exposed his men to the front fire of the fort, from which the Afghans had for some time been carefully practising range firing. The Times telegram, published this morning, says that there is little news from the frontier, but that little is, on the whole, good. Sir S. Browne was expected to reach Jellalabad last Friday without opposition. General Roberts has left a sufficient force to guard the Peiwar Pass during the winter, and will keep the rest of his force at Kuram. Captains Goad and Powell have died of the wounds they received on the occasion of the attack on the convoy at Peiwar. General Stewart is preparing to advance to Kandahar, making roads and collecting supplies. Various offers have been made by friendly natives to keep open the Khojak Pass. Warm clothing is said to be arriving at Quetta, but the newspapers are still full of bitter complaints of the cruel sufferings and loss of life caused by the want of timely precautions. The following are the latest telegrams:—

"KURAM (through Thall). DEC. 19.—It is reported that Wali Mahomed has arrived at Khushi, 16 miles to the south west of the Shutar-gardan Pass, with 11 regiments of Infantry and 4 of Cavalry. These regiments are supposed to come from Balkh. Wali Mahomed will scarcely venture to cross Shutar-gardan at this season, as the Pass may be closed any day by snow. Capt. Powell, of the 5th Goorkhas, died on the 17th inst. from a wound received in Sapri Pass. A wing of the 72nd Highlanders, the 5th Goorkhas, 23rd Pioneers, and a mountain battery, will reach here to-day from Kuriah. A post at Ibrahimzai, on our direct line of communications, was strengthened yesterday on account of postmen and pickets having been fired at. The wounded and sick are doing well.

"DEC. 20.—News reached here last night that a priest preaching a jihad in Khost fled on receiving news of the fall of Jellalabad, and that the 6,000 infantry and 2,000 cavalry he had collected in Khost to resist the advance of our forces are rapidly vanishing. The whole of General Roberts's force are now assembled at Kuram and the Peiwar. The following is the substance of a proclamation printed in Persian and found at Peiwar after the action of the 2nd inst., which purports to come from the priest class in Afghanistan:—

"The English are about to invade Afghanistan to avenge their former defeats, the memory of which they have never forgotten. All good Mahomedans are bound to fight against the accursed English, who, if victorious, will slay our wives and children. It is a heinous sin to take bribes from infidels, who are fond of using this method of gaining over men. Those who die in battle fighting against the infidel go straight to Paradise; those who survive have glory on earth and will get riches from the pillage of India. Those who run away have shame in this world and will be thrown into flames in the next."

The whole is supported by constant quotations from the Koran, and is printed in the month of Shawal, 1295 Hegira—viz., between the 12th of October and the 11th of November of this year. There is only one printing-press in Afghanistan—that belonging to the Ameer."

CAPTAIN FREDERICK THEOPHILUS GOAD, B.S.C., and CHARLES FOLLIOTT POWELL, B.S.C., who were wounded in repelling the attack on General Roberts's rearguard in the Peiwar Pass, have died of their wounds. Captain Goad served in the Abyssinian campaign, and was present with 45th Foot at the storming of Magdala. His commissions were dated March 12, 1861; lieut., June 30, 1865; brevet captain and captain, March 12 and Aug. 23, 1873. He was second in command and wing officer of 5th Infantry, Hyderabad Contingent. Capt. Powell, wing officer and quartermaster of 5th (Hazara) Goorkhas entered the

"DEC. 14.—Roberts reports road to Shutar-gardan easier than expected, and top of pass not very defensible; height, 11,200 feet. Gun-carriages and limbers of one of Ameer's horse batteries found abandoned on other side, but guns had been carried off. Proposed to leave Ali-khel 12th and return to Kuram by southern road. Visited Peiwar and found troops well and carefully looked after. Position being rapidly placed in a state of defence; road up to Kotal now fit for field artillery."

"DEC. 14.—Roberts reports reached Shutar-gardan 9th, returned to Ali-khel 10th; not a shot fired. General demeanour of all favourably affected by defeat of Ameer's troops. Arranging with Ghilzais for protection of road between Ali-khel and Shutar-gardan; is hopeful of gaining over the Ahmedzai section of the Ghilzais. Browne reports all quiet; signalling established through the pass."

"DEC. 15.—Browne reports all quiet at Dakka and in front. 14th Sikhs sent to Peshawur, on account of sickness. Cavagnari reports whole of Sangu-khel Shinwarris come in; hopes soon to complete arrangements for protection of pass by tribal levies. Mir Akhor has left Mirhez, the Khan of that place having come into Dakka. No Cabul troops below Batkak. Biddulph has occupied Khajak Pass without opposition, and commenced making road over it, which will be done without very great difficulty."

"DEC. 17.—Roberts reports attack made on baggage on the 10th, near Koruh, in Kuram, by band of marauders of Mangal tribe. Baggage all saved and Mangals suffered severely; but ground was very favourable to attackers, and we lost three Goorkhas killed; Capt. Goad, Transport; Capt. Powell, 5th Goorkhas, and thirteen men wounded. Attack unprovoked, as we were not near Mangal country; probably instigated by refugees from Ameer's army, as men in uniform were seen among assailants. Goorkhas forming rear-guard behaved admirably under sudden attack."

"DEC. 18.—Browne marched for Jellalabad yesterday, hopes to reach 20th. All quiet in pass and neighbourhood. Biddulph occupied eastern side of Kojek Pass, and improved road sufficiently to continue advance on 15th. Hopes to arrange with local tribes for keeping pass open. Offers of service received. Prospect of supplies beyond the pass satisfactory."

"DEC. 20.—Browne reports reaching Ali-Baghan 19th. Reaches Jellalabad 20th. Report Ameer has fled from Cabul, leaving Yakoub Khan in power. People friendly."

"DEC. 20.—Cavagnari confirms news that Ameer has fled from Cabul for Turkestan. Yakoub Khan released and left at Cabul. Ameer had lost nearly all authority at Cabul, and soldiers were deserting."

The following is the text of the telegram of congratulation sent to the Viceroy by the Queen-Empress, as published in the Gazette of India:—"Windsor Castle, Nov. 26, 1878. I have received with the greatest satisfaction the news conveyed in your telegram of the brilliant success of my brave troops, though I with you deplore the unavoidable loss of life. I am greatly gratified at the loyal and friendly conduct of the native Princes on this important occasion."

A GAZETTE extraordinary, issued Nov. 30, published the Afghan correspondence, including the Viceroy's letters and the Ameer and Colonel Jenkins's replies, Sir Neville Chamberlain's report, and that of Major Cavagnari's interview. The Government of India, in a resolution of the same date, summarises the correspondence, accepts General Chamberlain's conclusions, approves his action, and thus concludes:—"His Excellency the Viceroy in Council fully recognises the ability and moderation shown by Sir Neville Chamberlain under circumstances involving peculiar difficulty and great responsibility. Sir Neville Chamberlain's selection for a mission of special political importance has been completely justified, and he has added another to the many services which he has rendered the Government of India." The resolution praises Colonel Jenkins and Major Cavagnari's tact and courage displayed in a critical and somewhat hazardous position.

A LETTER in another column reminds us that the much-lamented Princess Alice evinced a warm and practical interest in the social progress of our Indian fellow-subjects. In 1875 H.R.H. consented to become President of the National Indian Association, and, as our readers may recollect, only this year headed the list of subscribers to the special fund for providing scholarships tenable by native female pupils in the Government schools, a scheme which, now that it has been deprived of her active sympathy, will, we hope, be deemed to have an additional claim on those who desire to keep her memory green.

THE Indian Press is unanimous in the loud denunciation of the conduct of the military authorities, who have suppressed telegrams and stopped letters, but we must accept with much salt the statement that the English specials are, or "appear to be, entirely exempt from the restrictions imposed" on the Anglo-Indian Press. The Peshawur correspondent of the Statesman says that the reason assigned to him by Major Sanford, Q.M.G., was "that there were a few Russian agents at Lahore endeavouring to procure information as to the strength of the forces."

THE proclamation annexing the Cocos Keeling Islands to Ceylon is a precaution caused, says the Ceylon Times, to imply its being understood that Russian agents have been examining the islands with a view to establish a settlement and coaling station. The South Keeling Isles, lying in long. 96.50 E and lat. 12.10 S, contain one good harbour, Port Albion. The sailing directions describe the settlement of New Selma (founded by Capt. J. C. Ross in 1825) as of importance to the commerce of the British empire by affording a harbour of refuge for ships to repair damage or procure cocoa nuts and good water, and hogs and poultry. It is suggested that this may be a probable station for the intended direct telegraph line from Aden to Australia. The North Keeling is an islet fifteen miles distant from the chief southern group.

In his recent lecture on the North West Frontier, General Hamley declared that he thought our position vastly improved by the occupation of Quettah, but he "should think it all we could desire if we occupied Candahar." Sir Henry Rawlinson endorsed this opinion: It had always been his opinion that it was our true policy to look to Candahar rather than to Cabul. Fourteen years ago he had said that empires, like fortresses, needed outworks, and that he regarded Herat and Candahar as the Malakoff and Mamelon of India. There would be no more difficulty in holding Candahar than in holding our positions in the Punjab and Sindh. If we were in possession of Candahar, and if the necessary railways were formed, we should then be in a position to secure Herat. The possession of Candahar would render an attack on India from the Cabul side almost impossible.

NOTWITHSTANDING the rumours of the critical state of the Godavery and Coimbatore districts, and the statement made by Sir W. Robinson that in Puducottah and other places to the south there was active distress, it has been resolved by the General Committee of the Madras Famine Relief Fund, "that of the balance available two-thirds should be distributed amongst existing orphanages according to their average number for August, September, and October, and the remaining third be disbursed in other forms of relief." The balance in hand amounts to Rs.87,955, to which Rs.10,000 may be added, as probably returnable by the district committees.

THE demoralising effects of the famine are fully illustrated by the statements of the Madras Police Administration Report for the past year, which contains a startling calendar of crime. We read that the year 1876 was, in its later months, one which exerted great pressure on the poor, and disturbed the ordinary averages of crime, but in 1877 dacoity increased to 1,695 cases against 229 in 1875, seven-fold over the returns of the latter year, while crime of all kinds was a little more than doubled. Firearms and other lethal weapons were used in 249 cases, fifty-four persons having been killed, either in the commission of the crime, or resistance of it. There was a large increase of murder, 538 against 229 of the previous year, but detections did not always follow this class of crime, as the police did better in simple robberies, as distinguished from those by gangs of armed men. North Arcot and Bellary, more than any other districts, contributed the largest share to this tale of horrors, and dacoity, especially in them, writes the Inspector-General of Police, "followed the course of distress like an irresistible tide." The police were enabled, by diligent supervision and an addition to their strength, to cope with crime successfully enough, and detective results, on the whole, were so satisfactory that the Government agreed with the Inspector-General in awarding credit to a body of men whose vigilance, skill, and intelligence were concentrated in the pursuit and apprehension of evil-doers. The price paid for these efforts to restrain lawlessness was, as might have been expected, a high one. Besides batta, granted in most instances with the object of keeping the men in good heart, it was found necessary, for the purpose of supplying guards to relief works and camps, to add to the already existing force temporarily 15 inspectors and 4,393 men. The budget estimate for police expenditure in 1877-8 of Rs.37,35,000 was thus exceeded by about Rs.11,25,340; but this can hardly be grudged, seeing how much public property was, in the end, saved by this increased outlay.

A REPORT made to the Ceylon Colonial Secretary by the acting agent of the Western Provinces deals with the distress existing among the natives in the Rayigam Korale. A visit to the three principal pattus has enabled him to ascertain that all over the district the crops, both cereal roots and even the fruit crops, have been seriously damaged by the floods, rains, &c., and the consequent privation has been aggravated by the high prices of food. At present only the poorest are feeling serious distress; but the agent expresses a decided opinion that unless the mass of the people avail themselves of the relief works provided, "and that soon," a very serious famine will come upon them. There can be no very bountiful harvest expected till next September or October. The people of the adjacent Pasdum Korale are even far more poor than those of the Rayigam. Road relief works are proposed, as well as measures for gratuitous relief, and the agent feels sure "the famine may be averted if the people can only be induced by persuasion, or it may be by hunger, to take to honest labour." That great distress is prevalent is unquestionable, and that without aid be rendered a famine is imminent is proved by the statistics, which show that in one pattu the stock of rice to supply food for 25,000 people for the next ten months is only 18,325 bushels, giving an allowance per head of 23 seers. The Ceylon Times points out that the gaol allowance for the same period is rice 188 seers, besides bread, &c.

THE Princess of Tanjore, who not only made her appearance in public, but permitted his Grace the Governor of Madras to invest her with the insignia of the Crown of India, is described as the most highly educated Princess in India. She owes her intellectual progress to the aid of an accomplished young German lady, and has made considerable progress in English. An eye witness of the ceremony says that "The Princess's slight figure and charming face at once gained the sympathy of all. Ladies will ask how she was dressed. Over a plain and straight dress of cloth of gold, with a girdle of the same stuff, she wore an emerald green silk fichu most beautifully ornamented with jewels and embroidery, and her headdress seemed to be a sort of turban. A female attendant carried a splendid sword.

A MADRAS contemporary, in an article on the visit of Mr. W. R. Robertson, of the Madras Agricultural Farm, to Sir R. Temple, said it is understood that the following is something like the scheme which the Bombay Governor has thought out, and put on a footing for early commencement. An agricultural college will be established at Ahmedabad as the centre of the Guzerat country; and another at Poona, either separately or as a branch of the Engineering College, for the remainder of the Presidency. All high schools are to have an agricultural class attached to them, the class to be instructed by a graduate of an Agricultural College, who will be an assistant master in the school. Village schools are to be grouped, each group to have an itinerant teacher, who also is to be a graduate of an agricultural college. Thus the village school will feed the high school classes, and these in their turn will minister to the colleges of the divisions of the country to which they are attached. At the same time, the instructions given in the village and high schools will be of such a character as to be of service to those who do not need or desire higher knowledge. Scientific agriculture is to be passed on a similar footing with engineering requirements, and degrees of like value will be granted by the Bombay University. The possession of an agricultural certificate, after a sufficient time, will be a qualification for all appointments in the revenue and other departments having any connection with the land. Small experimental farms of ten or fifteen acres each are to be provided for each high school, and small plots for each village school; at the colleges experimental plots of fifty acres each will be provided.

IN the annual report on labour immigration into Assam for 1877, we find the following paragraph:—"A difficulty in connection with the discharge in Upper Assam, under section 112 of the Act, of coolies permanently incapacitated for labour, has recently on several occasions been brought to the notice of the Chief Commissioner—a difficulty which may possibly have to be solved by recourse to legislation. This is the insufficiency of the three months' wages allotted under section 112 to coolies permanently incapacitated for labour to take them back from the Upper Assam districts to their homes, and the consequent liability of these coolies, unable to work for their living, to be cast upon the world to starve. On one occasion during the year under report, Colonel Keatinge supplemented the allowance of three months' wages with a grant of money sufficient to enable the incapacitated coolies to return home, which grant the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, after some demur, permitted to be debited to the Labour Transport Fund. But such a charge is admittedly not one which, as a rule, his Honour can be fairly asked to defray from this fund, upon which there are already so many calls."

AN examination of the taxation and produce of the Punjab will clearly show to what extent India is depleted of its raw wealth in order to satisfy the tax-gatherer. In 1876-7, the total area under cultivation in the Punjab was 22½ million acres. Of this 6½ million acres were under wheat. The average yield of an acre under wheat is certainly not less than ten maunds, and the value of this may be put at fifteen rupees. The gross value of the wheat crop alone was therefore about ten millions sterling, omitting the value of the straw. The total amount of taxation in the Punjab amounted to nearly 395 lakhs, comprising the following items:—Land revenue 200 lakhs, customs 8½ lakhs, salt 83 lakhs, stamps 24½ lakhs, excise 10 lakhs, canal revenue 17 lakhs. Local and municipal taxation gave 51 lakhs more. It is clear that of these items the only ones which fall upon the agriculturist as taxes are the land revenue, part of the salt tax, and the local rates. The whole of the taxation, therefore, which the cultivating classes have to find is certainly not more than 360 lakhs, or three millions sterling. One-third of the wheat crop alone more than discharges this. The cultivator is left with the remaining two-thirds of the wheat crop, besides the produce of sixteen million acres under other valuable staples.

THE Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has invited the attention of all magistrates and district road committees to the advantages to be derived from planting mango, jack, or other indigenous fruit-bearing trees along the lines of road in every district. His Honour is of opinion that the income that would be eventually derived from such trees would well repay the cost of protecting and tending them now, and in times of scarcity the fruit would form a material addition to the resources of the district. The Lieutenant Governor hopes to hear of a considerable number of miles of road being so planted out annually in each district, and desires that the subject may receive special notice in the annual general reports.

THE supporters in this country of the zenana mission work would do well to study the last Bengal education report, which by no means bears out the hopeful statements made by the promoters of the mission. That Government have not been backward in promoting the work of the zenana education agencies, and that the results are most disappointing appears from the following extract:—"The Government expenditure on native female education in Calcutta stands at Rs.2,059 a month. More than half the total cost is still incurred in aiding the missionary zenana agencies of Calcutta, and among these more than one-third in aiding the American mission agency. If there is any justification for these large zenana grants it is to be found in the following consideration. The chief obstacle in the way of female education is the unwillingness of guardians to allow girls to continue in the schools after they have reached nine or ten years of age—the age at which they marry. As soon as they are married they are shut up in the zenana. From this point the missions offer to continue, by the help of female teachers who will be admitted into the zenana, the work already begun in the schools. This offer has in past years been gratefully accepted by Government, in the belief that by this means the education just begun in the girls' schools would be carried on to something like a satisfactory conclusion in the privacy of the zenana. Unhappily, however, this expectation on the part of Government has so far not been realised. It appears, on the one hand, that the female teachers employed are very frequently quite unfitted for their work, and on the other hand that not more than 10 per cent. of the pupils, on the most liberal calculation, have received any previous instruction in the schools. Of the teachers employed only a few are Europeans, and of these again few are so familiar with the vernacular that they can dispense with interpreters in their intercourse with the pupils. The chief part of the teaching is therefore done by native teachers, who are ill educated and often indifferent, and who, being little supervised, are consequently irregular in their work. Regarding the inefficiency of the native teachers, the defects which retard the work of the zenana agencies may be summed up as (1) the want of unity among the different agencies; (2) the inefficiency and laziness of the native Christian teachers; (3) the want of method in teaching and of proper supervision of the teachers; (4) the low rates of fees."

THE subject of some alleged grievances of the signalling staff of the Telegraph Department has been under the careful consideration of the Government of India. These grievances were fairly summarised in a letter signed "Signaller," which appeared in the Times of India, and which was brought to the notice of Sir Andrew Clarke, who ordered a thorough investigation of the case. The points complained of were—(1) the absence of promotion from the signalling ranks to the superior grades of the department; (2) the making telegraph masters' allowances local, instead of personal; (3) the examinations; (4) pay and prospects, as compared with other departments. The result of the inquiry, as reported by the Director General of Telegraphs, is held to show that, in practice, it is found exceedingly difficult even to promote an officer of the signalling establishment to be an assistant superintendent of telegraphs, as in the latter class of officers multifarious qualifications are required. An attempt, however, will probably be made to devise a method by which telegraph masters of tried ability and good service may obtain deserved promotion. On the second point it has been found impossible to frame a scheme by which telegraph masters' allowances could be made personal; and that the local nature of the allowances is no innovation of the re-organization scheme of 1865. On the third point, the system of periodical examinations is thought to have served its purpose, and examinations are at present restricted to candidates for promotion to a higher grade. With regard to the general question of the pay and prospects of the signalling establishment, the best test of the general fairness of such conditions is to be found in the popularity of the service; and in the case of the signalling establishment, there are numerous candidates for every vacancy, and resignations are most rare. A comparison with the conditions of service in other similar departments is believed to have established the fact that, looking to the pay and advantages officers of the signalling establishment receive from

THE Times of India contains some items of railway news such as we are accustomed to hear of at home in the accident season. On the Indus Valley State Railway the Mozufferabad and Buch station-masters mutually signalled line clear, and despatched trains of empty carriages, which naturally met mid-way, "and smashed up a number of borrowed Sindh, Punjab, and Delhi carriages." No loss of life, fortunately, is reported. The Madras mail-train on the 22nd ult. narrowly escaped being burned, a passenger's rug being ignited by a spark. The owner threw it out of window, and it set fire to the footboard. The fire was perceived by the driver, who stopped the train. An attempt was made on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway to upset a train by placing a railway chair on the rails. A goods train ran over the obstruction and broke it. The driver was thrown off, but was unhurt.

A CURIOUS difficulty has arisen in the case of a British subject who murdered his mother-in-law at Zanzibar, and was committed by the British Consul-General there for trial to the High Court of Bombay, as the consular powers of punishment are limited. The Orders in Council, however, make no provision empowering the Consul to send the witnesses, who in this case can decline to proceed to Bombay unless compelled. The alternative of issuing a commission to take the evidence at Zanzibar is said to be precluded by the fact that the High Court Criminal Procedure Act only applies to British India, and a special Act extended it only to so far as cases of slave-trading were concerned. The accused has been two months awaiting his trial, and the judges have not as yet solved the difficulty.

THE Royal Geographical Society announce the publication of a new periodical to be commenced on January 1, entitled The Proceedings of the Royal Geographical Society and Monthly Record of Geography, edited by the assistant secretary. The contents will include one or more maps, addresses delivered and papers read at the meetings of the society, together with the discussions thereon, geographical articles, record of news, correspondence, obituary notices, proceedings of foreign geographical societies, and notes on new books and maps. We hear that the first number will contain, among other papers, one on the mountain passes on the Afghan frontier of British India, by C. R. Markham, C.B., illustrated by a map.

WE are officially informed that a telegram has been received from the Viceroy announcing the unopposed occupation of Jellalabad on the 20th; the population are friendly. No doubt is entertained of the truth of the reported flight of the Ameer.

INDIAN LOANS.—Parliamentary returns published last week show that at the commencement of the half-year ending Sept. 30, the loans raised in England on the revenue of India amounted to £59,677,033, and that £7,097,500 was paid off, leaving total outstanding loans in England, £58,801,617. Other liabilities, £1,662,905, consisting of War Office claims, £800,000; estimate for stores, £170,000; amount to credit of guaranteed railways, £661,704, and unclaimed redemption money and dividends on East India stock.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Monday, Arthur Grote, Esq., in the Chair, Charles Bruce, Esq., was elected a non-resident, and Signor Amari, an honorary member of the society. Captain R. F. Burton read a paper "On Coins, &c., discovered by him in Midian," in which he gave a very interesting account of his recent researches in that little known land. The coins, of which he exhibited several specimens, were chiefly curious as imitations of imitations of coins, primarily minted at and current in Athens—a fact, reminding numismatists of the way in which the gold coins of Philip of Macedon were copied by the Gauls, and then again by the Britons from the Gaulish (to them) originals—a little before Cæsar's invasion. Among the gems he exhibited was one with an inscription on it in an unusually angular form of Kufic, and another, bearing writing which has much resemblance to the Arab Mushajjar or "branched" type.

THE FURTHER CENTRAL ASIAN CORRESPONDENCE.

SOME further correspondence has been published with regard to Central Asian Affairs, which throws light more especially on some of the details of General Stolietoff's mission to Cabul, and on General Lomakine's (Llamakim the blue book has rechristened him) expedition in Kara Kum. With respect to the former point, the following "confidential statement" made by a person whose name is not given, is very instructive:—

"A European envoy of the Russian Government, attended by two Musahibs (aides-de-camp) and forty-five attendants, arrived at Cabul on the 21st Rajab (July 22, 1878), and was received by Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan, son of the Ameer, who went out with General Daud Shah and two troops of cavalry. The envoy was lodged in the State garden in Balahisar, and Mustaufi Habibullah Khan and Sirdar Ibrahim Khan are appointed to look after his comforts. The envoy had an audience with the Ameer the following day, and laid before him presents consisting of articles of Russian manufacture—arms, a musical box, and a watch, which were accepted. It was learnt at the place of Sirdar Wali Muhammad Khan that the envoy had been entrusted by his Government with certain proposals for the execution of a treaty between Russia and Afghanistan.

"The envoy stated before the Ameer that friendly relations existed between the Russian Government and his Highness for some time past, and that the Russian authorities desired that this friendship should be strengthened and perpetuated by the execution of a treaty of amity. The Ameer is said to have remarked in reply that the matter required consideration and consultation with his Ministers and the grandes of his State, and that a proper reply would be given to the proposal after this had been done. After this conversation, the audience broke up, and the envoy returned to his lodging.

"It is rumoured in Cabul that the object of the envoy in coming to the Ameer's capital is to try to induce his Highness to break off all friendly relations with the British Government, and to contract an alliance with Russia. The Ministers of the Ameer's Court are generally of opinion that his Highness will not enter into any engagement with Russia which will impose a condition of Russian interference with his country. It is, moreover, said that the Ameer asserts that he would like an English officer of excellence, learning, and acquainted with the affairs of Afghanistan, to come to Cabul for a few days in the capacity of envoy from the British Government, with whom he may personally discuss the proceedings which passed between him and the English Government within the last few years, when he would acknowledge, without any grudging, any blame which might be justly thrown on him, but at the same time the British envoy should acknowledge (or give in) if, with reference to the principles of justice, he is convinced of the soundness of his Highness's objections to the proposals made to him by the British Government. The Ameer further remarks that he is quite aware that the news writers in the employ of the two Governments (Cabul and the English) have unnecessarily widened the gulf of imaginary differences. His Highness says that a small territory, of which he is the ruler, lies between the dominions of two great Powers, and that, as a matter of policy, and in the interests of his country, he will incline himself towards the party whose alliance would be deemed more beneficial to him. It is said that the Chief is now in great anxiety on account of the arrival of the European Russian envoy at his capital.

"An anonymous writer sent a petition to the Ameer from Peshawur, in which he informed the Chief that the British and the Russian Governments were on friendly terms with each other, and agreed in the unity of purpose, that Persia was on the side of Russia, and the Persian territory adjoins the Russian possessions, and the three Powers desired to somehow take possession of his Highness's dominions, and to partition them among themselves. The writer further remarked that it was known that Turkey was first weakened, and that Russia, England, and the other Powers then interfered with the country and encumbered the Turkish Exchequer with a large war indemnity; and that, under these circumstances, the Chief should not be lax in the administration of the affairs of his country at such a critical time, but should issue arms and money to the different tribes inhabiting the hills and the plains, and induce them to be ready to engage in a religious war in his behalf.

"The petition having been read to the Ameer, his Highness uttered hundreds of abusive words against its writer, and tore it up.

"The reporter of this news learnt at Gandmak, while on his way to Peshawur, that Shah Mard Khan, late Hakim of Jellalabad, died at Cabul.

"The nobles of Afghanistan are pouring into the capital."

The following extract shows the nature of the reception which was accorded to the Russian envoy by Shere Ali:—

"There is a rumour that the 3,000 horsemen who came with the Russian envoy as far as Jam are now quartered at Sherabad. The Ameer has collected (and placed under guard) all the boats available at the several ferries of the Hamun river in his territory. The Russian envoy has presented the Ameer with one lakh of rupees cash and a valuable khillat, which his Highness accepted. The envoy has been lodged in the Shah's garden, and Sirdar Muhammad Ibrahim Khan, son of the Ameer, attends to his comforts. No discussions have yet taken place between the envoy and the Ameer Mir Akhor Ahmad Khan, the Hakim of Jellalabad, does not yet believe that a new Russian envoy has arrived at Cabul. A grand review of the troops took place on the 2nd of August, but owing to the heat of the day it did not last long. On the following day the envoy visited the Ameer in durbar. Conversation took place regarding the Ameer's unsatisfactory relations with the British Government. The envoy replied that he had heard about it. The conversation then turned upon trade, and the envoy proposed that the Ameer should lower the duties, and allow Russian merchants to visit Afghanistan. Some talk then followed about the Turks, the Russians, and the English, and the durbar was closed. The Ameer gave the envoy written replies to the letters that had been brought by the envoy. Special Russian horsemen, escorted by some Afghan sowars, conveyed them towards Turkestan. It is said that the Ameer requested the envoy to remain at Cabul until a reply was received to these letters. The general impression is that the Ameer has not concluded any definite arrangement with the Russian envoy, and that he is trying to gain time, with the view to watching what action the British Government will take."

We append the principal telegrams from our Minister at Teheran, which give all the information that had reached Meshed concerning General Lomakine's operations:—

On October 29 Mr. R. Thomson telegraphed to the Foreign Office from Teheran as follows:—

"Information has been received here that General Lomakine has established a camp at Chikislar, and having obtained provisions, winter clothing, and huts there and at Krasnovodsk, has returned to Chat, where a fort is being constructed. It is also reported that the Tekkeh Turcomans have attacked, in the direction of Krasnovodsk, the Khoja Shehee tribe, subject to Russia, and that they are building a fort with a ditch and constructed for guns at Khoja Kala, under the direction of Afghans, said to be of the Janishedee tribe. A certain number of Turcomans from Merv are said to be among them. They are strengthening the passes, and are reported to have 25,000 horses at their disposal. The Yemoot Turcomans are clamorously demanding pay for their camels and cattle lost in the late Russian expedition."

On Nov. 11 Mr. Thomson telegraphed that it was reported from Asterabad that the Russian troops which had started from Krasnovodsk have returned there, and that Gen. Lomakine, having provided the detachment at Chat with winter supplies, and left a battalion at Chikislar, has now left for Tiflis.

On Sept. 26 Mr. Thomson telegraphed from Teheran that it is reported that Gen. Lomakine's force has halted in the vicinity of Karee Kala, and is suffering from sickness and scarcity of provisions, whilst there is also great mortality amongst the camels.

On Nov. 28 Lord A. Loftus stated that a correspondent of the Moscow Gazette, writing from Ashurade, under date of Oct. 7 last, states that Gen. Lomakine had then already returned with his column to Chikislar, after a campaign of two months in the steppes.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE LATE PRINCESS ALICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Allow me to mention in your journal that among the many objects connected with the welfare of others that engaged the sympathy of the late Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse, was the elevation of Indian women. Her Royal Highness took a warm interest in Miss Carpenter's efforts, and at her request became in 1874 President of the National Indian Association in aid of social progress in India. At the death of Miss Carpenter, the committee wrote to request the Princess to continue in this office, which she graciously consented to do. Her Royal Highness's Secretary informed the committee that the Grand Duchess would watch the progress of the association with the same interest as during the management of Miss Carpenter, "whose loss to the cause of social progress in India and personally as a friend, nobody has lamented more than her Royal Highness. This year a fund was started by the committee for making scholarship grants to native Indian girls in Government inspected schools. Her Royal Highness, on hearing of the scheme, expressed her entire approval of it, as tending to promote female education in India, and headed the subscription list with a generous contribution.—Yours &c., E. A. MANNING, Hon. Sec. of the National Indian Association.

LONDON, Dec. 19.

DEATHS FROM FEVER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In page 1,230 of your paper of yesterday's date, you have communicated to the English public the news that a very heavy mortality has been incurred during the last few months in the districts of Agra Muttra and Allypurr from fever. The natives attribute their sufferings to the canals. On the 31st of March last year I entreated your attention to the fearful number of deaths which had taken place at Rhoorjah, a large Mahomedan town north of Allypurr. The easily avoidable calamity had been promptly pressed on the notice of the Lieutenant-Governor. Have we now in India any worthy successor of Colonel Baird Smith, determined to make canals a blessing instead of a curse to our subjects? Permit me to quote from his book on Italian irrigation:—

"The want of some such rules as the preceding, in the irrigation system of India, is often bitterly felt. The free passage of water is in numerous localities interfered with by the existence of embanked watercourses, which, crossing the natural slope of the country, intercept the drainage waters, particularly during the season of periodic rain, forming, in consequence, on the upper side tracts of marsh and swamp, injurious equally to health and property. It was, it is true, a general rule to insist on openings being made through the banks for the passage of drainage-waters to the levels, where natural escape lines existed; but this rule did not carry with it the weight of a public sanction by the Government, and it was only respected when the canal officers could see themselves to its enforcement. In their absence I have known whole villages turn out to resist by force the passage of drainage-waters across their lands; and not without some show of right, for the imperfect operation of the local system merely transferred the mischief from one spot to another, without insuring any radical cure. A comprehensive and authoritative system of drainage in connection with irrigation must be matured and duly sanctioned by the Government before the existing evils can be wholly eradicated."—Page 302 of Volume 2 of Baird Smith's "Italian Irrigation." ### SPRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

AN INDIAN NAVAL FORCE.

"I would greatly increase our naval force in Indian seas, and I would make those seas take the place of the Mediterranean as an ordinary cruising ground of one of our principal squadrons. Now that there are other Powers with a naval force in the Mediterranean besides France and Spain, our position there is much altered. There are Turks, Greeks, and Egyptians, Italians, and Germans, and Russians, as well as Frenchmen and Spaniards, to balance one another. With Gibraltar and Malta in our hands, we shall be as well able to hold our own in the Mediterranean as in old days; but we seem too apt to forget that the opening of the Suez Canal has materially altered our naval position in India. All the Mediterranean Powers I have named, and America also, have now some days' start of us in getting to the coasts of India, and a well-directed naval expedition might now establish a hostile force on our Indian coasts, in a position to be seriously troublesome, while our attention was directed north westwards. This would have been far more difficult before the Suez Canal was opened, because we had then the start of all other naval Powers in getting to India. We ought to have what we have not now, a squadron amply sufficient to protect our Indian coasts from insult or aggression, and able to refit in India even during a temporary interruption of the route by the Suez Canal. Hitherto the Viceroy has had little need for thinking of his navy, but in the next war he will have to make it his chief concern." Such was the opinion expressed by Sir Bartle Frere four years ago, and, with the exception of the formation of a department for purely scientific research with an admiral at its head who never puts his foot on board ship, nothing has been done towards strengthening British naval forces in Indian seas. It is true that, as our readers will see in another column, an Examiner of Marine accounts on Rs.1,000 per mensem rising to Rs.1,500, has been appointed at Calcutta. We may take comfort from this evidence of energy and yet feel dissatisfied as we do that things are not on a better footing. It may be at once remarked—and we concede the force of the reasoning—that Indian finances will not permit of an increase in a naval armament east of Suez at India's cost. To supply what is wanted, according to Sir Bartle Frere, the finances of England's Orient Empire need not be entrenched upon at all. The necessities of her position requires Great Britain to maintain a certain standard in her navy; the only question is as to the disposition and situation of the ships, which must be kept in an efficient state. The East India squadron might be largely increased without any cost to India or increased expenditure to England, with the result that our position in these regions would be immensely strengthened. When the pressure of the Afghan difficulty is lessened we hope the matter will be thoroughly considered by the Government of India, and rearrangement of the squadrons forced upon the attention of the Lords of the Admiralty, with a view to India receiving greater benefit from English ironclads than is now the case.

When government in India was assumed by the Crown in 1858 an Indian navy existed. It was allowed to live long enough for arrangements to be made to abolish it, and no longer. Its members were not—as were the Company's land forces—absorbed into the imperial service, but were compelled to retire on pensions. This was one of the unwise moves of the period, for the old Indian marine was performing excellent work, as much in the interests of commerce by accurate surveys of Indian waters, as for the defence of the empire, whose shores were protected. Long before a single company of soldiers was raised in India the old marine was called into existence, and was of untold service in obtaining for us dominion, and preserving it after it had been obtained. But the special duty of the marine service was to root out the pirates which infested Eastern seas. For nearly 200 years the work was carried on, and, when taken in hand earnestly, proved effectual, until now it is hard to realise that there was a time when it was exceedingly perilous to set sail from India for any port in another land.

One portion of the work which used to be done by the old marine is now provided for, and most excellent, indeed, are the services rendered by Captain Dundas Taylor and his staff of able assistants. The surveys which have been already made and those now in process are of the greatest public service, and form as good a return for public money expended as any expenditure with which we are acquainted. But this is not enough. Indian hydrography should be first-class, and it is of exceptional merit. But above and beyond that we want the symbol and reality of power. This, the Lords of the Admiralty, without increasing taxation by one pound sterling or taking another depreciated rupee from Indian taxpayers, can provide, and we hope "My Lords" will be stirred by the Indian Government to a sense of their duty in this respect.—Madras Times.

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—The Calcutta Volunteer Rifles mustered 495 strong on parade to bid farewell to Colonel Watson. On the occasion of his handing over the command of the regiment to Major Fergus Graham, every one, says the Englishman, regrets the retirement owing to ill health of Col. Watson, who had commanded the Volunteers for nearly thirteen years. The concluding words of his farewell address were:—"I have but to look at this order of the 'Indian Empire,' which her Most Gracious Majesty and Empress of India, through the kind recommendation of our noble Colonel, Lord Lytton, has bestowed on me, and which I now bear on my breast, and say—'This is what the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles gained for me by their steady devotion to their duty; never will I forget them.' Major Graham, I hand you over this morning the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, numbering some 570 men, true and loyal subjects of our beloved Empress, a regiment I have commanded for many years, a regiment that will follow you wherever and whenever you may lead them."

KHEDDAH OPERATIONS.—Mr. Sanderson, Superintendent of the Kheddahs, will take the field early in December in the Garo Hills, establishing Kheddahs in the Doorgapore district and in Daloo Mehal. There are, report says, sixty Khoonkies, and seventy extra elephants ready to march to the indicated localities. The entire operations are, it is said, to be conducted on a scale never before attempted. Since Mr. Sanderson arrived in the station he has worked with unflagging energy towards organizing an efficient establishment.—Bengal Times.

ARMY SCHOOLS.—A code of regulations for native army schools in Bengal has been approved by the Government of India, and, when printed, will be distributed to each regiment of cavalry and infantry.—Englishman.

CHILDREN OF RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.—We understand that the Government of Bengal has placed at the disposal of the Examiner of Accounts, Northern Bengal State Railway, the sum of Rs.10,000, for expenditure for the improvement of the house at Kurseong known as "Constantia," recently purchased for the purposes of a school for the children of State Railway employes.—Indian Daily News.

TEA PLANTATIONS IN THE ANDAMANS.—Major Protheroe, of Port Blair, Andamans, writing to the Calcutta Agri-horticultural Society, says:—"You will be glad to hear that the tea plantation is thriving. We have about fifteen beegahs under tea, quite enough to determine whether the experiment will succeed. The plants which were put out in March are growing vigorously, and I have great hopes of our ultimate success."—Madras Times.

THE RAILWAY CONFERENCE seems from present appearances as far off as ever. A circular was issued some short time ago, informing all those who had been invited to attend its sittings, that the conference would assemble in Calcutta by the middle of the present month. Nothing has, however, been done since. A number of engineer officers, who would have otherwise sat on it, have been ordered away to the frontier, and it is believed that this circumstance will, for the present, preclude the possibility of the conference.—Indian Daily News.

VOLUNTEERING IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Sir George Couper has given proof of his sympathy with the volunteer movement by instructing heads of departments not only to put no obstacle in the way of their subordinates becoming efficient volunteers, but to afford them every facility for doing so, so long as the little concessions as to punctual attendance at office, &c., are not absolutely inconsistent with the performance of their ordinary duties.—Times of India.

MUTTRA.—The death is announced, on Nov. 22, of Seth Gobind Dass, C.S.I., a native gentleman of conspicuous intelligence, loyalty, and liberality, the head of the well-known Seth family. He rendered important services to English residents at Muttra during the mutiny.—Pioneer.

BRITISH BURMA.—The population of the seven municipalities of British Burma during 1876-77 was 261,010, the income was Rs.9,97,367-8-5, and the expenditure Rs.11,57,816-1-10, thus showing that the expenditure exceeded by far the income. The removal of night-soil is not at all enforced in any of the towns, excepting Rangoon; the amount spent on conservancy and cleanliness is extremely meagre, and on education, science, and art it has "never yet been liberal."—Times of India.

OCCUPATION OF SIBI.—Mr. Fryer, deputy commissioner of Dehra Ghazi Khan, has recently proceeded to Dadur under orders from the Agent to Governor-General, Beloochistan, to occupy Sibi. Sibi lies in a country which is very little known to Europeans. The neighbourhood is marked on the map as being in Kandahar territory; and it belongs to the Ameer, being in fact a part of South Eastern Afghanistan, which projects into Kach Gadava, or Kachi, the dominion of his Highness the Khan of Khelat. A little north of Sibi lie the direct routes from Dehra Ghazi Khan by Thull Chotali to Pishin and Quetta; they furnish a better line of communication with Quetta than the Bolan Pass route. The people of the country are the Kakars, a tribe rich in herds, cattle, sheep, and goats. They export hides, ghee, wool, and goats to Pishin and Kandahar. The fighting men of the tribe are some 15,000 or 16,000 strong; but badly armed with matchlocks and tulwars. In religion these people are fanatical Mahomedans, and consider themselves the brethren of the Ghilzais.

THE NAGA HILLS.—According to the latest news from the Naga country, Kohima, in the Naga Hills, was occupied without opposition on Nov. 14.—Pioneer.

THE BHOOTEA SCHOOL AT DARJILING.—Some work, which may turn out very useful when we open up communications with Tibet, is being done at the Bhootea boarding-school in Darjiling. This school was established in 1874 to train boys as interpreters, explorers, and surveyors. The headmaster is Baboo Sarat Chandra, and a lama has been obtained from the Pemionchi Monastery to teach Tibetan. At first there were only three scholars, now the number has reached to thirty, mostly young Bhooteas from Sikkim and Tibet, with a few Lepchas. The first-class learn English, history, arithmetic, Euclid, and Tibetan.—Pioneer.

MADRAS.

PUBLIC HEALTH.—A month ago Madras, by nearly two-thirds, stood at the head of all the great towns of the world in the mortality tables. Our ratio was 50 against 21 in Paris and Geneva, 32 in Bombay, 33 in Calcutta, 16 in Baltimore and Philadelphia, and so on. Our Health Department ought neither to slumber nor sleep until they find out the reason for this unenviable state of things, and apply the remedy.—Madras Times.

THE MYSORE COMMISSION.—We understand that the orders of the Supreme Government relative to the elimination of the junior European officers of the Mysore Commission in the grades of deputy and assistant commissioners have been received by the Local Government, and will be carried into effect forthwith. The terms on which the scheme is to be carried out are that three months' gratuity, and for eighteen months' after leaving the Mysore service, the difference between pay drawn in the commission and subsequent appointment will be paid to each officer. For example, an officer is receiving say Rs.1,000 in the commission, and he reverts to military duties or some other post in which he would only draw Rs.600; in this case he would receive a gratuity of Rs.3,000, and the difference of Rs.400 (between Rs.600 and Rs.1,000) for eighteen months afterwards. At the same time we believe the Government of India will do what it can to find other appointments elsewhere for those who are unavoidably removed from the Mysore Commission. Capt. Ludlow has, as we stated in a previous issue, been provided for in the Berars, and Capt. McKenzie, assistant commissioner, Bangalore district, is to go as personal assistant to the Superintendent General of Thuggee in Bengal. In this way the scheme of elimination will be worked out, and by the time the province is handed over to the Maharajah, with but few exceptions, all the officials will be natives.—Bangalore Spectator.

THE MADRAS HUNT.—From the Duke of Devonshire (8s.) were landed recently 22½ couple of foxhounds which are destined to afford sport this season. Only twenty couple were shipped, but five puppies were born on the voyage. The pack is reported to be a very level one and has been landed in capital condition, considering their long voyage, and that the native in whose care they came out had charge of twenty-five couple besides for the Calcutta hunt. The Madras hounds are now enjoying the fresh air of Guindy, where it is hoped Major Pigott, the popular master, will speedily get them into condition.—Madras Athenaeum.

A MODEL ZEMINDAR.—The Indian Agri-culturist gives the following account of a model zemindar of Madras:—"Very little is known to the public of the Zemindary of Ettayapuram, in the Madras Presidency. The ruling zemindar is an intelligent youth about twenty-two years of age. His estate comprises an area of 535 square miles, and yields an income of over three lakhs of rupees yearly, and it is free from debt, chiefly owing to the careful manner in which his predecessors managed it, with the aid of the Court of Wards. Just two years ago an experimental farm was opened in this little estate, under the superintendence of Mr. Crowther, trained in the Government model farm in Madras under Mr. Robertson. This was established by the Court of Wards. It is now looked after by the zemindar, with the aid of the manager, Mr. Kupasawmy Chastriar. Seventy acres of land have been fenced in, of which fifty acres have already been cultivated. The land is ploughed with English and American ploughs; the natives now use the English implements with ease. Cattle breeding is going on famously also; the breed of Mysore bulls is being tried on the farm, and there is hope of success. American cotton has been tried, and is thriving beautifully, but the ryots seem to prefer the country cotton."

ENCROACHMENT OF THE SEA.—In spite of the active efforts of the Harbour Works authorities the sea is making rapid encroachments on the Royapooram side. Opposite the Madras Railway stores the road up to the tramway line has been completely washed away; while, at a little distant from the Biden Home, the waves have actually washed over the road. The wall of the Hon. J. G. Coleman's compound is seriously threatened, as the dry ground between it and the sea is lessening by degrees. The Harbour Works authorities are throwing up embankments of huge granite stones, but large portions of these have been displaced by the force of the waves. The main drain, through which all the sewage from Royapooram is emptied into the sea, was recently completely destroyed. Within the past two months about 200 boatmen's families have been rendered houseless, about ten huts having been washed away in Royapooram Kuppum.—Madras Mail.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—G.O., No. 500, dated 19th July, 1878, is cancelled, and the following movements are ordered:—Royal Artillery: C Battery, B Brigade, R.H.A., from Bangalore to Secunderabad; A Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from Bangalore to England; B Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from Bellary to England; C Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from St. Thomas' Mount to England; G Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from Kamptee to Bellary; I Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from England to St. Thomas' Mount; K Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from England to Bangalore; L Battery, 6th Brigade, R.A., from England to Kamptee. British Infantry: Wing 2-13th Regt., from Bellary to Bangalore. Native Cavalry: Headquarters and two Squadrons 4th Light Cavalry, from Bellary to Secunderabad. "Queen's Own" 8appers and Miners: D Company, "Queen's Own" Sappers and Miners, from Rangoon to Bangalore; K Company, "Queen's Own" from Bangalore to Rangoon. Native Infantry: 2nd Regt. N.I., from Berhampore and Sumbulpore to Kamptee; 3rd Regt. L.I., from Secunderabad to Kamptee and Hoosingabad; 5th Regt. N.I., from Saugor to Seetabuldee; 7th Regt. N.I., from Vizagapatam to Berhampore and Sumbulpore; 8th Regt. N.I., from Seetabuldee to Saugor; 13th Regt. N.I., from Madras to Jubbulpore; 14th Regt. N.I., from Vellore to Barrackpore; 15th Regt. N.I., from Madras to Bangalore; 16th Regt. N.I., from Jubbulpore to Raipur; 19th Regt. N.I., from Trichinopoly to Calcutta; 20th Regt. N.I., from Banda and Nowgong to Secunderabad; 22nd Regt. N.I., from Kamptee and Hosanganad to Trichinopoly; 25th Regt. N.I., from Madras to Vellore; Wing, 28th Regt. N.I., from Mercara to French Rocks; 29th Regt. N.I., from Secunderabad to Vizagapatam; 31st Regt. L.I., from Raipur to Madras; 35th Regt. N.I., from Kamptee to Banda and Nowgong; 38th Regt. N.I., from Trichinopoly to Secunderabad; 39th Regt. N.I., from Palavaram to Madras.—Madras Times.

GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERY.—We learn that Mons. Laffon de Fongauier has been appointed Governor-General of the French Establishments in India. He formerly was a Commodore in the French navy, and which service he was obliged to resign on accepting the post of Deputé of the Senegal Colony to the Assemblée Nationale.—Madras Standard.

COFFEE CROPS IN COORG AND WYNAAD.—The picking of coffee in Coorg and the Wynaad has already commenced. The present crop is said to be a small one, as compared with last year's, but of a better quality. Mr. Baudry, the well-known merchant of Tellicherry, who failed a few years ago, has returned thither, and is about to resume business. Messrs. Schlunck Brothers have also engaged premises both at Calcutta and Tellicherry, and intend beginning work in earnest. Many other European firms are, I am told, about to follow suit. A good business is being done all along the western coast, in pepper, which commands a good price at present.—Madras Correspondence in Times of India.

CHOLERA IN BLACK TOWN.—The spread of cholera in Black Town and its vicinity, says a Madras paper, has considerably abated, and the municipal authorities have used every precaution for the public safety. From the 15th to the 20th ultimo there were seventeen cases among the East Indian community, of which nine proved fatal. During the same period there were only eight cases among the natives, of which four proved fatal. In John Pereiras there have only been three cases. Precautions have been taken in the way of having the houses whitewashed and disinfected, and the drains properly cleansed.

CATTLE PLAGUE IN SOUTHERN INDIA.—Cattle disease in its worst form, viz., rinderpest, is very prevalent in the Presidency. In more than one large institution in Madras, where many cattle are used, the plague is unmistakably present, and rigorous measures are needed to stamp it out. An Act already on the statute book, passed about 1867, would give municipal and police authorities ample powers to deal with the plague.—Pioneer.

THE GOLD DISCOVERIES.—Mr. Brough Smythe is extending the radius of his researches as to the area of quartz reefs in South East Wynaad. He has visited the Nellamboor Valley, wisely taking advantage of the most healthy season of the year for his excursion to the feverish locality. He is reported to have discovered several large reefs at this low elevation, which are doubtless continuations of some of the veins cropping on the Wynaad plateau, and prove the great depth of the fissures. It is understood that Mr. Smythe now purposes visiting South and West Wynaad for the purpose of ascertaining how far, in that direction, the system of quartz veins occurs. The gentlemen interested in South Wynaad have lately been much exercised in their minds by the discovery of a reef, from which quartz specimens have been taken as rich in visible gold as any stone yet found in Wynaad.—Pioneer.

BOMBAY.

THE GAEKWAR OF BARODA.—The marriage of the young Gaekwar of Baroda is to be celebrated in March or April next, and preparations have been already begun for carrying out the ceremonies on a grand scale.—Madras Times.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—We are glad to learn that it has been proposed to hold a Camp of Exercise for our Volunteers during the ensuing Christmas vacation somewhere near Khandalla. The Volunteers named to form the proposed Camp of Exercise are the Bombay, the G. I. P. and the Poona (including Kirkee) Volunteers. Khandalla will be a capital place, as there are roomy barracks there and no tents would be required.—Deccan Herald.

MUSCAT.—The eldest son of his Highness the Sultan of Muscat was married at Muscat on the 15th September to the Lady Zowanch bin Thoweeque bin Saeed. The young Prince is named Sayyed Mahommed bin Toorkee, and is about fifteen years of age. He is the Governor of Sohar, whither he returned shortly after his marriage.—Indian Daily News.

THE CHORAL FESTIVAL.—The sixth annual Choral Festival was celebrated at St. Thomas's Cathedral on Nov. 21st in a highly successful manner. Besides 760 ticket holders, there were many who had none, and to place the number present at about 1,000 in all would not be an exaggerated estimate. The five principal choirs—viz. Byculla (Christ Church), Mazagon (St. Peter's), Sonapore (Trinity Church), Colaba (St. John's), and the Fort (Cathedral)—were all well represented, while St. Mary's Church, at Poona, furnished a quota of about a dozen choristers, making together a gathering of 150 to 160 choristers, of which the Byculla school furnished 53. The various musical portions of the service were rendered with accuracy and effect.—Times of India.

THE NIZAM'S PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—A correspondent has furnished an account of the re-organization of this department to the Bombay Gazette. The department is to be divided into six divisions or circles, which Mr. Wilkinson, secretary H. H. the Nizam's P. W. D. seems to think will be better. Divisional Engineers will be henceforth called Executive Engineers. The new scheme is framed to assist the Secretariat, which is as follows:—Mr. Roy Munoolal, Irrigation Branch; Mr. Dunlop, General Branch; Mr. Gay, Accounts branch. Hyderabad or Central Circle—Mr. Heenan, executive engineer: 1 assistant engineer, 3 supervisors. Northern Circle—Mr. McFarlane, executive engineer, Meduk, Nagoonda, and Indore districts: 2 assistant engineers, and 3 supervisors. North Western—Mr. Fitch, executive engineer, Aurangabad, Purbani (Hingoli) and Bheer districts: 1 assistant engineer and 3 supervisors. Southern Circle—Mr. Marrett, executive engineer, Sholapore, Goolburga, and Raichore districts: 2 assistants and 4 supervisors. Eastern Circle—Mr. Hudson, executive engineer, Kummum, Nalagoonda, and Naga Kurnool districts: 3 assistants and 3 supervisors. Western circle—Mr. Jones, executive engineer, Bedir, Nuldroog, and Nandair (Godavery) districts: 1 assistant engineer and 2 supervisors. Mr. Palmer, superintending engineer and secretary of the Sudr-ool-maham. Nawab Shabab Jung Bahadur retains his old designation of Sudr-ool-maham, and is the head of the executive branch. The revenue department is to carry out all repairs, costing from 1,000 to 2,000 Halli Sicca rupees. The P. W. D. is to see to buildings, roads, irrigation and navigation. The coal fields, the geological and Chanda Railway surveys and workshops, are not to be a branch of the P. W. D., but to be entirely under the eye of the secretary to the Sudr-ool-maham, and the park or public gardens at Chuddarghat will be controlled by the secretary. The estimated cost of the new re-organization is set down as follows:—Executive branch Rs. 2,25,000; control branch Rs. 1,17,000; total Rs. 3,42,000; special works Rs. 83,000; total Rs. 4,25,000. It is anticipated that by the new scheme there will be a saving to the State of about Rs. 12,354 a month, or H. S. Rs. 1,48,247 annually. The new scheme has not as yet been published, but this is a correct epitome.

THE BARODA ARMY.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette is responsible for the following curious account of the way in which the general commanding the Gaekwar's troops maintains the dignity of his office and the discipline of his forces:—Baroda, like most other principal Indian cities, is blessed with the presence of a very sacred Hindu saint named "Janki Bavah." This holy man lives in a state more befitting a petty chief than one of his calling. This "Janki Bavah," through the kind offices of the general's Hindu brigade-major and military secretary, has succeeded in gaining such an influence over the general that even at the daily public orderly room, where the several European commanding officers have to make their reports to the general, the seat of honour, the chair ordinarily occupied by the general, is considerably resigned by him to the heaven-born "Janki Bavah!" Well might the several European commanding officers hide their diminished heads in this august presence, and well may their numerous native commissioned, non-commissioned officers and privates learn to consider and treat their commanding officers as the inferiors of their Janki Bavah, the publicly admitted superior and confidant of their general when seated in his official capacity in the orderly room! The several European officers commanding corps are requested verbally by the general to exert their influence with the men of their respective corps and induce them to contribute from their already insufficient pay, towards swelling the revenues of the sacred Bavah. Can infatuation further go? The correspondent adds that he has reason to be assured that neither Mr. Melvill, the Governor-General's agent, nor Sir Madhava Rao is aware of these proceedings.

THE GOVERNOR'S MOVEMENTS.—H.E. the Governor returned to Bombay on the 25th ult., and on 2nd inst. proceeded to Puna to open the new medical school formed by transferring the lower vernacular class of the Grant College from Bombay to Puna.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF PORTUGUESE INDIA.—Admiral Albuquerque, the new Governor-General of Portuguese India, arrived in Bombay on the 28th. His Excellency was received with the customary honours. On the following day he paid a visit to Sir Richard Temple, and embarked on the 30th in the B.I. steamer Akola for Goa. The area of Portuguese India is 1,086 square miles, with a population of 407,712.

A telegram was received at Bombay on Nov. 28 addressed to the President of the St. Andrews Society of Scottish Residents from the Lords Provost of Edinburgh and Glasgow. "As fellow Scotchmen, in name of the Scottish nation we ask your aid for shareholders ruined by the City of Glasgow Bank. £500,000 required; half has been already subscribed." The following subscriptions have been paid into the Bank of Bombay up to Dec. 2:—Magnus Mowat, Rs.200; Ritchie, Stuart, and Co., Rs.250.

THE NARAYAN VASUDEO MEMORIAL FUND.—It has been resolved, at a meeting of the subscribers to this fund, that the memorial should take the form of an endowment for a university scholarship. The total amount subscribed from the time the fund was started in February, 1876, is nearly Rs.5,000, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Gibbs, under whose presidency this meeting was held, mentioned, in putting the resolution before the meeting, that the Senate would shortly increase the facilities for teaching natural sciences, and he hoped that body would attach this endowment to the new branch of education.—Times of India.

Messrs. Ritchie, Stuart, and Co., have been appointed agents of the Ocean Marine Insurance Company in place of Messrs. W. Nicol and Co.

It is reported that Tarabai, the daughter of the late Khunderao Gaekwar of Baroda, has been betrothed to H.H. the Sirdesai of Sawunt Waree.

SHOLAPORE.—We hear from Sholapore that malarious fever is very prevalent, and that the prices of grain are still approaching famine rates, ruling from 5½ to 7 seers the rupee. The first crop, which is already reaped, is only about four annas, owing to the prolonged rains; but the second crop promises to be plentiful.—Times of India.

THE LATE CAPT. PEMBERTON.—The following circular, suggesting a memorial to the late Capt. Pemberton, has been issued:—"Some of the friends of the late Capt. Pemberton are desirous of marking their esteem of him, and regret for the sudden way in which he met his death, by erecting a permanent memorial at Khundwa. The evening before he was shot he was present at a meeting held by the Lord Bishop of Calcutta, at which it was arranged to commence as soon as possible the erection of a school chapel near the railway station at Khundwa. He took a leading part in this meeting, and expressed the pleasure which he would have in superintending the work. The building, as then planned, was to be little more than a plain school-room. It is now proposed to add to this a chancel of some architectural pretensions, as a suitable memorial of Capt. Pemberton. The Bishop, who himself suggested this, contributes 500 rupees. Subscriptions will be received by Major MacDougall, Nagpore; Dr. Cullen, Khundwa; Rev. S. W. O'Neill, Indore."—Times of India.

H.M.S. "SIMOOM."—The 5th Regt. Bombay Native (Light) Infantry, under the command of Col. A. A. Des Vœux, arrived in Bombay on 29th ult. from Puna and embarked in H.M. troopship Simoom, 3,302 tons, Capt. J. F. G. Grant, which sailed for Karachi the same day with 17 officers, 1,843 men, 33 women, 21 children, and 13 horses. The following are the names of officers:—Col. Beville, 21st N.I.; Lieut. Col. H. MacLeod, Commissariat Department; Capt. Hibbert, Deputy Assistant Commissariat General; Capt. Mackay, 2nd Queen's; Capt. W. H. D. Jones, 2nd Light Cavalry; Lieut. Col. J. F. Batty, R.A.; Capt. Wace, R.A.; Lieut. J. Whaller, R.A.; Lieut. Col. Hunt, 5th Native Light Infantry; Major A. Poole, 5th Native Light Infantry; Lieut. Nicholletts, 5th Native Light Infantry; Surg. Major Thorpe, 5th Native Light Infantry; Lieut. Col. Des Vœux, 5th Native Light Infantry. After landing the 5th at Karachi the Simoom was to proceed to England.—Times of India.

DRAWING IN GOVERNMENT SCHOOLS.—The Bombay Government have resolved that drawing shall be taught in all Government schools of this Presidency. The superintendent of Sir J. J. School of Arts has accordingly issued a notice intimating that a special class for drawing will be open in that institution, and that any persons who wish to qualify themselves may join the class.—Times of India.

THE "CLAN ALPINE."—The Clan line steamship Clan Alpine, 1,342 tons, Commander G. Cowley, arrived in Bombay harbour on the 26th ult. from Glasgow and Liverpool via Malta with the following passengers:—Lieut. and Mrs. Richardson and three children, Mr. G. Richardson, Mrs. N. ## CEYLON.

(From the Ceylon Times.)

CROP AND SEASON.—The north east monsoon has fairly settled down with bright warm days and cool windless nights, a state of things favourable to shipping and crop operations. In nearly all directions estate hands are in full work picking, the crop coming on rapidly, a fact that has in many instances prevented much parchment being despatched to Colombo. In Dimbulla, Dickoya, Maskeliya, Rakwana, and Juvah, the gatherings are all large, and generally of excellent quality. In other districts, notably those in the Kandyan and Matale region, the result will not be nearly so satisfactory. In Colombo, most stores are at full work, and there will be ample cargo for all vessels on the berth, or to arrive, for some time to come.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—At the meeting held on November 21, the governor announced that he had received a despatch from the Secretary of State, authorising him to submit for the consideration of the council a bill authorising a loan not exceeding one million sterling for making the railway extension from Navellepitiya to Nanuoya, on condition that certain arrangements are carried out, and without reference to any further extension or otherwise. A bill for this object would be laid before the council at an early date.

DEATH OF MR. WILSON, M.L.C.—The Hon. David Wilson, the representative in the Legislative Council of the general European community, had been for so long a time in failing health that his death on Nov. 15 created no surprise. The deceased gentleman, who was in his sixty-eighth year, had been in the colony since 1836, and was prominently identified with every project that had for its aim the material progress of the island. H.E. the Governor and the Colonial Secretary both spoke of the late hon. member in very graceful terms at the sitting of the Legislative Council.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATIONS.—H.E. the Governor has been pleased to appoint H. Wace, Esq., to be acting district judge, commissioner of requests, and police magistrate, Anuradhapura, and coroner for the district of Anuradhapura, and superintendent of the prison at Anuradhapura, during the absence of Mr. Dickson from the station; and Don Johannis Baresto Amereweera to be deputy coroner for Weligam Korale, in the district of Matara.—Gazette.

OFFICIAL PAPER.

WORKING OF HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM'S AND THE DOOND AND MUNMAD, THE BERAR AND THE WARDAH VALLEY STATE RAILWAYS.

RESOLUTION BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, P.W.D.,

SIMLA, NOV. 13, 1878.

1. The relinquishment by the Great Indian Peninsula Railway of the working of the Nizam's State Railway, and the Khamgaon, Oomraotee, and Warora Branches, has compelled the Government of India to consider the best means of working these lines and the Doond and Munmad Railway by State agency.

2. It is obvious that the provision of a complete staff with separate officers for management, locomotive, traffic, and maintenance purposes for these short lines would involve an expense that the Government could not authorise. It is a matter of absolute necessity that the staff should be organised on the most economical basis possible, and the duties of several departments must be in some cases discharged by one officer. Endeavours must also be made to provide the requisite staff from other sources, so far as this can be done without impairing efficiency.

3. The President in Council has accordingly ordered the following arrangements:—

4. For the Doond and Munmad Railway, a manager in Class I. of the revenue establishment will be appointed; for the locomotive department, an assistant superintendent in Class IV.; for the traffic department, a superintendent in Class III., with an assistant superintendent in Class IV. The Doond and Munmad Railway will be worked under the orders of the Bombay Government. The Khamgaon and Oomraotee lines will be worked by the staff of the Doond and Munmad Railway, but under the orders of the Resident at Hyderabad. The headquarters of the manager of the Doond and Munmad line will be at Nugger.

5. A manager in Class II. will be appointed for the Nizam's Railway; an assistant locomotive superintendent in Class IV.; an assistant traffic superintendent in Class IV. The manager will ultimately be head of the locomotive and traffic departments. His headquarters will be at Hyderabad.

6. The Wardah Valley Railway will be under the jurisdiction of the chief commissioner of the Central Provinces. A manager will be appointed in Class II. with the same functions as the manager of the Nizam's Railway. He will not need assistance in the locomotive and traffic departments. In case occasion should arise he will take charge also of the Warora Colliery. His headquarters will be at Warora.

7. The managers of these three lines will be their own superintendents of ways and works. In the locomotive department a foreman in Class G for the Nizam's and Doond and Munmad Railway will be allowed if the local authorities consider the appointment necessary.

8. The post of superintendent of way and works on the Holkar and Neemuch line will be abolished as soon as the present manager returns to duty. He is at present on field service. One of the deputy consulting engineers in Bombay will be suppressed, and the manager of the Doond and Munmad Railway will assist the consulting engineer, Bombay, in inspection work, and in any other duty usually devolving on one of the deputy consulting engineers in Bombay.

SUB-DIVISION OF THE CENTRAL SYSTEM OF STATE RAILWAYS. RESOLUTION BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, P.W.D.

SIMLA, NOV. 15, 1878.

1. In March, 1878, the director of the Central System of State Railways was appointed ex officio joint secretary to the Government of the North Western Provinces and Oudh, in the railway branch of the Public Works Department, for the purpose of advising the Lieutenant-Governor on questions connected with provincial railways.

2. At the present time the work in the North Western Provinces has considerably developed, and the joint secretary is entrusted with the control of three lines under construction, one open line, and extensive surveys. With this work in his hands as joint-secretary to the Government of the North Western Provinces and Oudh, it is quite impossible for him to administer the whole of the Central system of State Railways.

3. The President in Council has accordingly resolved to subdivide the central system into two, to be called the East Central and West Central systems.

The director of the East Central System will, as director, have direct administrative charge of—

I. Open line from Agra and Delhi to Beawur and Nasirabad, and the construction of the salt branch and Ajmere shops, &c.

II. Sindia Railway, open line and construction.

As joint-secretary he will advise the Government of the North Western Provinces and Oudh in regard to—

III. Cawnpore and Farakabad, under construction.

IV. Achneyra and Muttra, commenced as a famine relief work.

V. Muttra and Hathras, open line.

VI. Dildarnagar branch, under construction.

VII. Surveys.

The director of the West Central System will have administrative charge of—

I. Holkar and Neemuch line, under construction from Ratlam to Neemuch, and

II. Open from Khandwa to Ratlam.

III. Line under survey from Neemuch to Nasirabad.

IV. Northern section of the Western Rajputana Railway, from Beawur to a point near or at Sehore-road station, under construction.

V. Southern section of the Western Rajputana Railway, from a point near to or at Sehore-road station to Ahmedabad, under construction.

4. Nos. IV. and V. have hitherto been under one engineer-in-chief, with a superintending engineer working under him. There is no reason for continuing this arrangement, and Mr. Collet will be engineer-in-chief of the Northern section, and Mr. W. H. Parker, engineer-in-chief of the Southern section. The sanctioned estimate for the Western Rajputana Railway should be divided in three parts according to the proposed rearrangement of charges; and Mr. Collet and Mr. Parker should each take the supervision of three executive divisions, while the Beawur section will in future form part of the charge of the manager, Rajputana Railway.

5. Mr. W. C. Furnivall will be director of the East Central System, and Mr. A. Grant, who now stands posted to the North Eastern System, will be director of the West Central System, with headquarters at Indore and Mount Abo.

6. The sub-division will not take place till January 1, 1879, and meanwhile Mr. Grant will make himself acquainted with the works which will be placed under his charge, and arrangements will be made for providing him with a suitable office establishment. The director of the West Central System may, on assuming charge, select from the staff which will be at his disposal a 3rd or 4th grade executive engineer as assistant.

THE COST OF THE WAR.

THE announcement of the recall, not merely of the head, but of the complete body, of the Russian Embassy to Cabul should go far to reassure the alarmists who have calculated a probable expenditure of millions on the Afghan war. The support being withdrawn on which the Ameer may have relied, it is a reasonable expectation that neither the Indian nor Imperial revenues will be burdened with a heavy war expenditure, which at the present juncture would be equally unacceptable to England and India. We do not believe that in either country there would be an unwillingness to embark in an enterprise of even as great magnitude as was shadowed forth by some of the Opposition speakers in the debates of the past week were it evident that it must be so. It is, at present, enough to rejoice that the precautionary frontier war in which our Indian forces are engaged is not likely to exceed the limits of one campaign. It may, perhaps, be held that this is too sanguine a view to take; but we must bear in mind that the state of things hinted at by the Chancellor of the Exchequer as possible is not likely to be realised. The war will not, we think, become "one even by unofficial means so stirred up against us as to need the calling forth of our Imperial strength."

This must be very reassuring to the minds of the alarmists who have argued that the expense of the war is likely to run into millions. All alike, whether "Indian politicians charged by Parliament with the protection of the revenues of India," or English representatives solicitous to show that English misgovernment is ruining that great country, must feel well pleased that day by day their vaticinations grow less probable. It is one disappointment the more. The debate itself on Mr. Stanhope's motion was one of disappointments. The opposition to the Government proposal being so unreal, as was evidenced, not so much by the majority in its favour as by the diminution in the ranks of the opponents, when all the repetitions of arguments for and against the policy of the war are subtracted, there remains nothing but a simple vote that the Indian Government be, according to the requirements of an Act of Parliament, empowered to expend the cash balance in their Treasury upon the campaign in Afghanistan, the ultimate apportionment of the expenditure incurred being reserved for future discussion. Thus the arguments as to the war being Imperial, or Indian, were useless; while the grave contention that the Government ought not to have sent a regiment across the frontier until after the debate may be said to have been worse than useless. It is hard to suppose that any one could seriously maintain that the Executive of India could be held to be so trammelled as to be obliged to lose the opportunity of striking a decisive blow in order to await the meeting of Parliament. The sanction of the Legislature had to be obtained, and was in due course sought for, to authorise the outlay; but we fail to see how the argument, that it had not been sought for according to the terms of the Act, supports an amendment that Great Britain and not India should defray the expenditure unlawfully incurred. There was more reality in the argument of Professor Fawcett, who although the Under Secretary charged him with always muddling Indian Finance, nevertheless proves himself to be an earnest advocate of what he considers the vital interests of India. The magnanimous desire of Mr. Jacob Bright that England should pay the bill for the war, and India should take off the import tax on cotton, may be passed by as very unreal. Not so Prof. Fawcett's urging of the need for famine insurance, and avoidance of increasing the Indian taxation. Lord G. Hamilton's clear statement, showing that the actual withdrawal of funds from famine expenditure only amounted to £150,000, made even this strong economical argument disappear. But even if the sum subtracted had been larger, the case against the Government proposal would scarcely have been stronger. It is no argument, but we cannot help thinking that he would not be called wise who should spend large sums in reclaiming and laying out ground which lay exposed to the possible overflow of a mountain torrent without providing a wall or embankment to divert the destructive stream from his fruitful fields. We would urge upon the attention of any member who is solicitous as to the burden upon Indian finances of the measures adopted to secure the approaches to India, that a return of all the sums expended, or rather wasted, in bribing the Ameer would be an instructive one. So also would be a return of the amount which has been from time to time drained away from the India Treasury by the constant demands made on it by the successive frontier expeditions alluded to by Lord Beaconsfield. Setting side by side the total of such outlay, and the estimated expenditure of the Afghan war, economists will probably find in the long run that it is just as cheap to provide for peace as it is admitted to be economical to insure against famine.

The financial statement published by the India Office showing the revised estimate of the probable results of the year's finances, may be considered to have effectually disposed of the fear that new Indian taxes would have to be imposed. Of course, objectors will point to the fortunate excess in the opium revenue, which is estimated to yield 124½ lakhs, and alone almost supplies the deficiencies under the head "worse," viz., railways 60 lakhs, loss by exchange 50 lakhs, salt 26 lakhs, interest 16 lakhs, and army compensation for high price of food 33 lakhs, the deficiency under customs 8 lakhs, and the gain in home charges, 7 lakhs, nearly balancing each other. The result of the reformed salt taxation seems at first sight disappointing, but it is accounted for by the time at which the alteration would take effect falling too late to produce the calculated results. The Englishman states that in the first seven months of the current financial year the salt revenue has amounted to Rs. 3,51,49,177 as compared with Rs. 3,42,94,221 during the corresponding period of last year. A short time back we quoted from the Bombay papers a statement that the steady increase of the salt trade showed an improvement in the condition of the population, and there is every reason to believe that this improvement, bearing with it a steady increase of revenue, will continue. We endeavour from time to time to present our readers with faithful accounts of the condition and prospects of the people, and it is gratifying to note that, notwithstanding some local drawbacks, the general result of the year now drawing to a close is likely to show a substantial growth of prosperity. We may confidently expect that "Bankrupt India" will, without incurring an additional pie of taxation, be able to bear whatever share of the expenditure may be hereafter assigned to her. There is, we are glad to perceive, no inclination on the part of those charged with Indian administration to overlook the difficulties of Indian finance. On the other hand, it is well that they have shown no disposition to demand from the British taxpayer subsidies to enable India to discharge the needful duty of self-preservation, until it shall be evident that the task is too great for her resources, unaided by the Imperial Legislature. That her goodwill is not deficient has been abundantly demonstrated, notwithstanding the assertion that the people "have washed their hands of this war," and the taunting reference to inspired telegrams. The voluntary offer of troops and money, the declaration of the Oudh talukdars, the general approval, not only of the English, but of the native Press, declare that in India the war is considered a necessary one, and is adopted as the only course left open to the Supreme Government, which has been insulted and defied by a border prince. We do not think the princes or peoples of India will feel grateful to the self-styled friends who account them so disaffected or indifferent, any more than they will endorse the opinion that India is incapable of bearing at least her share of the cost of the war.

According to latest Ceylon advices of 27th ult., which have reached us in time for publication, the appointment of Mr. Hector Cross Buchanan to be an unofficial member of the Legislative Council is gazetted. The introduction of the money order system between Ceylon and India, expected to have been established in January, has received a check, the Indian Government objecting to the maintenance of existing arrangements for remittances from planters through the Ceylon Kachcheries. The Colombo Tea Company have declared a dividend of 10 per cent., and declined amalgamation with the proposed new company.

The weather up country continues favourable for crop operations, and large quantities of parchment are finding their way to Colombo stores, where the work of curing is somewhat retarded by unsettled weather. It is stated that on many estates that have yielded a small crop this season the continued rains, followed by warm dry weather, have brought forward a pretty general show of spike, which bids fair for a December blossom, to be followed, probably, by one in January.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 16.

In answer to Major NOLAN,

Mr. E. STANHOPE said: In consequence of the hon. and gallant member's question, we telegraphed to India and have received the following reply:—"From the Viceroy, Lahore:—

"DEC. 16.—Following substance of rules issued by Government regarding Press correspondence:—Approved correspondents allowed to accompany field columns, receiving carriage and camp equipage on same terms as other officers, and staff officer's rations on payment. No restriction or supervision over correspondence. Officers commanding columns empowered, if they think necessary, to require telegraphic messages to be submitted for inspection. Officers commanding at frontier stations authorised on emergency temporarily to order stoppage of all telegrams relating to movements of troops, unless countersigned by staff officer. Commander-in-Chief has further issued orders prohibiting staff officers writing for papers, as he considers their time should be fully occupied with their proper duties."

Mr. STANHOPE moved the Resolution giving the sanction of the House to the application of the Indian revenues to defray the expenses of the Afghan expedition. After relating the history of the clause in the Act of 1858 which made this resolution necessary, he proceeded to argue that the war which has been undertaken was for Indian purposes, and intended for the security and protection of India. As to an apportionment of the cost between the Indian and Imperial revenues, he pointed out this resolution would not prevent this being done at any future time. The war at present was a mere frontier war; and if it should assume larger proportions, it would have to be considered from a different point of view. As to the cost, it was calculated that if it lasted until April it would cost something like £1,200,000, of which £950,000 would come within the financial year, and this would be met by the surplus, which, originally calculated at £2,150,000, was now reduced to £1,550,000.

Mr. FAWCETT moved an amendment that it would be unjust to apply Indian revenues to defray the extraordinary expenses of the war, contending that, by the confession of the Ministers themselves, it was a war which was waged for imperial and not Indian purposes. He denied, too, that the surplus alleged by the Under-Secretary had any real existence, or, if it had, it had already been appropriated to famine purposes, and it was raised by some of the most onerous taxes ever imposed on a people. The present form of the Resolution, being unlimited in time, gave the Government an unlimited vote of credit on the Indian revenue, and it ought to be stated at once in what proportion the charge was ultimately to be imposed on the Indian and Imperial Exchequers.

Mr. GLADSTONE, in seconding the amendment, expressed a doubt whether the surplus actually existed, and insisted that the Ministry had broken the Government of India Act, which required the previous consent of Parliament before any money could be issued from the Indian Exchequer, except in certain cases clearly defined. The intention of the Act was to give Parliament the power of preventing mischievous wars, but the course taken by the Government—backed up, he admitted, by the House of Commons—had entirely defeated this object. The war he held to be unreasonable and impolitic, not made by the people of India, but by the people of England, who had placed the present Government in office, and who ought, therefore, to pay for it.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL argued that if the consent of Parliament were given it was immaterial whether it was given before or after. The 54th section of the Government of India Act contemplated clearly the commencement of a war before the consent of Parliament had been obtained, and the 53th section only required a ratification which, according to a well-known legal maxim, had a retrospective effect, and was equivalent to a previous consent.

and to officiate as wing commander, in addition to his own duties, vice Lieut. Barclay, temporarily appointed to the commissariat department, N.P.

Mr. LAING dilated on the political dangers of the financial question, and argued that, as additional taxation was impossible, the only means of preserving the balance was by the reduction of military expenditure.

Mr. SMOLLETT attributed the war to Shere Ali, whom he spoke of as a mad savage, and compared the considerate manner in which he had been treated by the present Government with the "imperialism" of the Whig Government, which made the first Afghan war. The Ameer must be brought to reason, and he anticipated that the war would be short and decisive. Replying to Mr. Gladstone's charge of garbling the official documents, he reminded him of the falsification of Sir Alexander Burn's papers, which he had refused to condemn in 1861.

Sir G. CAMPBELL announced that he had determined to support the amendment, mainly because the interests of India had not been sufficiently represented. He criticised adversely Lord Lytton's mode of conducting business, and warned the House against attaching too much importance to the "inspired telegrams" relating to the loyalty of the Indian princes, and to the unchequered nature of our military successes. He was opposed entirely to the policy of the war; but at the same time he thought the political invasion of Afghanistan by Russia a breach of faith which could only be justified by our extreme partisanship against her in the European negotiations.

Mr. HUBBARD said he could not vote for laying the whole charge on the Indian Exchequer, and he appealed to the Government to state that a portion of the cost would be laid on the Imperial Exchequer.

Dr. PLAYFAIR moved the adjournment of the debate, and the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER took the opportunity of stating that it was not intended by passing this resolution that the whole expenditure would be necessarily thrown on India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—DEC. 17.

In answer to a question from Mr. Hubbard, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the Government could not consent that the war should be conducted by the Indian Government at the expense of the British Government, as it would tend to extravagance, and would ultimately lead to the imposition of a larger burden on India. But they thought the case was one which required special consideration, and he promised later on in the evening to indicate the principles on which an apportionment might be made.

The adjourned debate on Mr. Stanhope's resolution and Mr. Fawcett's amendment was resumed by Dr. PLAYFAIR, who argued in favour of throwing the cost on the British Exchequer. He said that to draw upon the alleged surplus for the war would be to commit a breach of faith with the native and to break down the Famine Assurance Fund. No new taxes, he showed, could be imposed without danger; and as the war was to be conducted for Imperial purposes, and as the English people were answerable for it by placing the present Government in office, the English people ought to pay for it.

Lord G. HAMILTON maintained that this was essentially an Indian war, inasmuch as it was for the interest of India to have a secure frontier, and but for India we should neither be at war with Afghanistan nor should we be much concerned in the Eastern Question. It was the duty of England to protect India, which was poor and weak, and there might be some truth in arguing that the cost should be shared by England, but as a matter of justice India should bear the whole expenditure. Discussing the financial question, after defending the salt taxation, he showed that the taxes imposed for the famine measures, owing to lateness of time, would only yield £1,200,000 this year. £500,000 had already been expended in famine relief, leaving £750,000 to be expended. If out of the surplus of £1,541,000 the war absorbed an advance of £940,000 of the cash balances the famine fund would only lose £150,000 for this year. To lay down by an abstract resolution, such as Mr. Fawcett's, that the Indian authorities might undertake any expenditure with the assurance that they had the British exchequer at their back, would be altogether to destroy the financial control.

Sir H. JAMES, reverting to the legal point raised by Mr. Gladstone, and answering the Attorney-General, asserted that the Government had broken the Act of 1858 by expending Indian money on the expedition without the consent of Parliament, and the SOLICITOR-GENERAL, in answering him, maintained that if Parliament had meant a "previous" consent it would have specified it.

Sir G. BALFOUR supported the amendment.

Mr. BALFOUR maintained that the war was Indian, and ought to be paid for by India. The immediate cause of the war was an affront to the Indian Government, and whoever was the ruler of India would have to take measures to prevent Afghanistan becoming a menace to India. Moreover, Russia would have stretched out her hand towards India sooner or later, whether we had any connection with it or not.

Mr. CHILDEES maintained that it would give the Government an unlimited vote of credit on the Indian Exchequer for the whole expenses of the war, and was incompatible with a mere temporary and partial charge. After some comments on the cavalier treatment of the Council of India, Mr. CHILDEES examined the financial condition of India, which, he argued, made it impossible for her to bear this charge and the permanent cost which would ultimately be placed upon her by an extension of her frontier. That this was an English, not an Indian, quarrel he inferred from the long delay in taking notice of the march of the Russian columns from Tashkend towards India.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied to this that it was not until August that the Government received any authentic news of the Russian Mission being received at Cabul which made it necessary to move. In this case there was a real emergency, because if there had been delay the season would have been lost and the resistance would have been greater; and this was more than could be alleged for the China War, in which the Indian troops had been used by a Liberal Government without Parliament knowing anything about it. The resolution was merely meant to make the Indian revenue applicable to the expenses of the war, and not to conclude the question as to the future. If India was to be a self-supporting country she ought to be able to pay for her own self-defence. She ought also to bear the expense of a war with an immediate neighbour, but not with a distant enemy who might attack her as a part of the British Empire. In such a case her claim on the Imperial Exchequer must be recognised. At present it was too soon to decide what would be the character of the present war. It might be that it would be soon terminated and no necessity for appealing to the British Exchequer would arise; but if it should turn out to be a war calling for the whole strength of the country to be put forth, then undoubtedly India ought not to bear the whole cost. In the course of a month or two we should know more clearly what course the war was about to take, and the Government would be prepared to make proposals to the House accordingly.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON, in the course of a brief speech, remarked that the proposal of the Government evidently pointed to a system of subsidies which would destroy the whole financial control of Parliament.

On a division, Mr. FAWCETT's amendment was negatived by a majority of 110—235 to 125—and the original resolution was then agreed to.

The House adjourned until Thursday, February 13.

HOME NEWS.

INDIAN RELIEFS.—We understand that it is the intention of the Government of India to alter the entire arrangements for the relief of British regiments in India this season, and that it is now in communication with the home authorities on the subject.

DEPARTURE OF THE "JUMNA."—This Indian troop-ship, Capt. Parsons, left Portsmouth on Wednesday morning for India with the 8th Hussars, and drafts of the C Brigade R.H.A., 6th Dragoon Guards, 12th Lancers, 13th Hussars, 14th Hussars, 4th Brigade R.A., 72nd, 92nd, and 100th Regts., in all nearly 1,400. The 8th Hussars, on arrival in India, will be stationed at Muttra, Bengal Presidency.

STORES FOR INDIA.—Bales of goods marked "Afghan Expedition" are being prepared at the Royal Arsenal for export to Bombay in the steamship Presnitz, now lying in the Victoria Docks. The contents of the bales are chiefly waterproof sheets and other stores which may be required to replenish the supply of camp necessities originally furnished for the equipment of the expedition. Two hundred non-commissioned officers and men of the Duke of Connaught's Battalion, the 1st Battalion of Rifle Brigade, have been placed under orders to leave Woolwich early in January, for the purpose of reinforcing the companies of the 4th Battalion, now serving in India.

THE INDIAN SURPLUS.—An official document has been issued from the India Office giving an estimate of the finances of India, based on telegraphic information, for 1878-9. The surplus estimated by the Government in India in March, 1878, was £2,156,000. This has since been revised, according to the latest information, thus:—Worse: India railways, 60 lacs; loss by exchanges, 50 lacs; salt, 26 lacs; customs, 8 lacs; interest, 16 lacs; army compensation for high price of food, 33 lacs; making a total for the worse of 193 lacs. Against this there is a contra account as follows:—Better: India opium, 124½ lacs; England ordinary charges, 7 lacs; making a total of 131½ lacs, and thus creating a deficiency of 61½ lacs, or £615,000. This amount, deducted from the surplus estimated last March, gives a surplus as now estimated at £1,541,000. The estimated cost of the war in Afghanistan to the close of the financial year (including expenditure in England) is £1,200,000, of which £280,000 will appear in the accounts of 1879-80. The cost in accounts of 1878-9 is, therefore, £940,000, leaving a surplus of 1878-9 of £601,000.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The thirty-second ordinary general meeting was held on Wednesday, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. The Chairman (Mr. Pender, M.P.), in moving the adoption of the report, went through the various items in that document, a summary of which we published last week. In reviewing the history of railways in India, which had been started only a quarter of a century ago, the speaker said it must be plain from the gradual increase of receipts how railways had come to be appreciated throughout that great country. Railways now, instead of being a tax upon the Government, had become a source of gain, the share of Government profit for last year being £490,336. He had been convinced by the recent famine that it took but little to make the people of India prosperous, or the contrary; he therefore advocated, as the best means of developing passenger traffic, the keeping down of the rates. The company, of which he had the honour to be chairman, had a tenure of 999 years; but Government had the power to take it over after twenty years, at the value of the preceding three years. In the late debate in the House of Commons on Indian affairs, it had been asserted for party purposes that India was very poor; but he held that India was rapidly increasing in wealth, brought about principally by the extension of the railway system. He believed that if the political questions were now settled and peace on permanent principles established, they would see a degree of prosperity in India never before reached. The Chairman concluded by formally moving the adoption of the report and accompanying statement of accounts, which was seconded by Mr. J. A. Tobin, and unanimously carried. The proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—As briefly noticed in our columns last week, the half-yearly general meeting was held on Monday, Dec. 16, at the City Terminus Hotel. Colonel J. T. Smith, R.E., the chairman, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report apologised for the absence of Colonel Collyer, one of the auditors, whose ill-health compelled him to be abroad. The accounts, however, had been certified as strictly correct by Mr. Brown, the other auditor. They exhibited a falling off from their receipts of former years, but this was owing to circumstances entirely beyond human control, and it was satisfactory to know that they were quite exceptional and temporary, and that they might look forward with certainty to resuming their former normal progress as soon as time had been allowed for their removal. One of the many causes of their extra expenses during the past half-year had been the wise and necessary precaution of the Government of Madras in determining to maintain the company's line in a state of the most perfect efficiency and equal to the heaviest traffic till the necessity of such precautions had passed away. It was very difficult to say when the country would recover from the shock caused by the famine. Their officers deserved the highest praise for their zeal and self-denying exertions during the famine, and the question had been brought before the Government whether some acknowledgment or honorarium should not be bestowed on them in recognition of their services. An extra month's salary had been proposed. Mr. W. H. Crane, the deputy chairman, seconded the motion, which was at once carried unanimously.

SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of this company states that the net results of the half-year do not show as satisfactorily as was expected, mainly owing to the decline in the traffic in Scinde by railway and flotilla, though the carriage of edible grain over the upper section yielded an excess of £49,381 4s. over the total amount of carriage of this commodity in the corresponding period of 1877. The percentage of working expenses on the gross receipts during the six months is 62·51, of which maintenance of way and works absorbed 13·52, locomotive expenses 19·05, carriage wagon expenses 4·23, traffic expenses 8·18, general charges 5·73, steamboat service 9·80, and special and miscellaneous expenditure 2·00. The Scinde Railway has been maintained in good order at a cost of £62·61 per railway mile, against £104·33 in the corresponding period of 1877; whilst the Punjab and Delhi Railway cost £90·90 per railway mile in the half-year of 1878, against £116·41 in the corresponding period of 1877. Comparative tabular statements show the traffic, its cost and results, for each branch of the company's undertakings for the five half-years ending in June. Whilst the number of passengers carried during the half-year shows an excess of 13·1 per cent. on the similar period of 1877, the amount earned under the head of receipts from passengers, &c., was 6·9 per cent. more in 1877 than in 1878, which was largely due to the Delhi Durbar in the former period. The amount received for the carriage of edible grain in the half-year ending June, 1878, was £103,397 (of which £14,576 was for wheat), against £53,905 and £10,315 for the corresponding periods of 1877 and 1876. Excessive floods on the 19th and 20th of August swept away most of the company's minor bridges and about six miles of the line in the Beas and East Beyne Valleys. The alacrity, good judgment, and thorough efficiency manifested by the staff, under the guidance and example of the acting agent and chief engineer, Mr. Charles Stone, and the traffic manager, Mr. David Ross, in restoring the through running by diversions in forty-four days, and carrying on the traffic during the breaks in the line, and the heavy military transports since, have been commended by the board, and are worthy of substantial recognition. The energies of the engineering staff will be immediately devoted to the reconstruction of the works, and it appears likely that a larger waterway will have to be provided. The statement of receipts and expenditure on capital account shows that there had been received, up to the end of the past half-year, the sum of £11,075,236, of which, as shown in the general balance-sheet, there remained at that date a balance of £544,808 at the company's credit, with the Secretary of State for India in Council.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The fifty-eighth half-yearly meeting was held on Friday, under the presidency of Colonel Holland. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, after mentioning the loss the railway had sustained in the death of two of the directors at Bombay—Messrs. Dickenson and Reed—and the fact that in their place Messrs. A. R. Scoble and Mr. F. Chapman had been elected, said that the profits made during the half-year were a trifle less than those made in the corresponding half-year. They were 7½ per cent. less, but it must be remembered that last year was the famine year. It was gratifying, however, to be able to state that the expenditure was in a still greater proportion less. The ratio of working expenses to profits in the last three half-years was nearly 46, and now it had been brought down to somewhat less than 43. The result of that had been that they had been able to declare a bonus of 16s. for the half-year over and above the guarantee of 5 per cent. They had increased their capital by about £297,000, of which goods engines consumed £176,000, wagons £26,000, and additional machinery and works £24,000. These three items comprised £227,000, out of the £297,000. With regard to passengers, he was glad to say that the numbers carried were increasing. The charges were much less than in the corresponding half-year. If they continued to work their railway for the next twenty years as they had done for the last three or four years, the Government was not likely to take it out of their hands, or if they did it would be upon terms which would be satisfactory to the shareholders. The Chairman, in reply to a question, said that the loss the company had sustained by grain robberies was about £30,000. The report was adopted, and the dividend having been declared, a resolution, authorising the company to borrow £500,000, was agreed to, and the meeting separated.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIAN RAILWAY.—The forty-sixth half-yearly general meeting was held on Friday, Lieut.-Colonel P. T. French in the chair. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, referred to the loss sustained by the company in the death of their secretary, Mr. Charles Currey. He regretted that there had been no addition to the length of the line during the past half-year, but the general features of the report were satisfactory. They had earned considerably more than the guaranteed interest, and the balance between that sum and the net profits had been devoted to the construction of the great bridge over the Nerbudda. Their engineer, Sir John Hawkshaw, was well pleased with the progress of that work. He regretted that the construction of the Rajpootana line had not been commenced, and he could only say that if the work had been entrusted to this company it would have been made long ago. It was on the construction of this line that he based his hope for a permanent surplus dividend. The contractor was bound to finish the Nerbudda Bridge in 1880, but he had considerable expectation that it would be finished by the close of next year. In reply to Mr. Williams, the Chairman stated that the Government were not entitled to purchase the line till the year 1905. The motion was agreed to, and after a vote of thanks to the chairman and the directors the proceedings terminated.

RIDER'S PATENT HOUSEHOLD PUMPING ENGINE.

SOLE MAKERS,
HAYWARD TYLER & CO.,
LONDON.

The cost of running an Engine of half-a-horse power does not exceed 2s. 6d. per week for coke and oil.

An Engine of half-horse power will raise all the water required for a large mansion or public buildings, and one of a third-horse power is sufficient for most gentlemen's houses, whilst its simplicity is such that no skilled labour is requisite—in fact, a gardener's boy of sixteen years old, of ordinary intelligence, can work it.

Cranston's Nurseries, King's Acre, near Hereford,

Messrs. HAYWARD TYLER and Co.,

Gentlemen.—We have much pleasure in being able to state that the "Rider Hot Air Engine" has given great satisfaction, and has done all we expected of it. Our fear at first was that it would soon lose air by the packing getting worn, but this has not been the case, as we have worked it now for twelve months without its having cost us a penny for repairs. Any of our men can work it, and the consumption of fuel is as small as you state. We should be very sorry to be without it now to the nurseries.—Yours truly,
CRANSTON AND CO.

LAMPLOUGH'S EFFERVESCING PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states :—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,
Second door from Hatton-garden, London, and of all respectable Chemists. In Bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. ## ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1878.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Overland Mail brings advices from Bombay up to December 9; Allahabad and Madras, December 7; Calcutta, December 6.

THE general remarks on the season and prospects for the week ending Nov. 26 are as follows:—In Madras general prospects have not changed since last week; the want of more rain continues to be felt in several districts. The number on relief works and that in receipt of gratuitous relief now amount to 23,774 and 15,172 respectively, being a further decrease of 1,879 and 3,659. In Mysore, where the parallel figures now stand at 8,593 and 2,558 instead of at 11,356 and 3,457 as last week, prices are still falling. In the Bombay Presidency anticipations are, as hitherto, hopeful, being reported fair in Guzerat and Koncan, and good in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta districts. In the Central Provinces rain is wanted for the rabi, the sowings for which are nearly completed; the kharif harvest is progressing, and prospects continue to be bright; prices are steady. In Berar, Central India, and Rajputana there is no change. In Bengal the crops are, on the whole, good, except as before in Sarun and parts of Chumparun; the weather is unseasonably warm, and prices continue high in most districts. In Assam and British Burma prospects are still satisfactory. The weather in the latter province, where there has been scarcely any rain, is very favourable for the harvest operations, which will soon be general. In the North Western Provinces and Oudh the want of rain continues to be felt. In the Punjab rain would benefit the rabi sowings, but an immediate fall would prove inopportune, as it would damage the kharif crops not yet fully gathered; health reports from this province are again more favourable. Throughout the whole of India there has been, as is usually the case at this time of year, very little rain. The cold weather having fully set in, the autumn sickness has in many districts abated; but the reports from some localities continue to mention the prevalence of fever.

THE general health reports for the same week record: Bombay, fever general in Sind, Guzerat, Tanna, and Khandeish, eleven deaths from cholera in Ratnagiri. Bengal; cholera in Serajgunge, increasing in Bogra; N.W.P., and Oudh, much fatal fever in Jumna (Meerut), decreasing at Agra. Punjab, health reports more favourable. Central Provinces, cholera in five districts, fever generally prevalent. British Burma, fever prevalent in Akyab, fourteen deaths from cholera in Rangoon, nineteen in Bassein and suburbs. Central India, fever still prevalent. Rajputana, health somewhat improving.

THE following telegrams have been sent to us from the Indian Office for publication:—

"LIEUT.-GENERAL BROWNE, JELLALABAD, DEC. 20.—Jellalabad occupied to-day; inhabitants friendly. Ameer's flight confirmed, leaving Sirdar Yakoob Khan in authority; quiet here, but beyond and at Cabul a state of anarchy exists.

"FROM VICEROY, DEC. 21.—Roberts reports return to Koorum yesterday. Captain Powell, 5th Goorkhas, died of wounds. Wing, 8th British, marched to Thrakimzai to give confidence to people and protect telegraph line."

"FROM VICEROY, DEC. 26.—Roberts reports completion of telegraphic communication with Kuram. Some headmen of Mangal and other independent tribes have come in and seem satisfied with reception. Tytler, commanding Dakka, reports return of his column from Bazar expedition. Enemy followed up closely, but everywhere repulsed. Our casualties two killed, seven wounded."

THE Calcutta telegram of yesterday throws doubt upon the correctness of the statement that Yakoob Khan had come into Jellalabad. Although coming from a "trustworthy official source," it has not been confirmed in later telegrams from officers in Jellalabad. It was believed that Major Cavagnari had been deputed to make friendly overtures to Yakoob after the flight of his father, which, if accepted, would probably result in the visit of the Prince to Jellalabad. The Times telegram further says:—

"A letter from your correspondent at Jellalabad, dated the 23rd inst., has just been received, in which no mention is made of Yakoob Khan's arrival there. He speaks, however, of communications having been opened with him at Cabul. This certainly looks somewhat as if the official announcement made here early on the 27th inst. was premature. Your correspondent says that supplies of every sort are more abundant there than at first expected, so that very little will require to be forwarded from the rear. Mutton and beef there are very good, and honey is plentiful. A sort of brown bread is about to be given to the troops, and if this turns out satisfactory the commissariat will not have much more than spirits to bring up from the rear. Two soldiers of native regiments were wounded by an Afghan running amuck in the bazaar. The man was shot and his body burnt as a warning to other fanatics against following his example. They hope to win immediate entrance to Paradise by killing an infidel, believing that admission there will be denied them except on that condition."

A TELEGRAM dated Lahore, Dec. 29, states:—

"Certain telegrams from England have created an impression here that there is a risk of too great importance being attached in England to the Ameer's departure from Cabul and of its being regarded as virtually terminating the campaign. Some here think that the Ameer's flight may have been greatly influenced by the fact that if he had remained during the winter in Cabul he might have found himself caught in a trap. The roads on this side of Cabul are usually passable earlier in spring than those on the other side of the Afghan capital, and thus our army might have been able in the event of the Ameer's staying in Cabul till spring, to advance on him before he could retire. He has fourteen—or, according to another calculation, seventeen—regiments at Herat, and if he can retain hold over them and thus maintain his supremacy in Afghan Turkestan he may still offer formidable opposition. He released Yakoob Khan only under pressure from the Ghilzai chiefs, who would not allow him to leave Cabul without appointing a successor. Our troops are within a few marches of Candahar and news of its occupation without resistance is shortly expected, no credence being attached to rumours that the Ameer had sent three regiments to that town."

THE Times of India states that the announcement of Captain Maclean's death is authoritatively contradicted, and, we are glad to be able to add, he is fast recovering. The correspondent of the same journal says that it is stated on the best official authority that the attacks on convoys, &c., in the Khyber Pass have been much exaggerated by sensational telegrams.

THE following is the nominal roll of the European soldiers killed and wounded at Ali Musjid:—Killed—L.C. Horse Artillery, Gunner Cornan; 51st Foot, Private Nelson. Wounded—L.C. Horse Artillery, Trumpeter Hill, Gunners Lindsay, Cooper, and Marshall; 11-9 Artillery, Sergeant Blackwell, Gunners Allen, Akers, Day, and Sutton; 51st Foot, Private Talbot.

ACCORDING to the Times correspondent, the expedition against the Zaka-khel Afridis has been to some extent a failure. The enemy had time to escape, and though the villages were burnt this punishment is inadequate. They had taken away everything worth taking. The houses themselves are worthless, capable of being rebuilt with little trouble or cost. Our troops had twenty-five camels and six mules stolen, as was believed, by the Afridis professing themselves our friends. On the return march they were attacked by the Zaka-khel Afridis, the 17th Foot losing in the affair two men killed and eight wounded, and the rearguard having four hours' fighting. It is only fair, however, to remember that these expeditions are extremely difficult to conduct successfully. If, as in this expedition, a large force is employed, the enemy is sure to get warning from spies and escape. On the other hand, great risk is incurred by taking a small force, as the enemy, knowing the ground, can rapidly concentrate greater numbers for making a successful resistance, and the slightest semblance of a repulse always brings fresh foes upon us.

THERE were not wanting doubts and surmises as to the fidelity of the Pathan soldiers in the ranks of our Punjab regiments. These forebodings have, to some extent, been realised, the offenders being found in the ranks of the 29th Native Infantry, formerly the 21st Punjab Infantry, commanded by Colonel Gordon, forming part of General Roberts's forces. Rumours of disaffection among the Pathans of this regiment had been afloat since the 2nd. It is not stated whether there were any number of Cabrites in the ranks, but an unwillingness to fight against their Afghan countrymen was plainly shown. At last, on the night of the 1st, the 29th Regiment was given the post of honour to lead the turning movement by the Spingwai Pass. After passing the village of Peiwar they straggled so much and went so slowly that General Roberts had to bring the 5th Goorkhas to the front. The strictest orders had been issued that silence and quietness should be preserved on the march, as much of the success of the enterprise depended on the leading men of the column taking the first barrier by surprise. The men had not loaded their rifles when, about two miles from the barrier, two shots were fired in rapid succession from the Pathan Company of the 29th Regiment. This could only mean treachery on their part. The General at once halted the 29th and brought the 72nd Highlanders in front of them. It seems wonderful that the enemy did not hear these two signal shots. There was then no time or light to examine the rifles to discover who had fired the shots, but the culprits have since been brought to trial, and one was hanged before the whole force, while the other was sentenced to a term of imprisonment, as his treacherous intention was less clear. During the night of the advance eighteen men from the 29th deserted, and found their way back to the old camp at Peiwar, taking no share in the action. They have all been tried, and have received sentences of transportation varying from two to fourteen years.

REFERRING to this subject, the Civil and Military Gazette, published at Lahore, usually well informed, denounces as greatly exaggerated certain stories recently afloat, and probably despatched to England, about the mutinous conduct of the regiments, chiefly composed of Pathans, in General Roberts's force. A few men, all Afridi recruits, behaved badly, two of them giving signals to the enemy of the British approach to the Spingawi Pass by discharging their rifles, while some others returned to camp instead of fighting. They have all been tried and punished, the man who fired the first shot being hanged; but the regiment as a body behaved excellently and fought well, though fighting against their own countrymen, as was testified not only by General Roberts's report, but by their list of casualties.

GENERAL ROBERTS has recommended for the Victoria Cross Captain Cook, of the 5th Goorkhas, in recognition of his gallant conduct at the Peiwar Pass. The behaviour on this occasion of the Goorkhas—the best, probably, of all our native troops, not excepting even the Sikhs—elicited the warmest admiration of all who witnessed it.

MAJOR DESBOROUGH, R.A., died at Madras on Dec. 4 from injuries received by a fall from his horse.

A GLOOM of despondency has for the present settled down on Bombay—the prostration of foreign trade, the low rates of exchange, and the depression of the local cotton industry depress Europeans and natives alike. It is hoped that the realisation of the excellent crops of this year will cause a brisk revival of the export trade, to be followed by a rise in exchange and an improvement in the demand for Indian goods. But this does not content the Bombay Gazette, which suggests a stimulant to the local spirit of enterprise in the shape of a Bombay International Exhibition to be held in the cold weather of 1879-80. The necessary guarantee fund is estimated at six lakhs, which may be raised by subscription in shares of Rs.1,000, and the Government might assist by providing a site on the waste ground known as the Kennedy Sea Face, where there is ample room for a suitable building and ornamental grounds. Such an exhibition would familiarise the natives of India with the marvels of the Western world, and European firms might learn what their Indian customers really want; in fact the Gazette anticipates grand results to India, Europe, and America. In a spirit of joyful prophecy our contemporary says:—"Next year should be a year of rejoicing in India. The recollection of the disastrous two years' famine which has done so much mischief will have been effaced; the Afghan war should be at an end before the rains set in; and returning peace and plenty will gladden all hearts. We may anticipate, therefore, that the Viceroy and all the native princes of India would be able to attend the Bombay Exhibition; and their example would be eagerly followed by thousands upon thousands of natives, while the intense interest now felt at home in India, and the special attractions of the Exhibition, would draw to our shores swarms of travellers from all parts of Europe. Such a gathering of the nations would not only ensure the success of the Exhibition, but it would pour a fertilising stream of wealth into Bombay and improve the condition of all classes of the population.

THE exposition of the body of Saint Francis Xavier commenced on the 3rd inst. The procession set out from the cathedral and entered the church of Bom Jesus at nine o'clock in the morning, and was composed of about fifty confraternities bearing silver and gold crosses, four hundred priests, and an enormous number of clerics in minor orders, winding up with Bishop Barbero of Hyderabad, Bishop Bonjean of Jaffna and Ceylon, and Bishop Meurin, of Bombay, and was presided over by the Archbishop. The new Governor General, who had been installed the day previous, followed next, accompanied by a host of officials in grand uniforms. The procession then entered by the side of the chapel and brought out the body of the Saint and placed it in front of the high altar, after which a Pontifical Mass by the Archbishop commenced, which terminated at twelve o'clock with the Papal blessing. The whole scene was very picturesque. The military and police had hard work to preserve order, as the crush of Portuguese Catholics was simply indescribable. On the body being exposed by the prelates we have named above, the artillery fired a salute of twenty-one guns, and the church bells were set ringing throughout the town. The body is much shrunken and shrivelled. About 15,000 persons were in and about the church. Pilgrims from all parts of India are to be seen at Goa, and the town is wonderfully crowded by all sorts and conditions of men.

THE Times of India states that Major Butler, of the 9th Regiment, has returned from Turkestan after completing a survey of nearly 6,000 miles of the country. He is said to have so arranged matters with the Turcomans that their cavalry is ready to co-operate with us against any enemy.

UNDER the heading, "Lord Lytton and the Home Government," the Times of India states that it has received the following official communication from Lahore:—"We are authorised to state that the reports of differences between the Home and Indian Governments in regard to the course of action to be taken on receipt of the Ameer's reply of Oct. 6 to the Viceroy's letter are entirely without foundation. We refer to reports which were telegraphed home early last month, and which appeared in the leading English papers received by this mail. It is distinctly untrue that any protest was ever made by the Indian Government against the decision of the Cabinet that an ultimatum should be sent to the Ameer before a final declaration of hostilities."

In his resolution on last year's Calcutta municipal report Sir Ashley Eden says:—"The experiment of what is often called a representative system of municipal administration of the town of Calcutta may, as is frequently asserted, be a very interesting experiment; but, after all, it must be recollected that this is only an experiment, and, having regard to the enormous outlay and heavy liabilities of the town, it is certainly a very dangerous experiment, which requires the most careful watching. The municipality is responsible for a debt of Rs.1,50,67,395, and the security under which the loans have been contracted is the power of the rate-payers to meet taxation. While perfectly willing to give the present system a fair trial, it is impossible to allow it to continue till it threatens to destroy the prosperity of the city. The present year commences under a new chairman. The commissioners have before them a clear statement of their very unsatisfactory financial position, and the Lieutenant Governor hopes that they will now set to work to improve the state of the finances, and to intro duce the reforms which are so urgently needed in every branch of the municipality. If the year 1879 does not show a very much more favourable working of the municipal administration, it will be the imperative duty of the Government to place the control of the affairs of the town in other hands."

On a reference from the Account Department in the North Western Provinces, as to whether the rule regarding the grant of railway fares to subaltern officers in civil employ, proceeding to England on furlough on medical certificate, applies alike to other officers, such as covenanted medical officers who rank with subalterns, the Government of India, in the Financial Department, is said to have decided that the rule regarding the grant of a free passage by railway to subaltern officers in civil employ does apply to medical officers ranking with subalterns when such officers belong to her Majesty's Indian service.

The labours of the Famine Commissioners, according to the Pioneer, were very nearly brought to an unexpected and untimely close during the tour in the Punjab. In the course of their railway journey to Gajranwallah the distinguished travellers noticed that the heat was very great for the time of year. It rapidly increased. The horizon was searched for atmospheric phenomena which might account for the change of temperature. At last the explanation was discovered, not in the heavens, but in the next truck. This contained bags of stores consigned to the seat of war, and had been set on fire, probably, by a spark from the engine. Luckily the engine-driver's attention was successfully attracted and the train brought to a standstill, but if the signalling cord had been burned through before this was done the flames would almost certainly have spread to the Famine Commissioners' carriage.

The Secretary of State has approved of the allowances of a military officer in civil employ, when deputed on duty to Europe, being determined by his civil salary only, and at the same rate as is applicable to the case of a civil officer similarly situated.

The steward of the Umballa races for 1877 advertises thus:—"Undersigned begs to give notice that up to date he has only been able to collect Rs.3,700 out of close on Rs.19,000 due to the above settlements. The first dividend, at the rate of 30 per cent., will be paid to unpaid winners by cheques on the Meerut Bank on their applying to him. Names of those who have not paid can be had by any unpaid winner." This is, remarks an Indian sporting contemporary, the very first case of a dividend being declared in payment of debts of honour, and certainly speaks volumes for the honesty and honour of many racing men in India. Our contemporary thinks that the defaulters' names should be posted, and that if the Indian Turf Club is worthy of its name steps will be taken to render a recurrence of this disgrace impossible.

DURING the past year in British India there were altogether 993,444 towns and villages; the total payments for ordinary land revenue and for local rates and cesses was Rs.2,27,68,144; the total mileage sanctioned for all guaranteed railways up to the end of the year was 6,214½; the number of plants, cuttings, and seedlings in the Government cinchona plantations was 3,817,192; the approximate yield of tea was 29,557,482lb.; and coffee, 31,655,499lb. There were altogether 53 cotton mills worked by steam in the three Presidencies, with a nominal capital of Rs.53,216,003; and 21 jute mills, with a nominal capital of Rs.22,948,500.

THERE seems to be some hope of the needful legislative reforms being introduced into the mills of Bombay. The Times of India informs us that Sir R. Temple recently paid visits of inspection to some of the local mills with a view, it is understood, of making himself personally acquainted with the condition of the operatives. We can only trust that his Excellency's movements were not known beforehand. The Bombay Gazette adds to this report of Sir R. Temple's visits:—"We are informed that the Government of India has decided that factory legislation is necessary for the protection of young children employed in Indian cotton mills, and that Government is further of opinion that any Act which may be passed on the subject should be applicable to the whole country. Accordingly, a draft bill has been prepared, and a copy of it was received last week by the Government of Bombay for any suggestions Sir R. Temple and his colleagues may have to make thereon. Hence the Governor's anxiety to make himself personally acquainted with the working of the principal mills here."

A RECENT general order directs that "whenever an officer is recommended for leave of absence in India, owing to illness caused by his intemperance, the medical board should not fix the term of leave to be allowed; this should in all cases be left to the decision of Government or of the Commander-in-Chief; and the officer be directed to appear periodically before fresh boards, or the case be treated as one of discipline, as may be deemed necessary."

THE Primary Schools aided or supported by Government increased, says the Bengal Report on Public Instruction for 1877, from 12,272, with 302,550 pupils, to 16,042 with 369,322. A healthy sign of the growing elevation of the people is found in the fact of an increasing willingness on the part of parents to pay for their children's education. On the other hand it is well to find the authorities inclined to insist more and more upon the encouragement of such a feeling, and the confinement of primary to useful, as distinct from ornamental, teaching is also insisted on, and the Lieutenant Governor points out that the chief object of the Primary Education Grant is to furnish primary education, and not to force the pupils out of their natural social position. Turning to the Department of Special Instruction we find that the number of law students in the classes attached to five Government Colleges has increased from 222 to 316. The Medical College of Calcutta shows a decline from 176 to 145; the engineering department of the Presidency College one of 124 to 87. The pupils in the Vernacular Medical School are 680, as against 862 in the previous year; those in the School of Art, 89, against 119. The Vernacular Survey Schools maintain their attendance of 160, and Technical Schools show 148, as against 116 scholars.

THE curious legal difficulty which we noticed last week with regard to the trial at Bombay of a British subject convicted from Zanzibar, has been, we cannot say solved, but put an end to. The prisoner was duly put on his trial, and, no evidence having been submitted, except the depositions taken before Dr. Kirk, was acquitted, Sir Charles Sargent having pointed out the defect of cross-examination. Zanzibar is a dangerous climate for mothers-in-law of British subjects until the law be amended.

It has recently been ruled by the Indian Government that increase of salaries and establishments is not to be sanctioned by local governments and administrations in anticipation of the approval of the Secretary of State for India, except in a case of great emergency.

In his report for 1877 the sanitary commissioner for Bengal asserts that the healthiest period of the year in that presidency is the hot weather, when atmospheric conditions have but little influence on the spread of small-pox, and the unhealthiest is the drying season, when cholera and fever prevail with great severity. The population consisted of 59,993,332 persons, a little more than half of which were females; the number of births registered was 1,000,061, and deaths, 1,077,601. In cases of bad diarrhoea and vomiting, which often assumed a choleraic type, santonine was found to be a great remedy, and the hill people at Kalimpong, near Darjiling, during the cholera epidemic in 1876, never failed of a morning to surround the missionary and an assistant surgeon for the drug, the beneficial effects of which became so well known to them, and young and old in turn were accordingly closed. Leprosy is most prevalent in the two thanas, Phoorunbaree and Burobaree, lying between the rivers Dhurla and Teesta, and regarding it as due to a contagium or communicable germ, the sanitary commissioner mentions 33 cases in which the persons lived in the same house with other lepers before getting it, and in four of these there was cohabitation with leprous individuals prior to the attack. In one instance a woman, whose parents were not leprous, got leprosy from her husband; after his death she came to live with her brother, who got it as well within a year, and in six years three other persons in neighbouring houses were likewise affected.

THE difficulty of procuring veracious administrative returns has been illustrated in the annual reports on crime and police in the Bombay Presidency. The Government resolution states that in the northern division, in some districts, and notably in Kaira, the practice has prevailed of preparing the Annual Police Returns so as to exhibit results most favourable to the police. The information given by Mr. Lockie as to the procedure adopted in the Kaira District leaves no ground for a reasonable doubt on this point. When the police failed altogether to detect a crime or to effect an arrest efforts seem to have been made to obtain a magisterial declaration that no crime had been committed, thus removing from the police all responsibility for failure. When complaint of the commission of a crime was made, if its detection appeared difficult, and no clue was speedily discovered, the ingenuity of the police officers was directed towards the setting forth of reasons to induce a magistrate, generally a second or third class native magistrate, to authorise the offence being struck off the register as "no crime." It further appears that even when a case had been sent up for trial by the police, if the accused persons were acquitted by the magistrate, the endeavour of the superintendent of police was to discover a pretext on which a magistrate might be urged to declare that no offence had been committed at all. It resulted that in Kaira 3,685 cognisable cases were reported, of which 2,274 were struck off as "no crime," and 30 per cent. of the persons arrested do not figure in the returns. The Kaira police, instead of being complimented, are to have a thorough investigation made into their ingenious method of enhancing their own character for efficiency and misleading the Government.

THE actual loss on the Secretary of State bills on India from April 1 to Nov. 30 has been Rs.2,20,69,818, which is Rs.24,63,564 above the estimated loss.

AT the close of 1871 the municipality of Bombay was so involved that Government was obliged to advance 16 lakhs of rupees to wipe out the accumulated debt. Since that period there has been a yearly improvement, and in 1874 the house assessment and water rate were reduced  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., and at the same time the municipality has reduced its debt, commenced and partly provided for the costly works of water extension and drainage now in progress, besides other permanent useful works. The estimates for 1879 have just been passed, and the city may be congratulated on the satisfactory condition of its finances, for the cash balance in hand on the first day of the new year is estimated at Rs.4,65,000, and the ordinary income for the year at Rs.31,41,850, or a total of Rs.36,06,850. Of this amount the largest item of return is that from the "Consolidated Rate" at 9 per cent., being the equivalent of 5 per cent. for house assessment, 2 per cent. for police, and 2 per cent. for lighting rate, viz., Rs.9,73,200; town duties yield Rs.6,10,000; the water rate Rs.3,45,000; and markets Rs.2,16,800. Among the items are contributions from Government, direct and indirect, amounting to Rs.4,34,500, besides a considerable sum annually as water rate, and the pensions to the police force of the city. The Government payments altogether amount to 13 per cent. of the city revenues. The grant for regular charges amounts in all to Rs.29,91,606, including Rs.7,16,380 for the payment of interest and sinking fund of the Vehar Waterworks debt, the loans of 1867, 1868 and 1869 and the new consolidated loan. A proof of the ability and care with which the finances have been managed is afforded by the fact that, although during the past four years it has been necessary to raise 42 lakhs from the new water works and surface drainage and 27 lakhs for main drainage—69 lakhs in all—the amount required to be budgetted for next year to meet charges for "debt" is Rs.19,000 less than during the current year.

A DIFFERENCE has arisen between the Governor of Cyprus and the German Consul at Larnaca, who also represents Italy, which involves a nice point of international law. Col. White, Commissioner of Larnaca, lately refused to recognise some judicial act of the officer referred to, and the question to be settled is how far foreign consuls in Cyprus, which still forms an integral part of the Turkish Empire, retain the powers granted them by the Capitulations in view of the peculiar conditions under which England holds the island. The subject, according to the Roman Riforma, is under the consideration of our Ambassador at Rome, and the President of the Council, Signor Depretis.

WARREN HASTINGS.*

FEW periods in the annals of India are more familiarly known than the stirring and eventful years during which Warren Hastings presided over the destinies of the British Empire in the East. The brilliant genius of Macaulay has immortalised the chapter of history which records the deeds of Clive, the soldier, and his contemporary, Hastings, the civilian. Nay more, the tale of the fiery eloquence of Burke and the unrivalled oratory of Sheridan during the trial of the great proconsul—perhaps the most magnificent declamations which have ever resounded within the walls of the National Council Chamber—has been repeated in well nigh every home throughout the land. The story of Warren Hastings's life has, moreover, been told in minute detail by Mr. Gleig, and histories teem with the deeds of the first of the distinguished array of statesmen who in the capacity of Governor General of India have steered the ship of State through the troublous shoals of Oriental diplomacy. What, then, is the need of a further biography of a man whose career is as "familiar in our mouths as household words?" Capt. Trotter himself answers the question: "Mr. Gleig's biography, however rich in sterling value, has few attractions for the mass of readers in these days, while Macaulay's famous essay has charmed the world with a picture in which the lights and shadows are distributed with more regard for scenic effect than for historic justice. The wrong done to Hastings during his lifetime by Burke and other tools of his worst foe, Sir Philip Francis, has been heightened by the wrong which the most popular of English essayists, following in the steps of Mill, has inflicted upon his memory. For one reader of Mr. Gleig's volumes Macaulay's essay counts scores." So Captain Trotter aims at correcting the prevailing estimate of a statesman bearing "one of the greatest names, if not the very greatest, in the annals of British India."

At eighteen years of age Hastings landed in India as a writer in the service of the East India Company, then playing the part of little more than busy traders. "Passing rich" on £15 a-year was the embryo dictator, who in after years found strewed at his feet sums of so fabulous an amount that imagination almost imperceptibly reverts to the fairy tales of youthful days, when money used to rain down in golden streams upon the fortunate good children whom the elf befriended.

Three years elapsed and Hastings learned to what an extent Asiatic cruelty can proceed. The tragedy of the "Black Hole" at Calcutta—an act of atrocity which even now occasions a shudder scarcely less than that to which the memory of the shocking massacre at Cawnpore, during the Mutiny of 1857, gives rise—led to the plunder of every English factory in Bengal, and Hastings, amongst others, found himself a prisoner at Mursheadabad. The signal vengeance wreaked upon the treacherous Suraj-ud-Dowlah by Clive at the famous battle of Plassey is well known, but perhaps few are aware that on that occasion the future Governor General of India shouldered a musket and accompanied his illustrious leader in the victorious march upon Calcutta.

Eleven years after his arrival in India Hastings obtained a seat in the Council of Fort William, and in 1772 was installed as Governor of the presidency. In 1774, under the provisions of Lord North's Bill of 1773, he became Governor General on a salary of £25,000 a-year—a truly princely income; but, as his present biographer says, "evil days were already in store for him:" new councillors were appointed, "for the manifest purpose of shaping the policy of the Indian Government in accordance with the views of Parliament and the Crown." The sequel is well known. Amongst the number so nominated was Philip Francis, who from the moment he touched the shores of India in 1774, till his departure in 1780, endeavoured by every means in his power to thwart and injure his more successful rival. Nor did his malignant efforts cease when he quitted the Council of India. On reaching England he maligned, he misrepresented, he plotted fresh schemes of vengeance, and, sad to relate, was successful. The impeachment and trial of Warren Hastings may be traced to the unceasing efforts of Francis to ruin his opponent. So far as worldly possessions were concerned the object was achieved. The Governor-General was acquitted, after seven years of anxiety and suspense, but he left the Great Hall in Westminster little better than a pauper, scarce knowing whence to get the necessary means to obtain his daily bread. The generosity of the East India Company, whom he had so faithfully served, saved him from want and destitution, and enabled him to maintain himself in comfortable affluence on his estate at Daylesford, the possession of which it had been one great object of his existence to acquire. The account of his life, as depicted in the latter pages of Captain Trotter's work, is interesting as throwing light upon a comparatively unknown portion of the great statesman's career. Passing over the many years of his retirement, a touching incident is recorded in connection with his approaching death. He wrote an appeal to his former masters on behalf of his wife, expressing in pathetic language his dread at leaving "the dearest object of all his mortal concerns in a state of more than comparative indigence," and concluded in a strain that might have melted the heart of the coldest cynic. "My latest prayer," wrote the grey-haired statesman, then bending under the load of eighty-six years, "my latest prayer shall be offered for their service, for the welfare of my beloved country; and for that also of the land whose interests were so long committed to my partial guardianship." Painful it is to record that this deathbed request of a man to whom his country was so much indebted was refused—the Court of Directors were deaf to the entreaty of their dying servant; their decision, however, was not announced during his life, and he passed away in a trustful confidence as to the provision for the being above all others in the world to whom he was so devotedly attached. His death, which occurred on August 22, 1818, is thus touchingly described in the present volume:—"With characteristic delicacy he had drawn a handkerchief over his own face, and when, after a while, the watchers, alarmed by the stillness beneath it, removed the covering, he was dead."

Can it be that this was the man who a quarter of a century since had been charged by Burke with "avarice, rapacity, pride, cruelty, ferocity, malignity of temper, haughtiness, insolence—in short, every thing that manifests a heart blackened to the very blackest, a heart dyed deep in blackness, a heart gangrened to the core?" Can it be that this venerable country gentleman who, even when the taper of life was flickering, soon to be extinguished for ever, thought rather of others than of himself, was the former ruler of a mighty empire, as depicted by Macaulay, who declares him to be deficient in "the two great elements of all social virtue, in respect for the rights of others and in sympathy for the sufferings of others"—a man whose "principles were somewhat lax" and "his heart somewhat hard?" Rather must it be thought that the fiery eloquence of the advocate and the party zeal of the essayist overstepped the bounds of honest criticism, by placing the stamp of infamy upon a statesman who, whatever may have been his faults, "had preserved and extended an empire," and whose "amplitude and fertility of intellect, his rare talents for command, for administration, and for controversy, his dauntless courage, his honourable poverty, his fervent zeal for the interests of the State, his noble equanimity, tried by both extremes of fortune, and never disturbed by either," had drawn forth an expression of admiration even from the critic who in brilliant and incomparable language had hurled against the illustrious statesman the darts of scorn and contumely. Magna est veritas, et prevalebit.

A CHEAP HOLIDAY.*

ECONOMICAL holidays are a frequent desideratum, and the best mode of securing healthful change of scene and thought for body and mind must be a subject of anxious consideration to many an overworked and underpaid clerk who looks forward to his week's holiday. If he will carefully study the experiences of a journeyman who tells us in a pleasant discursive little book how he spent a week in Flanders, and only spent forty-four shillings, he will have his eyes opened to hitherto unimagined possibilities; only he must, according to the author's unconscious showing, be able to speak French, walk twenty miles a-day, and live on very light food. Independently of the practical lesson as to touring possibilities, this little work is fresh and lively, and may teach some travelled tourists truths as to the district described which their own experience has failed to impart to them. Intending imitators have time to practise the necessary qualifications before summer takes them to follow in the track of this pleasant journeyman.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

SOME FEATURES OF THE AFGHAN WAR.

THE present Afghan war is marked by two distinctive features, both significant of the vast growth of British power and prestige in Asia during the last twenty years. One of these is the pronounced and general friendliness with which the advent of our armies is being welcomed in a country where, next to the love of independence, hatred of England was lately supposed to be the dominant feeling in the breasts of the people. Whether among the fanatical and turbulent Pathans of the Khaibar and its neighbourhood; or among the more amicably disposed, if not less warlike, Shikhs of the Kurra Valley; or, again, in the outlandish districts beyond Quetta, the spectacle is the same. Instead of a levee en masse of the tribes to defend their country, or prey upon the infidel invader; instead even of passive obstruction to the advance of our armies, we meet on all sides with friendly greetings and active assistance, and everywhere find the country eager to throw off its allegiance to the Amir. The Pathans are, doubtless, too greedy on the one hand, and too much pre-occupied with tribal feuds on the other, to be really patriotic. Still less could they ever be depended upon to combine for the defence of Afghan independence, as represented by the rule of a particular family at Kabul. If it were otherwise, Afghanistan would be one of the strongest countries in the world. What, however, judging from all past history was to be expected, was that the advance of an invading Indian army into Kabul territory would find some ranged on one side, and some, if by the mere force of polarity, on the other. The actual result so far—and we see no reason to expect that the future course of the war will materially modify it—is that no one outside his own armies is prepared to fire a shot in defence of Sher Ali. On the other hand, all are quite ready to fall upon his beaten and demoralised regiments and strip them to the skin. No doubt, in all this, if there is one word for us, there are two for the tribes themselves; and we may find, by and bye, that they are less eager to pay allegiance to us than to refuse it to the Amir. In the meantime the result is that the Amir's kingdom is crumbling to pieces and falling from him at the mere sound of our horses' hoofs. If the reports that are coming in from Kabul itself are true, this general spirit of disaffection to Sher Ali, and readiness to welcome the English as deliverers, is not confined to the semi-independent tribes, but extends to the more immediate subjects of the Amir.

Partly, it may be, this state of Afghan feeling is due to the extreme unpopularity of Sher Ali, to his cruelty, and to the grinding taxation which he has imposed upon the country; and partly it may be due to the overwhelming force we are employing against him. We are inclined, however, to think that it has also a deeper significance, and one which is much more interesting to ourselves. Since the occupation of the Punjab, British rule has been brought much nearer to Afghanistan, and peaceful intercourse with even the remotest parts of British territory has become much more frequent and constant. The picture it has presented to a people with strong commercial instincts must necessarily have been a tempting one, and one which contrasts most favourably with that with which they are familiar at home. The permanent, or quasi-permanent Afghan population of our large Indian towns has immensely increased during the period to which we are referring, and, with this increase, a full knowledge and keen appreciation of the superior facilities for peaceful trade and the absolute freedom from oppression which characterise British rule, has spread to every bazaar in Afghanistan. On the other side, Russian rule has also been brought nearer to Afghanistan, and, which ever way the choice of their rulers may incline, the people of Afghanistan can hardly have failed to compare it unfavourably with that which they find prevailing on this side of the frontier.

It would not be very surprising, then, if the general population of Kabul have come of late years to feel that independence may be too dearly bought, and to see that, if dependence is a price worth paying for prosperity, that price will be better paid to the wealthier, more civilised, and more humane of the two rival bidders.

The other feature to which we refer, as marking the present war, is perhaps an even more striking and significant one. We refer to the almost universal alacrity of our own feudatories to share in the risks and honours of military operations undertaken in defence of purely imperial interests. Time was when such a contest as that on which we have entered would have been eagerly looked forward to by perhaps the majority of these chiefs as pregnant with possibilities of disaster to our arms, and chances for the assertion of their own independence. If such feelings exist now, they are at all events comparatively rare.

The subject thus opened up is, however, too large a one to discuss at the close of a leading article, and one the consideration of which may perhaps be advantageously deferred for a season.—Englishman.

THE ATTACK ON ALI MUSJID.

THE Englishman gives the following circumstantial account of that portion of the attack on Ali Musjid in which Major Birch and Lieutenant Fitzgerald were killed, and Captain Maclean, as it proved, mortally wounded. The account is based on the narrative of an officer who was present:—

"Early in the day a few men of the 14th Sikhs, about sixty in number, under Captain Maclean, of the regiment, had been ordered across a small stream which runs through the Khaibar. As there were some four guns posted on a hill on our flank, which were keeping up a brisk fire and had begun doing a little execution, the general commanding the 3rd brigade came to this officer, and said, 'You see those guns on that hill; I have orders to take them.' He was asked if the 14th Sikhs were to advance and do so, but answered, 'No; the 81st Regiment are coming up; they will lead, and we will give the enemy a taste of the Martini.' After some time, the 81st Regiment not appearing, the 14th Sikhs were ordered to advance, supported by two companies of the 21st Punjab Infantry, the general saying he would follow with the whole of the 81st Regiment. This small force arrived without any casualty at the foot of the hill where the guns were posted, and some 300 yards from them. Three men were there wounded, and the officer in command determined to make a dash for some rocks half way up, which having reached, he would be, with his men, comparatively safe. Before doing so he asked Major Birch, who was commanding the two companies 27th P.I., and who had Lieutenant Fitzgerald, the adjutant, with him, if he would support him in a rush on the guns, and was answered in the affirmative. The rocks were reached safely and with no very great loss, though the force had to run the gauntlet of a very heavy fire from in front and one flank. Captain Maclean then turned round and called out to Major Birch to come on, and, whilst doing so, was wounded, but not severely, through the shoulder. Major Birch started to come, accompanied by some men, but had only advanced a few yards when he was shot dead. Lieutenant Fitzgerald followed with a few more and reached the rocks safely. In a short time they received an order to retire, as the General said it had been settled not to assault that night. Captain Maclean promptly did so, sending a few men at a time, as the fire from the enemy above was incessant and very true, and they reached the spot before alluded to, where three men had been first wounded, with a loss of four more. It was here that Lieutenant Fitzgerald was first slightly wounded, and almost immediately a second shot hit him, killing him dead. The correspondent from whose narrative these details are taken, says:—'You can imagine how heavy the firing must have been when, out of not more than sixty men of the 14th Sikhs, 1 officer was wounded, 5 havildars and 4 sepoys killed outright, and 17 others wounded, some dangerously; and of the two companies of the 27th P. I., a few of whom only reached the rocks, 2 officers and 4 men were killed and 10 wounded; or a total of killed and wounded of 43. Some one, I fancy, was to blame for not having recalled the force sooner, when it was known that the attack would not take place that night, but who, is as yet not known. Otherwise Ali Musjid might have been taken with the loss of only some 10 or 15 killed and wounded, instead of four times that number.'

BENGAL, UPPER INDIA, &c.

THE LIEUT. GOVERNOR'S VISIT TO SIKKIM.—This visit and the friendly advice which His Honour gave to the young Rajah and the Lamas and Cazees of Sikkim there gathered together has been productive of the very best results, as the young Rajah was reconciled with the dignitaries and people of his country, and the disputes between them, which promised to become very serious, were amicably settled, and a deed of compromise was drawn up and signed by all concerned. The Lieut. Governor also took advantage of his visit to this part of the district to discuss with the Deputy Commissioner and the chief head men of villages, and decide on the spot the principles on which the trans-Teesta portion of British Sikkim should be settled.—Darjeeling News.

AKYAB.—The Arrakan News says that during the recent visit, on tour, of Mr. Aitchison, Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, to Akyab, he enquired into the working of the local administration, and found matters in a very creditable state; and it was no doubt to give expression to their sense of relief from existing doubts on this score that the European residents of the town gave Mr. Aitchison a dinner at the club before he left.—Indian Daily News.

MEMORANDUM BY THE HEALTH OFFICER.—The births registered in October were 653. They exceeded those of the previous month by 80. The average number of the decade was 573. The death-rate of October was 36·3 per 1,000 of population per annum, against 33·3 in the preceding month. This increase is chiefly due to deaths from fever and bowel complaints. The total deaths exceeded all the years of the past decade except 1868, 1875, and 1877. Cholera proved fatal to 34 persons—a number which shows a reduction on the corresponding month of all the years of the decennial statement except 1873 and 1874, and is nearly one-fifth of the fatal cases in 1877. The progressive increase in deaths from fever noticed in the last report was maintained in the month under review. The total deaths were 576, which exceeded the September number by 54, and is considerably above the average of the decade. Dysentery and diarrhoea caused 183 deaths, against 132 in the previous month. The number recorded in the corresponding month of 1877 was 170. Small-pox declined from 14 in September to 11 in October. The deaths from diseases registered as "other causes" declined by 17, as compared with the corresponding month of 1877, but exceeded considerably the mean number of the last ten years. The ratio of total deaths among infants was 365·8 per 1,000 per annum on estimated births. Among the different races the mortality was as follows:—Hindoos, 357·7; Mahomedans, 445·3; mixed races, 253·1; and non-Asiatics, 59·2.—Calcutta Paper.

RETIREMENT OF THE SURVEYOR-GENERAL.—We hear that, unless special arrangements can be made with the present Surveyor-General, Col. J. T. Walker, he is likely to take advantage of the new retirement scheme. It is to be earnestly hoped the Government of India will secure his services for a few years longer; it would be a great and ir retrievable loss to the whole department, and to the country generally, if he were allowed to retire. In connection with the surveys, we understand that General D. C. Vanrenen, the Superintendent of the Revenue Survey, leaves this country in January next, after a service of forty years and six months.—Indian Daily News.

THE RAJAH OF HILL TIPPERAH.—Mr. Peacock, the Commissioner of Dacca, will shortly proceed to Hill Tipperah, to present to his Highness the Maharajah the banner which the Viceroy has sent for his Highness, in commemoration of the Imperial Assemblage of January, 1877. He will, on the occasion, invest him with the title of Maharajah.—Indian Daily News.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—It is reported that the agent of the East Indian Railway has issued a circular, warning all employés in the office against communicating with the Press, the penalty in case of detection to be instant dismissal. We hope the agent will empower one of his subordinates to act as a Press Commissioner, because there is a great deal of information connected with the railway which, in the interests of the public, the Press should hear of. We cordially acknowledge having received every assistance on direct application to the head office for information on any subject, but in the interests of the railway, as well as the public, it would be well for the office to take the initiative in cases of accidents, detention of mails, &c.—Indian Daily News.

MEETINGS OF COMPANIES.—The general meeting of the Bowreah Cotton Mills Co., was held in Calcutta on Nov. 27. The directors' report was adopted, and resolutions passed as follows:—That of the amount at credit of profit and loss account, Rs. 39,508-15-11, the sum of Rs. 5,000 be applied towards reduction of the addition and improvement account, and that the balance Rs. 34,508-15-11 be carried forward. That the secretaries' offer to return one-half of the commissions earned by them during the half-year, viz., Rs. 6,981-6-0, which rather more than covers the loss on the half-year's working, be accepted with thanks.—Englishman.

THE BURMA TREATY.—A Rangoon paper states that though the Government has allowed the retention, in the new treaty with the Court of Mandalay, of the clause relating to the supply of arms and ammunition to the King, the total import will be restricted to 5,000 stand of arms.—Times of India.

THE SINDHIA STATE RAILWAY.—Good progress is being made with this line between Lae Bagh station and Dholpur, and it is nearly completed as far as the Chambal; but the bridge over that river cannot be finished for some time, which will delay the opening for through traffic.—Times of India.

ROADLESS DEFALCATIONS.—The Hindoo Patriot understands that the Government of Bengal have recommended that Mr. Stevens be mulcted Rs. 25,000 on account of the Nuddea Roadless defalcations committed by Beni Gopal Mookerjee.—Times of India.

The Government of India have sanctioned the grant of Rs. 3,700 for discovering and preserving the records of ancient Sanscrit literature in the North West Provinces and Oudh.—Times of India.

PATENTS.—Specifications of the undermentioned inventions have been filed in the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department:—Mr. George Westinghouse, jun., 20, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London, for improvements in apparatus for working brakes on railway trains by fluid pressure; Mr. William Jackson, 3, King-street, Cheapside, London, for improvements in apparatus for drying tea leaves; Mr. George Reid, Noa Kacharee, Yor-hat, Assam, for an improved apparatus for the production and preparation of broken teas.—Times of India.

BURMESE EDUCATION.—At a recent scholarship examination in Rangoon a candidate replied to the question, "What is liberty of the subject?" "To be able to eat as much as you liked of a good dinner." At a former examination a lad defined the chief feeders of the Irrawaddy as tigers, elephants, karens, and alligators.—Rangoon Paper.

PUNJAB POLICE.—The Secretary of State has approved of the appointment as an emergent arrangement, experimentally for six months, of an assistant to the inspector-general of police in the Punjab, half the cost of the appointment being defrayed from provincial funds.

THE THANKS OF GOVERNMENT WELL EARNED.—The following letter has been addressed to Miss Blackmar, of the American Zenana Mission in Lucknow, by his Honour Sir George Couper:—"From Sir George Couper, Bart., C.B., K.C.S.I., Lieutenant Governor North West Provinces, and Chief Commissioner for Oudh, to Miss Blackmar. Dated, camp, Lucknow, Nov. 14, 1878. Madam,—I beg to tender you my cordial thanks for the great and invaluable assistance you have rendered to the city magistrate and the local committee of Lucknow in carrying out their measures for the relief of the distress caused by the recent scarcity. You kindly undertook to distribute the sum that was allotted for the relief of purdah-nashin ladies, and have discharged this duty faithfully and judiciously for a year. The labour it entailed was arduous, but you have grudged neither time nor trouble, and have given invaluable assistance, which the committee from time to time have brought to my notice, and which merits the grateful thanks which I venture to offer herewith for your acceptance.—Your obedient servant, GEORGE COUPER, Lieutenant Governor North West Provinces, and Chief Commissioner for Oudh."—Lucknow Times.

OPIMUM SALE.—The result of the opium sale held at the Government Saleroom on Dec. 2, was as follows:—Behar, 2,500 chests, for Rs.30,02,100; Benares, 2,000 chests, for Rs.22,54,675.—Indian Daily News.

CALCUTTA HOSPITALS.—The report of the committee appointed by Sir Ashley Eden to report on the administration of our public hospitals will no doubt bring to light many instances of extravagance and wastefulness in these institutions by subordinates under lax supervision. In the meantime it has been left for a medical witness to furnish some impartial testimony in this matter. This gentleman, a native house surgeon of the Sealdah Hospital, stated to the court that whoever "sought for" admission into the hospital was admitted into it; but that, if it were found a day or two after that he was not suffering from any disease he was discharged, "after being fed till he was fit to go out." The practice certainly seems to be more like that of a poor-house or strangers' home than that of an hospital.—Indian Daily News.

MADRAS.

THE following notification of the retirement of Sir W. Robinson from the Madras Civil Service appears in the local Gazette:—"The Honourable Sir William Robinson, K.C.S.I., is permitted to resign her Majesty's Civil Service from the 5th instant, and is admitted to an annuity of £1,000 payable in England from and including that date. In announcing the retirement of Sir William Robinson from the service of which he has been so long a distinguished member, and in which he has held the most important posts, his Grace the Governor in Council desires to place on record the high sense which the Government entertain of the service rendered by Sir William Robinson through his long career, and of the valuable aid and advice which they have invariably received from him at the council board. All honours and privileges attached to the office of member of council will be continued to Sir William Robinson until his departure from this presidency."

NAUTICAL ASSESSORS.—Referring to the question of remuneration to be granted to commanders and engineers of the mercantile marine, not in the service of Government, when summoned to attend as nautical assessors at a Marine Court in the Madras Presidency, the Government of India is said to have decided that a fee of Rs.25 shall be payable to them for each day's attendance at such courts.—Indian Daily News.

A POPULAR IDOL.—The native inhabitants of Madras have subscribed Rs.50,000 (£5,000) to be devoted to purchasing a crown of precious stones for a popular idol, rejoicing in the euphonious name of Parthasarathy Paroomal.—Bombay Gazette.

RIOT AT ANJENGO.—Mr. Wilkins, the joint magistrate of Cochin, left recently for Anjengo, in consequence of information having been received that a serious riot had taken place there. It would appear that both Mr. Wilkins and the district magistrate received telegraphic advices from Anjengo about the riot, and the latter telegraphed to Mr. Wilkins to take such precautions as might be necessary, at once. It would appear that the rioters are native Christians, and it is said that the injuries received by some of them are of a fatal nature. The riot originated from some Church disputes, but we are not in possession of any authentic intelligence direct from the place.—Cochin Argus.

STAR OF INDIA.—There is some talk of having a Star of India investiture in Madras on January 1. The three officers nominated Companions of the Order for their service during the famine are Colonel Drever, acting inspector general of police, Mr. Davidson, C.S., and Mr. Garstin, C.S.—Times of India.

DISMISSED FOR DRUNKENNESS.—Capt. J. B. Gahan, Madras Staff Corps, has been tried by court-martial and dismissed the service for drunkenness.—Times of India.

MYSORE ORPHANS.—Three thousand orphans, the result of the famine in Mysore, have been handed over to the different orphanages established in the province. The total for the Bangalore district alone is given at 1,464, of which 660 are under the Roman Catholic mission. Miss Anstey has 580 orphans in Kolar.—Times of India.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO MAJOR DESBOROUGH, R.A.—Major S. H. Desborough, R.A., lately commanding the C Battery 6th Brigade of the Royal Artillery, met his death on December 4 by a sad accident. He was riding a high-spirited horse which he had been endeavouring of late to break in. A native who met the major crossing Marmalong bridge reports that he was riding near a herd of buffaloes that was also crossing the bridge. It is supposed that close by the Guindy end of the bridge the horse shied, and came in contact with one of the buffaloes, and that horse and rider fell. Major Desborough seems to have fallen on his head and been stunned, so that he was probably ignorant of the injuries inflicted on him by the buffalo, which gored his legs. He was found about six o'clock lying insensible in the road, and was taken at once to the Artillery Mess at the Mount. Medical assistance was immediately obtained, and Major Desborough was at this time sufficiently conscious to be able to say that he would prefer to be taken home. Here his wounds were dressed; though severe they were not at first considered of a fatal character. But the head wound was a serious one, and resulted in death in a few hours. The deceased officer had only just obtained the rank of major, and was looking forward to joining the Afghan expedition in command of a battery. He was very popular with his brother officers, among whom his sad and untimely end has caused a painful impression. He was buried yesterday evening at St. Thomas' Mount with full military honours.—Madras Mail, Dec. 6.

SHERIFF OF MADRAS.—The appointment of Sheriff of Madras forms every year a subject of much speculation, and the present year has not been an exception. The names of several gentlemen in Madras were mentioned in connection with the appointment and their claims freely discussed, but when the gazette containing the appointment was published it was found that a "dark horse" had won the prize, Mr. Robert Chillingworth Walker having been appointed Sheriff of Madras for the ensuing year. This appointment has taken the public by surprise, as it is difficult to know for what public services Mr. Walker has been thus honoured.—Madras Times.

ROBINSON PARK.—The northern end of Madras city is to be improved by a recreation ground being provided partly by public subscription at Royapooram, but chiefly through the generosity of Mr. Cunliffe Chetty. It is to be called "The Robinson Park," in honour of Sir William Robinson, K.C.S.I., whose term of office in India closed on the 5th, and who left Madras on the 6th, after having laid the foundation-stone of the proposed park on the 6th—a ceremony attended with considerable eclat.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

PIRATES IN THE PERSIAN GULF.—The following account of the recent engagement, near Bahrein, between pirates and H.M.S. Vulture, is given by a Muscat correspondent. Under orders from the Political Resident at Bushire, H.M.S. Vulture left for Bahrein, on Oct. 4, to inflict certain fines on the head men of that island for an infraction of the treaty of 1861. On her arrival there it was reported that all intercourse with El Katif was suspended, and also that the Bedouin Arabs, to the number of 3,000, beleaguered the town. On receipt of this information Captain Pringle decided on going to El Katif to open up communication, calling en route at Ras Tinnorah, where there is a small fort, occupied by Turkish soldiers. Here he was informed that several dhows had attacked them a few days before, but were driven off, and that their supply of stores was exhausted. After provisioning the garrison he left for an anchorage off Tirhoot. Observing twenty dhows there, he left, in pursuit, in his whaler, with Lieuts. Jauncey and Carey in charge of two cutters, manned and armed. On reaching and searching them they were found to be fishing boats. The boats then made for El Katif, arriving after most laborious work. Captain Pringle communicated with the governor of the place, by whom he was cordially welcomed. In the afternoon, the boats, towing fifty Turkish soldiers, in flats, proceeded down the coast towards a fleet of dhows seen in the distance, some five miles off, where they found on arrival three hundred more soldiers waiting on the beach to co-operate with them and prevent any attempt, if made, of a landing. The dhows were boarded, and the crews proved to be only fishermen. The soldiers were sent back, and the boats returned next morning to the ship at Tirhoot. Next day, Captain Pringle, having received information from the Governor of El Katif, of the presence of a considerable fleet of piratical dhows in the neighbourhood of Ras Tinnorah, weighed anchor, and proceeded to that place with all despatch. Sighting the dhows close to the shore, and finding that soundings would not permit of his going further, he anchored, sending away for the second time the manned and armed boats, he himself accompanying them. The weather at this time was, in sailor parlance, "blowing halt a gale," but the boats, under close reefs and a leading wind, soon shortened the distance between them. On approaching the shore, six of the largest dhows set their sails and stood for the boats, intending to show fight; on seeing which, the boats "down masts" and cleared for action. This was the signal for the dhows (and the crews of many others who lined the beach) to open fire on the approaching boats, who, in no way daunted by their number and well-sustained fusillade, quickly returned the fire, forcing the crews to abandon their dhows and swim on shore, from whence they kept up a continuous fire. The shrapnel and rockets, the boats replied to them with, rather surprised them, and they broke, retreating behind the trees, carrying with them their dead and wounded. Of the former it was ascertained there were thirty-four, and of the latter eighty-five. Luckily the boats suffered no loss. They then proceeded to take possession of the dhows, twenty in number, cutting their cables, and placing a Jack in each to navigate as best he might the prizes to El Katif. Two flats, laden with Turkish soldiers, hove in sight when the scrimmage was over. Out of courtesy to them one dhow was handed over. Half an hour afterwards she was seen in flames and burnt to the water's edge. The following day Captain Pringle landed at El Katif and made over the dhows to the Governor of that port, who was profuse in his thanks for the aid rendered by the boats of H.M.S. Vulture in thus ridding him of these piratical marauders. The captured dhows belonged to the tribe of Amayed, who had long been noted for their buccaneering propensities along the Arab coast.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PUNA HORSE SHOW.—On the report of the Puna Horse Show for 1878, by G. Norman, Esq., collector, and honorary secre-

Government have passed the following resolution:—"Government consider that Mr. Norman has correctly summarised the results of the horse show at Puna in 1878 in the concluding paragraph of his report, where he remarks that 'the show was a success. A fair number of well-shaped and useful animals was exhibited, while their condition left nothing to be desired. It is true that nearly all were too small for military purposes, but it must be remembered that these shows have only recently been established, and it will take many years of careful attention and good feeding before the size of the country-bred horse can be increased. The results hitherto arrived at are encouraging, and if the present experiment be persevered in the country-bred horses will undoubtedly gradually improve.' Much of the success attained hitherto is due to the energy of Mr. Norman himself and the gentlemen associated with him on the committee, and to them the thanks of Government are due for the care and attention which they have given to the subject. It is satisfactory to notice that the fund presents a credit balance of Rs.2,240-2-2."—Bombay Gazette.

INSPECTION OF STEAM BOILERS.—A recent Government Gazette published a bill entitled "To amend the law for the Periodical Inspection and the Management by competent Engineers of Steam Boilers and Prime Movers in the Presidency of Bombay." The scope of its provisions is shown in the following statement of "objects and reasons":—"The fees leviable under Bombay Act V. of 1873 are found not to yield sufficient revenue to enable Government to provide efficiently for giving effect to the requirements of the Act, and the scale of fees is stated to work unfairly, because the prime charge for inspection is made to the owner of a small concern worked by steam-power as to a company whose property is worth perhaps lakhs of rupees. Again, the absence of any provision for checking the working of boilers at a higher pressure than that allowed by the inspector's certificate is found to be a serious obstacle to the exercise of efficient control over the owners and engineers in charge of such boilers. Part III. of the Act has also given rise to difficulties. The examiners have considered that alleged efficient service merely, without any personal test of the candidate's qualifications, is not a safe ground upon which to award a certificate of competency as engineer. They have also thought it necessary that certificates of competency should be of different classes, according to the candidates' respective qualifications, which are found to be of very varying degrees. It is also proposed to extend the provisions of the new Act to all boilers and to repeal so much of the existing Act as relates to the inspection of prime movers, but to take power to extend the new Act to prime movers, in any place or district, if at any future period it should be deemed desirable to do so. Provision has also been made to punish abuse of power by an inspector, and to increase the penalty for a frivolous appeal from Rs.50 to Rs.150.

CEYLON.

LEAF DISEASE.—It is satisfactory to hear that the average yield of the central estates in the Dimbula and Dickoya districts are as much as 7 cwt. the acre. But we are able to cite not merely districts to the immediate south of Kandy, and in the Central Province, but far away in another province, in the Rakwana district, where leaf disease has been rife throughout the season, where fields have been bereft of every leaf, the ages of the estates ranging from a dozen years up to thirty-five; we hear of crops ranging from six to nine and even twelve cwt. the acre. It is clear, from these facts, that the coffee pest is not necessarily fatal to either tree or crop. Whether the minute destroying insect found preying on the spores of the smitten leaves, or whether the newly suggested sulphur treatment, by digging it amongst the roots and sprinkling it over the leaves, may succeed in arresting and subduing the plague, has yet to be seen.—Ceylon Times.

A RATNAPURA correspondent of the Ceylon Times writes:—"I must not omit to give you news of the largest blue sapphire that man ever saw. It was found last Saturday by two lads of the Padua caste, who were digging in one of their fields. It weighs 2½ lb. nearly, is well-shaped, and is of pretty good colour, free of the white kowango, but having some flaws. Ratnapura lapidaries who have had the fortune to behold this monster stone value it at a figure which would astonish your readers, and it is now in the possession of a certain chief, who had the good fortune to obtain it at a moderate price."

CHINA CONVERTS.—The Town Church of Rangoon was the scene on a recent Sunday morning of an extremely interesting ceremony. The Bishop of the Diocese has now held a confirmation, when twenty-seven of these men reappeared in the church to confirm their baptismal vow, and renew their solemn profession of faith; having meanwhile been, as we are informed, most regular attendants every Sunday morning at the Chinese services held in the chapel of St. John's College.—Rangoon Times.

THE LATE PRINCESS ALICE.

A SUPPLEMENT to the London Gazette contains the following:—

“WHITEHALL, DECEMBER 27.

“OSBORNE, DECEMBER 26.

“The Queen is anxious to take the earliest opportunity of expressing publicly her heartfelt thanks for the universal and most touching sympathy shown to her by all classes of her loyal and faithful subjects on the present occasion when it has pleased God to call away from this world her dearly-beloved daughter the Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse. Overwhelmed with grief at the loss of a dear child, who was a bright example of loving tenderness, courageous devotion, and self-sacrifice to duty, it is most soothing to the Queen's feelings to see how entirely her grief is shared by her people. The Queen's deeply-afflicted son-in-law, the Grand Duke of Hesse, is also anxious to make known his sincere gratitude for the kind feelings expressed towards himself and his dear children in their terrible bereavement, and his gratification at the appreciation shown by the people of England of the noble and endearing qualities of her whom all now mourn. Seventeen years ago, at this very time, when a similar bereavement crushed the Queen's happiness and this beloved and lamented daughter was her great comfort and support, the nation evinced the same touching sympathy, as well as when, in December, 1871, the Prince of Wales was at the point of death. Such an exhibition of true and tender feeling will ever remain engraven on the Queen's heart, and is the more to be valued at this moment of great distress in the country, which no one more deeply deplores than the Queen herself.”

LESSONS OF THE PAST.

We have little doubt that our readers will, when they peruse these lines, have received full confirmation of the reported revolution in Kabul. We assume that Shere Ali is now the ex-Ameer; that his son has, partially at least, succeeded to the vacated throne, and that he has arrived in Jellalabad in order to bring to a conclusion the invasion of his country. Prefaced as our attack on Afghanistan was by the announcement that with the Ameer alone our just quarrel was to be waged, it will be the welcome duty of the Government of India to re-establish peace. There is no reason for discussing the question whether or no it will be advisable to adopt a pretender to the throne. We may be sure that the mistake of attempting to hold the country by means of a Mohmund faction, against which any other tribes may be inclined to rebel, or to impose an unwelcome ruler on a reluctant people, will not be repeated. It must be established that the Ameer has abdicated, not retreated, to try and gather troops or maintain an empty pretendership in Russian Turkestan. It must further be by the assent of the Sirdars that Yakoob Khan, if he is to be the acknowledged Ameer, succeeds to his father's seat. It has not been the object of the war to support one candidate against another or sow discord among the branches of the Barukzye family and the Ameer, and the purposes of our policy will not be accomplished by arousing the evil demon of civil war. History has repeated itself. The forgotten lessons of the events which occurred forty, we may say fifty, years ago have been relearned and applied. As the Shah of Persia found his error out, when acting in obedience to Russian inspiration, and relying on Russian promises, he was reduced to be a cat's-paw, and retreated sorely burned, so now the Ameer, relying on mere shadowy promises, and far less substantial assistance, has learned that to adopt the policy of Russia is to incur chastisement at the hands of England and be left unsuccoured in his hour of need. On our side, also, the former lessons of the past have been repeated. England has learned for the third time that a European Power, whether actually hostile or provident for possible war, can at all events menace and disturb India from the side, and, so to speak, under the covert, of Afghanistan. In 1805 “the supineness of the British Indian Government,” to quote Sir John Kaye's words, “contrasted with the energetic liberality of the French Government,” threw Persia, dreading the advance of Russia, into the alliance which she had rejected. The fears and visions of either side soon indeed vanished, the threatened invasion of the Company's territories was but a passing dream in the conquering career of Napoleon; but the lesson that the neighbours we refused to help would, in fear, become the auxiliaries of our enemies, was complete, though soon forgotten.” Thirty years later the dreaded Russian and the dreading Persian were united in purpose; to quote Kaye again, “there was a Persian army investing Herat and threatening to march upon Kandahar and Kabul; there were Russian diplomatists and Russian engineers in the camp directing the councils of the Shah and the operations of the siege. Far out in the distance beyond the mountains of the Hindu Kush there was the shadow of a great Northern army, tremendous in its indistinctness, sweeping across the wilds and deserts of Central Asia towards the frontiers of Hindustan.” Not only so, but a Russian envoy at Kabul was making the best use of the result of the cold discouragement with which Dost Mahomed's entreaties for British aid against his rivals had been received. We need not repeat how this Russo-Persian scheme collapsed; how Simonich was indeed declared to have acted without directions, although only giving assistance, as was natural, to a friendly monarch; how Vikovich, whose diplomacy had been of a more pronounced hostility to England, was disowned as an adventurer, and shot himself in despair. The uneasiness, the alarm, felt throughout India was none the less real because proved groundless; the sense of insecurity not less acute because no danger tested its grounds. For the third time the rivalry of Russia with England and her advance in Central Asia has resulted in similar diplomacy on her part, in similar alienation of our quondam ally, in a parallel defiance of British power on his part, and a corresponding collapse of diplomacy and defiance combined. The danger which first seemed to menace the south-west borders had grown near, and loomed large on our north-western frontier. For the time it is checked. The Russian embassy has been recalled. The Russian journals, which loudly proclaimed vague assurances of aid to their Afghan friend, now recommend economical attention to the internal and social development of their own country. Normal schools are established in Turkestan; peace and prosperity are to be cultivated; and no thought of further conquest or menace is to be permitted to dwell even in the minds of Kauffmann and Stolietoff. The Ameer has found no aid, is a fugitive, and, it may be, an encumbrance to his useless friends. It is nothing to us whether he has obtained an asylum in Tashkent or not; no extradition will be insisted on. As an enemy he proved a bugbear; as a pretender, kept in hand for future use, he is not worth a moment's consideration.

But we shall have learned nothing, shall have forgotten much, if we do not now, once for all, so secure not only our frontier, but the State that lies beyond it, as to prevent, so far as may be, the recurrence of such intrusive diplomacy, of such opportune diversions, executed on our Indian frontier to influence our policy in the European councils. In another column will be found an interesting article from an Indian contemporary which shows that among other changes which time has brought about is the great difference in the feelings of the Afghans towards their English neighbours. Notwithstanding all the revilings of our Indian administration that we are wont to hear from certain oracles, it seems that there is an envious admiration of the advantages possessed by those who dwell under the oppressive and ruinous raj of the Feringhi. This does not, of course, apply to those highlandmen whose hand is against every man; whose only notion of industry is brigandage, and on whom we must now, once for all, inculcate the wholesome lessons of fear.

When the Chancellor endeavoured to show the conditions of the Afghan question by his illustration drawn from Scotland he might have elaborated it still further by reference to the old state of things beyond the Highland line. These mountain borderers, with their hereditary claims for black mail and passion for plundering, will have to learn that these habits must be cast aside. But, beyond them, the frontier must be secured, and covered by a friendly but dependent State. We need not repeat the warnings of the Nestor of Central Asian politics, that Kandahar must not be left open to be the prey of an invader or the capital of a faction. If the more northern passes into Chitral and Ghilgit are to be included in the ward of our vassal chief of Cashmere, the lessons of the past must teach us to keep, at all events, within reach of aid the long-coveted Herat. Afghanistan cannot be, for the future, left alone. If submissive, she must be protected, and "peace with honour" assured to her rulers. As the late Ameer has learned that, if defiant, his strength of resistance is nothing, the present should be assured that the protection and aid of England is no less certain than her power to punish.

HOME NEWS.

General Sir Edward Johnson, K.C.B., has left England for India, to relieve General Sir Neville Chamberlain, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., on the Council of the Governor General.

Lieut. General R. Strachey, C.S.I., is expected in London next month from India, to rejoin the Council of the India Office, after a year's absence on a special mission. The General has lately been temporarily employed on the Council of the Governor General.

PROF. MONIER WILLIAMS, who fractured his right arm at the wrist while skating in the gardens of Worcester College on Saturday, Dec. 21, is making good progress towards recovery, although he suffered great pain for several days. The professor was formerly a member of the London Skating Club, and is a well-known skater. He was practising a new figure when one of his skates caught in a crack.—Athenaeum.

WAR MATERIAL FOR INDIA.—A battery of 6.3 inch howitzers on a new principle of construction has been ordered to be prepared in the Royal Gun Factories, Woolwich Arsenal, for the Afghan expedition. A plan has been tried with the experimental 80-ton gun of firing studless shot from a poly-grooved bore, in lieu of the Woolwich studded projectile (of either shot or shell) from grooved ordnance, and the result has been greater steadiness and smoothness of shot during its flight. The new improved Afghan battery will be ready for the renewed operations in the spring, and will consist of shallow poly-grooved rifled mountain guns for studless projectiles, with a gas check behind, of soft metal, giving a rotation to the shot, as well as sealing the windage.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for a nominal amount of £300,000 in bills on India were received on Dec. 24 at the Bank of England, the whole of which was allotted to Calcutta at an average rate of 1s. 6.75d. Tenders on that presidency at 1s. 6¾d. will receive about 99 per cent. After submitting to a depreciation of 2¼ per cent. compared with the rates obtained three weeks ago, the council have been enabled to sell the whole of the amount of bills offered. In the face of this unsatisfactory sort of success, the council propose on Jan. 1 to increase the drawings by about 33 per cent., the amount to be then offered being 40 lacs of rupees, of which not more than 1,500,000 rupees will be drawn on Bombay.

THE PUNJAB NATIVE CONTINGENT AND ITS COMMANDANT.—The timely and loyal offer of the native princes of the Punjab to supply a contingent to the British army in Afghanistan has been accepted by the Viceroy of India, and the command of this auxiliary force has been entrusted to Brigadier-General John Watson, C.B., V.C. In entrusting the command of such a column of Sikh troops to General John Watson, the Commander-in-Chief has shown great discernment of character, for General Watson possesses the very qualifications necessary for the command of an army drawn from somewhat inconsistent elements. No man knows better how to deal with the petty jealousies of petty states than General Watson, for he combines in one the skill of the diplomatist and the bravery of a soldier. His six or seven years' service in the civil department of the Central Indian Agency has given him the one, whilst the deep scar on his face and the story of his hand-to-hand combat with a rebel chief in the Indian Mutiny testify to the other. There are few names more honoured among both Englishmen and natives in India than "John Watson;" and it may be anticipated that he will take a prominent place in the future administration of Afghanistan. General Watson entered the Bombay army in 1848, and served with very great distinction in the Indian Mutiny. He was for some time commandant of the 13th Bengal Lancers, a well-known regiment, formerly the 4th Sikh Cavalry. This appointment he resigned in 1871, and entered the political department as officiating resident in Malwa. He has since declined several appointments in the army in consequence of his preference for political work, but the prospect of a European war and active service in the field induced him to take the command of the native cavalry brigade sent to Malta. General Watson's distinguished services to the State have been rewarded with a Companionship of the Bath and an appointment as aide-de-camp to the Queen, whilst his personal bravery won for him the Victoria Cross.—Daily News.

THE INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—The annual general meeting of the corporate members of this chartered body was held on Tuesday, Dec. 17, Mr. Bateman, F.R.S., President, in the chair. The report of the Council stated that during the past session 95 associates had been transferred to the class of members, 56 members and 205 associates had been elected, and 15 members and 42 associates had been removed from the register by death or otherwise. There had thus been an increase of 156 members and 68 associates, together 204, or at the rate of upwards of 7 per cent. on the present gross number of the different classes—namely, 2,815, besides whom there were 500 students attached to the institution. The income had amounted to £10,610 os. 6d., of which more than one-tenth arose from dividends on investments belonging absolutely to the institution. The receipts also comprised a sum of £2,934 1rs. on account of capital, being in respect of life compositions and admission fees, and of £461 3s. 1d. from the Telford, Manby, Miller, and Howard Trust Funds. The nominal, or par, value of the funds belonging to the corporation (including cash at the bankers) was £27,923 2s. 6d., and of the several trust funds £14,506 4s. 6d.; together, £42,429 7s., as against £38,773 4s. 11d. last year. The investments had been increased by the purchase of £3,000 Caledonian Railway 4 per cent. Debenture Stock, and the cash balance was £606 2s. 1d. in excess of what it was on the 30th of November, 1877. The expenditure had been, for house and establishment charges, £4,985 10s. 3d.; for "Minutes of Proceedings," £4,953 8s. 4d.; and for premiums and prizes under trust, £387 5s. 2d. The ballot for Council resulted in the election of Mr. John Frederic Bateman, F.R.S., President; Mr. J. Aternethy, Sir W. G. Armstrong, C.B., F.R.S., Mr. W. H. Barlow, F.R.S., and Mr. J. Brunlees, F.R.S.E., Vice-Presidents; Mr. Baker, Sir J. W. Bazalgette, C.B., Mr. G. Berkley, Mr. F. J. Bramwell, F.R.S., Mr. G. B. Bruce, Sir John Coode, Mr. W. Froude, M.A., F.R.S., Mr. A. Giles, M.P., Mr. H. Hayter, Mr. W. Pole, F.L.S., Mr. R. Rawlinson, C.B., Mr. C. W. Siemens, F.R.S., Mr. D. Stevenson, F.R.S.E., Sir Joseph Whitworth, F.R.S., and Mr. E. Woods, other members of Council.

SINDH, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on Monday at the offices, Gresham-house, Old Broad-street. Mr. W. P. Andrew, the chairman, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report spoke of the very important services rendered to the company by their staff in India and recently to the public service in conveying the contingent sent from India to Karachi for despatch to Malta. More recently still, their services were of almost vital importance in transporting the troops, heavy artillery, and munitions of war to the frontier. The Government of India had been impressed with the value of those services, and they had recommended certain gentlemen to the consideration of the Secretary of State for India. For the past half-year their earnings had amounted to 3 per cent., which he regarded as very satisfactory, considering the depression of trade, the breaks of the line from inundations, and the want of through communication. The traffic on the Punjab Railway had increased, while in a still greater proportion the traffic on the Scinde Railway had decreased, making altogether on the whole system a diminution—he spoke of the goods traffic. This was owing to a very exceptional state of affairs. The grain traffic, instead of coming down to Karachi, as usual, to be shipped to Europe, had gone up towards Delhi, to feed the necessitous, but not famine-stricken districts of Oude and Rohilkund. When the through traffic was established by the line now almost completed, he looked forward to there being a great and growing traffic in wheat to England. It had already been pronounced on as of the very best quality, and the Punjab was estimated to furnish no less than 500,000 tons of wheat every year, irrespective of supplying the wants of the province. Mr. Edward Thornton, C.B., deputy-chairman, seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The sixty-fourth report of the directors, which deals with the receipts and working of the property for the half-year ended with June 30 last, has just been issued, prior to the ordinary meeting. The total length of mileage open at that date was 1,503, of which 1,279½ miles were for the main line and 223½ miles for the Jubbulpore line. On the main line 410½ miles are double and 869 miles are single rails; but the Jubbulpore line is single throughout. Including sidings, the main line has a total length of road equal to 1,977¾ miles, and the Jubbulpore line of 246¼ miles. On the main line the aggregate number of first, second, intermediate, and third class passengers who used the railway was 3,677,404, against 3,593,109 and 3,307,445 in the first half of 1877 and 1876. Exclusive of parcels, carriages, and live stock, the total tonnage of goods and minerals conveyed over the line during the half-year was 1,390,166, against 1,286,861 tons and 934,165 tons in the corresponding periods of the two preceding years. In both the carriage of passengers and goods there is thus shown a progressive and satisfactory increase, but on turning to the gross revenue there is a decrease compared with last year, but an increase compared with 1876, the total being £1,780,895, against £1,902,975 and £1,539,103 in 1877 and 1876. At the same time, the working expenses showed a reduction, the total being £585,342, against £592,175 and £514,194 in 1876. Compared with 1877, the decrease in the revenue is due to lower receipts from passengers and the carriage of merchandise and minerals, while special and miscellaneous receipts were also £32,000 less than they were a twelvemonth previously, which is due, however, in a great measure to the exceptional circumstance of the meeting of the Imperial Assembly at Delhi in January, 1877. The net earnings were £1,195,553, against £1,310,800 and £1,024,909. As regards the Jubbulpore line, the gross receipts for the half-year were £177,610, against £229,043 and £113,771 in the corresponding periods of 1877 and 1876, while the total working expenses were £79,433, £81,248, and £53,434 each, leaving the net earnings at £98,177, against £147,795 and £60,337. The total number of the four different classes of passengers who travelled over the line was 189,830, against 183,752 and 156,089, while the total tonnage of goods and minerals was 148,609, as compared with 234,179 tons and 99,352 tons in the first half of 1877 and 1876. As on the main line, the falling off in the receipts is in the case of the Jubbulpore line due to reduced revenues from passengers, merchandise, minerals, and special and miscellaneous receipts. After dividing the profits of both main and Jubbulpore lines with the Government, the company's moiety was £266,587, which is reduced by £2,500 annuity to Sir R. M. Stephenson, and by £34,842 as loss on exchange in transferring the surplus profits to this country. From the remainder, the directors recommend, in addition to the guaranteed interest, the payment of a dividend at the rate of 17½ p. 6d. on the consolidated stock, leaving about £4,000. The proceeds of the forfeited shares ordered to be sold at the general meeting held last January have enabled the board to bring up the created share capital to £26,200,000.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—An extraordinary half-yearly general meeting was held on Monday at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. J. R. Boyson, the chairman and managing director, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report, which was taken as read, said there had not been any improvement in Bombay, either commercially or financially; on the contrary, it was now in as deplorable a condition as for many years past, and the tea crop had fallen short of the estimate by about 500 maunds, while the depression at home had prejudiced the average price. The aggregate of their current loans on mortgage had been further reduced by £38,359. On the 31st of October their loans on mortgage then current amounted to £215,731, as against £254,090 on the 31st of December last. All their financial requirements had been satisfactorily provided for. After the 1st of January their debenture liability to the public, after deducting the amount held by the bank, would amount to £473,180, and it would be further reduced during the current year. They had succeeded in effecting only two sales in Bombay, which were very disappointing, but unavoidable; but it would be very satisfactory to them to learn that these two properties had realised more than the minimum values they had placed on them. Their funds in India not invested in mortgage securities had given them a return for the year of a fraction over  $6\frac{1}{4}$  per cent., which might well be considered satisfactory. Since their report was issued they had increased their holding in Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Indian Government securities by a further amount of three lakhs of rupees, making their holding in this security eight lakhs of rupees. The motion having been seconded, Mr. H. G. Bainbridge, a director, in giving the proprietors some additional information relative to the company's tea estates, said they had very unfavourable weather in Darjeeling, a blight at Cachar, and in Sylhet the character of the tea had not been good. In Assam alone their tea had been good, but the weather had affected the quantity. The most satisfactory feature of the year was the cost of production, and the crop would be laid down here at an average of 1s. 2d. per lb., and in a good, or even in an ordinary year, this would leave a very considerable margin for profit. The estimate for 1879 was 1,020,000 lb., to be produced at a cost of 1s. 1 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. per lb. Their extensions were making good progress, and in better times they hoped to reap the full reward for their work; but their position in such times as these was exceptionally strong. The report was then unanimously adopted.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—A mortgage debt of £8,500, a tolerably reliable though varying income of less than £2,000 from all sources, a necessary expenditure averaging £6,000 for the efficient maintenance of sixty-one beds, and entirely without endowment. Such is the lamentable financial position of this indispensable and most valuable hospital, the first established and the largest of its speciality in this or any other country; which, since its foundation in 1842, has afforded the requisite medical and surgical relief to upwards of 70,000 of the sick poor, and in whose crowded out-patient department are to be found daily numerous cases urgently demanding indoor treatment. Add to this the necessity of closing every now and then some of the wards against these distressed applicants and I venture to think you will agree with me that this is a case which merits the best attention of your numerous benevolent readers, which it is the object of this letter to invoke.

The Corporation of the City of London and some of the principal city companies, to whom, and to the public generally, I deemed it my duty, as the president of the hospital, to submit recently the foregoing facts, have, by their prompt liberality, aided by a largely augmented grant by the committee of distribution of the Hospital Sunday Fund, enabled the committee of management to reoccupy fifteen of the free beds which had been for some time closed for want of funds. To maintain this position is the object of my present appeal. The various sad calamities which have occurred during the past few years, abroad as well as at home, have doubtless diverted for their alleviations a considerable portion of the funds usually bestowed upon our invaluable medical charities. It is much to be hoped that the disastrous series has now closed, and that our unendowed and impoverished home institutions may recover that amount of steady support without which it is obviously impossible to deal with the vast and increasing amount of sickness and destitution in our own midst. Trusting to your courtesy to allow these few lines the advantage of your influential circulation,—I am, sir, your obliged and obedient servant,

St. Giles House, Cranborne, Dorset.

THE BURMESE PRINCES.—The Rangoon correspondent of the Times of India, writing on the 25th of November, states that the Burmese Princes who took refuge in the British Residency at Mandalay have at length arrived in safety at Rangoon. "By an agreement," he observes, "come to with the Burmese Ministers, they left Mr. Shaw's protection under a strong escort, and embarked in the Irrawaddy Steam Flotilla Company's boat, the Talifoo, commanded by Captain Gramen. They were accompanied on their trip to British territory by Mr. Davis, assistant commissioner, the hero, if I may so term it, of the Thatone tragedy. Shortly after starting the party found themselves pursued by one of the King's steamers, crowded with armed men. They fully concluded that the palace authorities had played them false, and were at length to wreak on them a vengeance delayed by British interposition. Such, however, was not the case. The armed steamer was sent merely to show them safely off the premises, as it were—that is, to conduct the possible firebrand away from any possibility of incendiarism. It should be added, however, that this same steamer afterwards endeavoured, whether ex consilio or accidentally is not shown, to run down the Talifoo; but by the skilful management of Captain Gramen the aggressor's efforts in this direction were foiled. Some damage was, however, done to one of the flats, which the youthful monarch of Alompra's line will doubtless have the satisfaction of paying for. The entire following of the fugitive Princes numbers 150 individuals, and they are now housed in the Rest House attached to the Chief Commissioner's residence here. In the late Chief Commissioner's time this building was seldom used, because Mr. Thompson had conscientious scruples about admitting any one to his hospitality, not altogether free from the trammels of parsimony. On arriving at Promé the Burmese fugitive contingent embarked in a special train, and, preceded by a pilot engine, they accomplished the distance to Rangoon in about six hours, the usual period exceeding twelve hours. Their residence is now protected by a guard of twenty men, whose orders are, not only to defend the Princes entrusted to their charge from public assault and private assassination, but also to prevent them from quitting the compound and escaping into the country, when they would prove so many foci of future disturbance and rebellion. When the shades of night fall the guard is strengthened by a body of local police, who patrol the roads, and guard more effectually that coming from Kemmin Sin, the great Burmese quarter. Since their arrival, one of the princes has been prostrated with fever, and he is said to be attended by one of the individuals styled Court Surgeon."

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,
&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price, 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s., to 16s. each, postage free.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE,
THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS. CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864. Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.
